"There," said the Premier, "I cannot agree with you. You have done much. You may be called on to do more. We cannot yet see the outcome. However, we must face the music. England as usual is going to be the first country to strip herself of wealth and possessions and throw them into the melting pot. We have done it before and failed. We talked disarmament and everyone shouted hurrah, and we were the only nation who disarmed, and when the air was full of rumors of war we were the one nation in danger. This time we go further still. We have risked, not aggression from foreigners, but we have risked the contempt and disapproval of our own people. We have to take risks, Lord Matresser. I think I can truthfully say that we are taking this time one of the biggest risks that any government has ever taken."

"I was at the lodge," Matresser said quietly, "not as a statesman, not even as a politician. I heard the man who presided over the gathering speak. So far as human judgment can go I will pin my faith on him. I have watched this thing grow, these feelings among the German people, for years. I am not over-confident but I felt I could spell out the time when the dictatorship must collapse with a mighty crash, or end in war. A better thing has happened. A man many have looked upon as a fanatic for years has turned out to be a real statesman. I believe now in Germany's sincerity. I believe that Hellstern has made a genuine sacrifice. even although he has made it knowing that the alternative was utter ruin."

"Those are just the words I hoped to hear from you, Lord Matresser," the Premier remarked, abandoning his cigar and rising to his feet. "I can see our host wants us to prepare for this evening's function. We shall meet again later on, I hope. This is a conversation I should like to carry further."

"Sorry to hurry you off, my friends," Sir Francis observed. "It is three minutes to ten and at ten o'clock, the ceremony commences. You are all habitues here, I am glad to say. Matresser stick to me, please. I have special instructions concerning you."

Matresser breathed a sigh of resignation, saying "I am at your disposition, Sir Francis."

Very much to his own surprise, Matresser himself caught some of that infectious spirit of exhilaration which was animating the array of guests who mounted the magnificent staircase of Tring House, made their bow to Sir Francis and Lady Tring, and passed on into the suites of rapidly filling rooms. He paid his respects for the second time that evening to his hostess only to find himself detained by a whisper from Sir Francis.

"Do you mind standing by for a minute or two?" the latter begged. "Anywhere behind us. It won't be for more than a few minutes."

Then came a stir, almost a thrill among the slowly mounting crowd. Those who were on their way up paused and drawing to one side, left a clear way up the carpeted stairs between the banisters and the wall. A youthful but distinguished personage passed through their midst with alert, graceful movements—a faint smile on his lips but looking neither to the right nor to the left, only towards the man and woman who stood prepared to receive him. Even after his hostess' curtsey and the ceremonial shake of the hand with Sir Francis, their royal guest lingered. The crowd behind, momentarily arrested, waited out of hearing of the trio.

"I am happy to be here," the visitor confided, "and to see so many familiar faces around me. I wonder, Sir Francis," he added with a slight twinkle in his eyes, "whether you have been so kind as to remember my request."

Tring turned and beckoned to Matresser who at once stepped forward. The royal visitor extended his hand.

"Lord Matresser needs no presentation," he said smiling. "We have not often met, it is true, but I still remember his wonderful shooting at Sandringham."

"If your Majesty will step in this direction," Tring suggested, "I have made the arrangements you desired."

It was all very easily and informally accomplished. Lady Tring received alone for a few minutes, whispering a word of apology to the thinning stream of guests. Her husband, with Matresser on the other side of the King, led the way to a small anteroom immediately inside the first reception room. It was carefully guarded by a major domo of the household and two aides-de-camp from the Palace.

"The few minutes' conversation which it is your pleasure to have with Lord Matresser, Your Majesty," he said, "can safely be held here."

"Capital!" was the cheerful reply. "If you will follow me, Matresser, I should be glad."

Sir Francis returned to his duties. The King turned with a smile to Matresser.

"You have done a great deal of very useful work for your country, Lord Matresser, without reward or recognition—the latter I understand, at your expressed wish. You have crowned your achievements in a fashion to which I shall not in detail allude, as our time is short; but I may say that I consider your handling of an exceedingly difficult problem to have been most masterly."

"I have been given to understand that you wish now to abandon your brilliantly successful series of foreign missions and to settle down upon your estates. Is that true?"

"It was in my mind, Sire," Matresser confessed.

"I shall beg you to reconsider that determination," his august vis-a-vis said earnestly. "Yours are not the type of brains to be wasted on lesser work."

CHAPTER XXXIII

"I have had no diplomatic training, Your Majesty, for the more settled posts in the international world," Matresser reminded his companion, "and I am afraid that the anonymity, which was the chief reason for my success in some of those former enterprises, is gone."

"That is exactly what I expected you to say," was the smiling response. "But is the Empire which calls for the support of such men as you, Matresser. I have marked you down for India, Matresser. That is where I think you might continue to serve your country without dropping into the backwaters....I shall not detain you longer. I must place myself in the hands of my hostess. I only wished to meet you for a few moments in private, Lord Matresser, to express to you my thanks for what you have done and my earnest hope that you will continue to serve the Empire....Shall we find Lady Tring?"

They walked side by side to the door which the aides-de-camp had been guarding. The King held out his hand.

"If we do not meet again this evening," he said, "I hope you will think over what I have said."

Matresser bowed, making suitable reply, and it was as he once more drew himself erect that the moment (for which he had been secretly hoping) arrived. He looked straight into the eyes of Elisabeth who, with her hand upon her uncle's arm, had come to a standstill only a yard or so away.

Matresser now was free to follow his own impulses. He took a single step forward and bowed.

"I am glad to meet you, Baroness," he said. "Will you be so kind as to introduce me to your uncle? I do not remember that we have met formally."

Stamler held out his hand. "My niece's introduction is scarcely necessary. It is perhaps fortunate, as she seems to have lost her tongue," he observed, smiling. "I am very happy to meet you, Lord Matresser If I say no more, I am convinced that you understand."

Matresser shook hands as Elisabeth, with a musical little laugh, recovered herself, while the Baron made an eager sign to a tall, very much beribboned diplomat who was looking wistfully in their direction.

"Could I presume so far as to leave my niece for a few minutes in your charge, Lord Matresser?" he begged. "You will excuse me, Elisabeth? Our friend there has something, I know, to say to me."

Neither felt inclined for platitudes. Their silence, however, was quite enough for Stamler who hurried away as they walked in the direction of some palms and seated themselves upon a small setee.

"So you are willing to converse," she asked smiling, "with a murderess and a spy?"

"I have met both in my life," he assured her. She looked at his medals and he laughed.

"No, there are no important decorations yet," he admitted, "but then I am only a clumsy amateur."

"And I am not a spy at all," she declared.

"I have never accused you."

"Nevertheless," she reproached him, "you refused to take me away with you from that little nest of intrigue at Matresser."

"I knew quite well," he replied, "that you were not in the slightest danger. I myself was under government orders. It was impossible for me to take you away or to let you know where I was going."

"Government orders," she repeated. "I do not understand."

"Nevertheless, I am telling you the truth," he assured her. "That plane was sent to take me to a rendezvous in the Metzer Mountains. The shooting was only an excuse."

Elisabeth looked at him in astonishment. She was more agitated than he had ever seen her. She clutched his hand.

"You must explain," she insisted. "I cannot bear any more mystery."

"Ask me anything you will," he replied.

"I know, of course, that you are an English nobleman," she said, "but will you please tell me why you were singled out for a special audience alone—you came out from that retiring room with the King—and you were treated on all sides with extraordinary consideration? What have you done in life to have earned all that?"

"Shot high pheasants with precision at Sandringham," he replied with perhaps a shade of bitterness in his tone.

She had half risen to her feet, but the touch of his fingers, slight though it was, drew her back again.

"I beg your pardon," he apologized. "That was flippant and untrue but you must remember that you have already expressed your opinion of me when I asked you once a very important question."

"Was that opinion not justified?"

"It was not justified."

Once more the curious sort of numbness seemed to pass from her expression. Once more she was alive. She was breathing quickly.

"If that were true!" she murmured.

"It is true," he assured her. "Whatever I may have been, I have not been an idler. I have no government appointment or anything of that sort but it chanced that very soon after the war, certain facts came to my knowledge while I was at a little known part of North Africa, which I passed on to the government with a few remarks of my own. Since then I have undertaken work for them—work sometimes of slight importance; sometimes of moment."

She was looking at him, her moist lips parted, her eyes fixed.

"Was it you who were in Berlin for nearly two months?"

"Yes."

"Was it you whom they sent out to Africa?"

"Yes," he admitted.

"You were at Count Helm's shooting lodge?"

"I returned from there this morning," he told her. "I flew straight from Matresser to the Lodge on the night I refused you as a passenger."

She clutched his arm convulsively; then she seemed to remember where they were and she drew a little away.

"I ought to have guessed," she groaned. "There were so many things I could not understand—von Behrling—oh, a score of them! Never could I have believed that a woman could be so foolish as I have been. If I had not seen you with the King; if I had not watched the way he was talking to you, I might never have realized. It was just because I knew that you had the capacity for so much more" she went on, "that it made me so bitterly angry when they all talked about your being Lord Lieutenant of the County and you spoke of your travels after wild animals....Ann, too, she must have known more of you, yet she accepted it so naturally. Where is Ann? Is she here by any chance?"

Matresser shook his head.

"She is spending the evening with my ex-pilot."

"Your ex-pilot?"

He nodded.

"A very charming young man," he confided, "who fetched me from Norfolk, took me over to my destination and brought me back again this morning. He insisted upon being called Pilot Number 17 but his real name is Prince Maurice von Reisensach."

She buried her face for a moment in her hands.

"Oh, I might have known. You were at the Helm shooting lodge! You were one of the seven!"

He was silent for a moment, relieved of the weight of words, sympathizing with her distress.

"Explanations are such crude things," he murmured. "I have been very fortunate because the truth has come to you by accident. It needed no effort on my part to bring you understanding ...... I wonder how long we shall be left here undisturbed."

She raised her head and listened. There was a deep hubbub of voices beyond the screen of palms.

"Listen for a moment," she begged. "It seems so strange to realize what is happening all around us, how the reverberation of tonight, this night of crisis, and the conversation of the last few days, all streaming across Europe from that gathering where you sat with the others—all that is going to make a great step in history—to the re-establishment of all that we hold dear. Am I a little hysterical, Ronald? You must forgive me."

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

Late spring frosts! The average date of the last killing frosts of spring varies from February 15 in the extreme South to as late as May 20 or even June 1 in the extreme northern portion of the United States and southeastern Canada. But killing frosts have been recorded as late as March 20 in the South and June 20 in the North. So it is seen that date of the last killing frost may depart very considerably from the average. Farmers plant some crops two weeks before the average date, and some two weeks after, while others watch the advance of the wild vegetation and plan accordingly; the Indians used to have some such rule.

Italian Soldiers to March in Franco's "Victory Parade"

By J. F SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 11—(CP Cable) — Italy has given the British government fresh assurances that Italian troops will be withdrawn from Spain within three weeks, it was reported in London tonight.

This assurance probably will strengthen the government in its intention not to denounce the Anglo-Italian treaty under which Premier Mussolini agreed not to dis-

Canterbury Meets Church Leaders In South-East Europe

Plans to Further Christian Unity On Tour to East

London, April 11—(CP-Havas) — "Diarist" of The Star said in his column today that the Archbishop of Canterbury, now cruising the Mediterranean in J. P. Morgan's yacht Corsair, "is taking another opportunity to further his aspiration of Christian unity" in conferences with leaders of other Christian churches.

"The rest prescribed for our 75-year-old Archbishop of Canterbury has had an interesting sequel at Athens," the columnist wrote. "It is only a week since Dr. Lang's departure was announced so the yacht must have gone almost directly to Greece. There the Archbishop went ashore and attended high mass in Athens (Greek Orthodox) Cathedral. After the mass he called on the Archbishop of Athens.

"Now it is revealed that he is continuing his voyage in the yacht to Istanbul where he will see the Greek patriarch.

"These visits will come as a surprise to the Church of England congregations under the impression, following the announcement of a week ago, that their Archbishop was to take 'a complete rest.'

"It is certainly unusual for the Primate to be away from his flock during the Easter celebrations. The Archbishop is without doubt taking another opportunity to further his aspiration of Christian unity."

Kingston, Ont., April 11—(CP)—The Pike Salvage Company planned today to begin breaking ice in Kingston harbor. The tug Salvage Prince was steamed up today to buck the ice which is six inches thick along the waterfront.

King Visits London To Learn International Developments

London, April 11.—(AP)— An authoritative statement tonight said the sole purpose of the King's visit to London today, breaking his Easter holiday at Windsor, was to learn of international developments at first hand.

The statement evidently was intended to put a halt to rumors His Majesty was considering cancellation of his visit to Canada.

The King returned to Windsor tonight after receiving Prime Minister Chamberlain at Buckingham Palace.

London, Apr. 11 (CP)—As Prime Minister Chamberlain left his Downing street residence today to call on King George at Buckingham Palace, The Associated Press reported "there were unconfirmed reports they might consider cancellation of their Majesties projected visit to Canada and the United States next month."

Earlier in the day it had been said that despite the seriousness of the European situation there had been no suggestion that the trip might be cancelled. Preparations were said to be continuing in the normal way.

GREEK INTEGRITY TO BE RESPECTED ITALY REPORTS

Also Reported That Italy Has Assured Britain of This Fact

ATHENS IS CALM

Athens, April 11—(AP)— Greek newspapers announced today "we are in position to assert that the Italian government gave to Greece categoric assurances" that it would respect the integrity of Greece, including the island of Corfu.

Editorial statements along this line were printed in morning newspapers as footnotes to reports from Berlin and Paris that Italy had assured Great Britain she had no intention of infringing on Greek territorial rights.

Mystery concerning British fleet movements in the Mediterranean deepened when responsible Athens sources were unable to confirm reports that British warships were

MAJOR ROGERS DIES FIRST O.P.P. SUP'T.

Toronto, Apr. 11 (CP)—Major Edwin Rogers, first superintendent of the Ontario Provincial Police Force, died at his home here today. Major Rogers retired from the force in 1923. He was 80 years old.

It was a two-man force when Sir Oliver Mowat, then Premier of Ontario, appointed Major Rogers a constable in 1884. In 1909 Major Rogers was appointed superintendent and he held the position continuously until his retirement.

Italians Assail 'Encirclement', Hear Reports About Corfu Island

Rome, April 11—(AP)—The Fascist press declared today that Italian assurances to Greece of her safety from any Italian aggression were implied in an official announcement of the Athen's government itself.

Newspapers cited a government statement broadcast in Greece yesterday which said Premier John Metaxas' regime was in position "to give the Greek people assurances that Greek independence and integrity are fully secured."

Italians added that they could only laugh at the suggestion that the Greek government meant Great Britain had guaranteed Greece's independence.

Attacks on Britain And France

The press accused Britain and France of new plans to encircle the axis powers and cited reports that Britain might fortify the Greek island of Corfu.

"Encirclement of Germany and Italy is the immediate aim" of the big democracies, Il Messaggero said in commenting on London newspaper reports that Prime Minister Chamberlain would offer Greece and Turkey pacts guaranteeing their protection.

Declaring Italy's occupation of Albania was only an excuse to hasten the plan, Il Messaggero said Britain's guarantee to Greece would include the provision for a British naval base at Corfu.

Il Popolo Di Roma said the scheme to encircle Germany with anti-aggression alliances having failed, the democracies hoped the "Albanian episode will be a good excuse to revive it on a larger scale against the reprobates of the axis."

Occupation as Warning

Some foreign observers regarded such comment as a confirmation of their belief that Italy had occupied Albania as a warning to Greece against letting Britain establish a naval base on the key island of Corfu. There Britain could largely dominate the strait of Otranto connecting the Mediterranean with the Adriatic.

Meanwhile, with authoritative reports showing Italy has nearly 1,000,000 men under arms scattered from Spain to Libya and the Dodecanese islands in the eastern Mediterranean, Prime Mussolini's Il Popolo D'Italia at Milan said the total of Italian soldiers participating in the Albanian campaign was 32,000.

GREECE, TURKEY VITAL TO SAFETY EMPIRE ROUTES

Dardanelles Only Waterway to Great Black Sea

TREMENDOUS ASSET

Turkey and Greece Lean Heavily Towards Britain

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer

New York, April 11—(AP)—Great Britain's reported decision to guarantee that Turkey and Greece won't lose their independence in the German-Italian expansion drive gives a clear picture of the fundamental cause of the present critical stage of the clash between the European dictatorships and democracies.

Such a guarantee indicates that Great Britain and France consider the security of their empires is threatened by the activities of the Rome-Berlin axis.

The committee for imperial defence sitting in London is said to have decided unanimously that Turkey and Greece are vital to the safety of the Anglo-French imperial routes in the Mediterranean.

Control of East Mediterranean

This means that he who dominates these two Balkan states controls the eastern end of the Mediterranean and the countries surrounding it.

It means that he controls the Dardanelles Straits, which provide the only water route to the great Black Sea that washes shores of Turkey, Russia, Bulgaria and Rumania—a tremendous asset in event of war.

It means that he could threaten the Suez Canal—gateway to British and French possessions in the Orient.

Holland's Neutrality To be Maintained

Premier Colijin in Broadcast Explains Calling of Troops for Duty

Amsterdam, Apr. 11 (CP)—Holland is determined to maintain her neutrality "in all circumstances", Premier Hendrik Colijin said in a broadcast to the nation today. That was the sole reason, he said, for a royal decree yesterday calling up border troops for military duty.

"There is no reason whatever for uneasiness," he said.

Holland intends to defend her independence and neutrality "not only by words but deeds", the premier asserted.

The frontiers must be guarded "in order to safeguard any eventual mobilization should that become necessary," he added.

"Each time tension takes on an acute character the government is placed before the question of what to do. Consequently it was found necessary to take steps of a permanent nature which are steps of transition for a certain period, in order that mobilization can be carried out in calmness.

"We wish to maintain our independence toward all. The more calmly we consider the situation the better it will be for us and for the impression made abroad. The fate of Holland lies not in the hands of men but in those of God."

QUEEN MARY IS FOND OF THEATRE

Witnessed Seventeen Plays in Thirty Theatrical Days

London, Apr. 11 (CP) — Queen Mary has established what is believed to be a record—outside professional critical circles—for theatre attendance.

In five weeks—30 theatrical working days—she saw seventeen plays, an average of more than one every two nights. Included in her seventeen attendances was her second visit to Dodie Smith's "Dear Octopus" at the Queen's Theatre.

The second time she took her brother, the Earl of Athlone, and Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone. She told Harold Goslin, manager of the theatre, she had enjoyed the play so much last November that she wanted her brother to see it.

Thinks Prem. King Should Stay at Ottawa During Royal Visit

Regina, April 11—(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who is to accompany King George and Queen Elizabeth across Canada on their tour this spring, "ought to stay in Ottawa and attend to the business of the country and allow the Governor-General to accompany the King," M. J. Coldwell, national chairman of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation and C. C. F. member of parliament for Rosetown-Biggar, said yesterday in an interview.

Mr. Coldwell foresaw a federal election this year.

"I think one reason the government is anxious to close parliament is that the Prime Minister is to travel with the King and is in the hope that his government will be returned, profiting by the patriotic fervor so generated by the royal visit and offsetting some of the gloomy prospects now facing Liberals."

WIFE OF JUDGE GIVEN 3 MONTHS

New York, April 11—(AP)—Mrs. Elma N. Lauer, wife of Judge Edgar A. Lauer of the New York Supreme Court, was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $2,500 today on her plea of guilty to a four count indictment charging her with conspiracy and smuggling.

Mrs. Lauer was accompanied by a physician and a nurse when she appeared before Federal Judge Vincent Leibell.

The government asked a jail term for Mrs. Lauer because she was termed a second offender. In the fall of 1937, Justice Lauer settled for $10,400 claims against his wife for undeclared jewelry she brought into the United States.

Mrs. Lauer's appearance today followed charges she had smuggled clothing into this country from Paris last year.

'OFFER IMMORAL' SAYS NEWSPAPER

German Press Discusses Situation in Balkan Area

Berlin, April 11—(AP)— Chancellor Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, told Greece and Yugoslavia today that "they could come in danger only if they let themselves be misused" by Great Britain and France.

Voelkischer Beobachter led the press attack which ended a two-day holiday truce in which Germans for the most part had been unaware of the intense diplomatic activity in other European capitals following Italy's occupation of Albania.

(Britain and France were reported last night to have tendered guarantees of Greek and Turkish independence against possible Italian-German aggression. No such offer has been reported yet in the case of Yugoslavia.)

Non-Aggression Pacts

"We do not doubt that Athens will reject this immoral offer of the western European seducers," Hitler's newspaper said, "and will remain as cold-blooded as Belgrade (Yugoslavia.)"

The newspaper added "both countries are in possession of unequivocal declarations (of non-aggression) from Italy—just like

Wife Discovered Lying on Blazing Mattress

It is Believed Her Nightgown Caught Fire as She Investigated

Seaforth, Ont., Apr. 11 (CP) — Found by her husband early today lying on a blazing mattress in an upper room of their small cottage, Mrs. Andrew Montgomery, 30, was rushed to hospital here and died three hours later. Her body was covered with burns.

Mother of six children, Mrs. Montgomery had retired in a downstairs room. During the night her husband thought he heard a noise in an unused upper room and rushing there found his wife, lying on a burning mattress. The small room, used as a storeroom was littered with papers which were burning. Montgomery beat out the fire and called a doctor.

It is thought Mrs. Montgomery awakened during the night and heard the fire. When she investigated it her nightgown is believed to have caught fire. Coroner Dr. F. J. Burrows, Seaforth, has ordered an inquest.

GAYDA DENIES ANY INTENTION AGAINST GREECE

Italy Would Regard Use of Greek Port by British Navy as Hostile Act

SPANISH SITUATION

Rome, April 11—(AP)—The authoritative Fascist spokesman Virginio Gayda said today that Italy would consider as a hostile act the use of a Greek port by the British navy.

His statement, in Il Giornale D'Italia, was made in a denial that the Italian army's occupation of Albania was a threat to the safety of Greece or meant an attempt to gain territory in the Balkans.

It came as the Fascist press declared that Italian assurances to Greece of her safety from any Italian aggression were implied in an official announcement of the Athens government.

A Turin newspaper, La Gazzetta Del Popolo, reported General Franco's Spanish army of 1,000,000 men, "of whom half are Falangistas (Spanish Fascists)", would remain

RUMANIA ACCEPTS

British Offer of Anglo-Rumanian Defence Pact Similar to One Given to Poland

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 11—(CP Cable) — Anglo-Russian consultations were resumed today between Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, and Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador, as a prelude to a special meeting of the inner cabinet to discuss the latest reports of German troop concentrations and of Italian moves in the Balkans.

The King cut short his Easter holiday at Windsor to return to London this afternoon. He planned to see Prime Minister Chamberlain immediately upon his arrival at Buckingham Palace.

The Russian Ambassador called at the foreign office and after he left Lord Halifax walked across to 10 Downing Street for a special conference with Prime Minister Chamberlain.

The inner cabinet—Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Halifax, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary—met while reports continued that Britain would offer military guarantees to Greece and Turkey along the same lines as the Anglo-Polish pact.

Troop Concentrations

Meanwhile London was deluged by reports of troop concentrations, particularly by Germany along the Polish Corridor, and by Italy in Libya.

The cabinet will meet Thursday before the emergency sitting of parliament.

Despite the seriousness of the European situation and the possibility of a general war there has been no suggestion so far of cancelling the King's trip to Canada. Preparations are continuing in the normal way, without consideration being given to Europe.

There has been no official declaration of British policy but it is reported in some quarters that an announcement of guarantees to Greece and Turkey may be delayed some days.

According to these reports Britain will attempt in the meantime to obtain from Italy a pledge not to change the status quo in the Mediterranean any further. This might make it possible to establish the framework of a larger regional pact of mutual assistance to guarantee the whole area.

2 Children Fall Over 50 Foot Cliff To Don's Edge

Toronto, Apr. 11 (CP)—Rosalie Hutchinson, 12, and her seven-year-old brother, Donald, were treated at Hospital today for injuries suffered when they fell over a 50-foot cliff to the edge of the Don River.

The children were returning from an all-day hike yesterday when Donald fell over the cliff and rolled down to the river-edge. Leaning over as her brother cried for help, Rosalie slipped in soft mud and tumbled down. A companion, Helen Weller, 11, grabbed the girl's hand but could not keep her grip.

An unidentified rabbit hunter helped the children to the top of the bank.

Women's Hat Manufacturer Thinks Present Styles Nutty

St. Louis, Apr. 11 AP)—You've probably already noticed—women's hats have become even more peculiar this spring.

That's the consensus of most men, and hat manufacturer Jack Page agrees. Let him relate a few of his worries:

"Sale gone up? I should say not!

"Even the retailers don't like them.

"Just try selling these hats in small towns.

"—after 37 years in the millinery business—

"One customer writes: 'They're hardest to wear and most difficult to sell. We've come to the conclusion that if we cannot offer some sensible hats we would rather not wear ourselves out trying to sell them and lose money too'."

International Briefs

London, April 11—(CP-Cable)—The battle cruiser Repulse, on cruise prior to being assigned to the special duty of taking the King and Queen to Canada next month, remained at Gibraltar today, causing speculation she was being held there to strengthen the Mediterranean Fleet in view of the international situation.

The Admiralty, while declaring she was in fighting trim, refused comment on this suggestion.

The News Chronicle declared that although the warship does not belong to the Mediterranean Fleet she has been stationed there temporarily.

Hong Kong, April 11—(AP)—Fourteen hundred Japanese soldiers were reported today to have landed on Namtau Peninsula, one mile from Hong Kong territorial waters. They marched inland, it was said, apparently toward the no-man's-land immediately north of this British crown colony.

2. To prepare the French navy to cooperate fully with the British admiralty on any naval measures taken in the eastern Mediterranean to back up eastern European allies of France and Great Britain.

FEW WEEKS NEEDED TO COMPLETE WORK OF REASSESSMENT

With only Baldwin Ward and other scattered sections of the city to complete, canvassers engaged in filling in questionnaires in connection with the city's reassessment estimated today that two or three more weeks will be necessary to complete the job. When all data has been completed the forms will be finally examined by the Citizens' Research Bureau which Bureau has been entrusted with the complete work of reassessment.

BACKFIRING MOTOR SOUNDS LIKE BOMB TO JITTERY GIRL

The present war scare and threats of bombardment of cities from the sky has left local citizens jittery, even if they do not reside near the seat of expected hostilities. Lessons on quick ducking and dodging in the case of trouble have apparently been well impressed on the minds of the younger generation.

This morning as pedestrians plowed through the soft slush on Front Street a sudden lull was noted in the activity of the street.

A car proceeded down the main street, turned slowly off the avenue to MacAnnany Street.

Suddenly there was a loud explosion, a noise like exploding cannon. A smartly dressed young lady ducked, covered her eyes with one arm, and dodged into the safety of a nearby doorway from which she carefully surveyed the scene.

"I thought it was a bomb", she gasped to a friend who had observed her sudden fright.

YOUTHS SALVAGE WOOD DEBRIS FROM RIVER

Heavy timbers, planks and other wood debris carried downstream by the swollen currents of the Moira River during the spring break-up are being salvaged this week from among the ice floes of the river's mouth south of the car bridge this week by youths rowing perilously in the still heavy currents through the open channels. Several boat loads of the wood have been salvaged and heavier timbers marked for future recovery. Early last season one enterprising youth equipped with oversized skis negotiated the thin ice to engage in the salvage.

R.C.A.F. MEMBERS INJURED IN CRASH

Two members of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, narrowly escaped serious injury when the automobile in which they were riding skidded on Highway No. 2 in the vicinity of Jones Creek late last night and rolled over into the ditch. The vehicle was badly damaged and it was necessary to tow it to a local garage, the mechanical parts failing to function after the crack up. Preliminary investigations by Motorcycle Patrolman H. Caldwell, Trenton, revealed the vehicle was owned by a man named Sanders, of the R.C.A.F. The passengers were badly shaken up but were able to procure transportation to their unit after the vehicle had been removed. The heavy slushy snow is attributed the primary factor causing the vehicle to go into a skid and out of control, it was announced.

SYRUP VENDOR FINDS HIGHER PRICES SLOW UP SALES

A lone vendor of maple syrup on the city market today took matters in his own hands, and apparently believing in the business adage that lack of merchandise results in higher prices, shot the cost of the sweet delicacy to $2.25 per gallon. Quart prices were advertised at sixty cents by the enterprising one, but business was slack and at a late hour the quotations dropped back to week-end levels.

SNOW WILL HELP TO DRAW OUT FROST

While the three-inch depth of what sugar-bush owners call "sapsnow" brought back a realistic touch of winter to the city and district, it will do at least some good, with over twelve inches of frost said to be in the ground beneath a five or six inch level, the snow will greatly aid in drawing it out.

Upwards of this amount of frost was reported to be in the ground last week, by officials of the Belleville Cemetery.

'PUNCH AND JUDY' PRESENTATION BY THE ROTARY CLUB

Feature of Children's Day Program — Magic, Music and Merriment at Annual Frolic

Punch and Judy, magic, and much music featured the program of the annual Children's Day of Belleville Rotary Club held Monday in the Hotel Quinte. The attendance was large, featured by sixty-two children who thoroughly enjoyed themselves and furnished pleasure for the grown-ups who came with them. President Mac Haig presided for the first part of the program, passing the gavel on to Joe Shortt, Chairman of Rotary Boys' Work Committee, who conducted the program.

Rotary congratulations were extended to Rotarian Grant Proctor on the occasion of his birthday.

Guests present, besides the young folks, were Donald McQuarrie, President of Lindsay Rotary Club; Stan Hagerman, Belleville; Rotarians John McNabb, Jim Reddick, Clare Northey, Claude Graham, Trenton; Gordon Robertson, Belleville; J. Bert Ives, Toronto.

Jim Bennett was introduced as the Baby Member.

Chocolate Easter eggs and chocolate bars were passed around as favors and met cordial reception.

Under direction of Joe Shortt a very entertaining program was presented, the big feature being a Punch and Judy show, in the real old-fashioned style, with the modern innovation of Punch holding conversations with the children in the audience. This was put on by Robert Clarke, of Toronto, in pleasing manner. Mr. Clarke also introduced various feats of magic which mystified and delighted the audience. Other program numbers well presented and enthusiastically received included: Inez Forester and Ruth Hagerman, tap dance, accompanist, Miss Leenan; Mary Alice Rogers, vocal numbers; Ruth Hicks, tap dance with song; Walter Taylor Bonnie Gerow, Doug Reddick, instrumental musical trio.

Present War Scare Affects Business Of Manufacturers

Whether the present weather or war occupies the greater attention of citizens in their daily conversations on the street is hard to determine. Belleville, however, is experiencing a distinct war scare, the same as other cities and towns through the country, and business has been not too good among the larger manufacturers on this account, it was stated by one representative of big business in Belleville this morning.

"Manufacturers have been hard hit lately by war talk, and business has been adversely affected. Lots of the manufacturers have been holding off in the matter of ordering stock and supplies, and this has affected many lines of industry greatly. We, the most of us, are all at sea. We don't know what to expect within the next few months, and naturally are not going to stock up on something for which there will be no demand, and which might cause a change in plans if war does break out in Europe. All that we can hope is that something definite will be decided soon," said the manufacturer.

Kinsmen Annual Easter Ball is Enjoyable Affair

Post-Lenten social activities were officially ushered in last night when officers and members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club entertained approximately three hundred guests at their Annual Easter Ball held in the New Trianon Ballroom.

The fine rhythms of Bud Haines Commodores that featured the "Swing Trio" were greatly enjoyed by the large crowd until a late hour when delicious refreshments were served by members of the club.

Kinsmen colors afforded an attractive decorative scheme that was enhanced by the pretty gowns of the ladies. An added attraction was a vocal solo by Kinsmen Don Roe, whose fine voice was heard to advantage in a popular number. Paper hats, horns and other noise-making apparatus added to the general enjoyment.

Officials of the club expressed appreciation of the fine response by the dancing public to their annual function, the proceeds of which will be placed in their social service fund.

A Casual Remark Aids Ottawa Girl to Locate Her Mother

A chance expression, uttered in a matter-of-fact way was instrumental in re-uniting a mother and daughter here this morning.

"I am looking for my mother," pretty Ellen Campbell, seventeen-year-old Ottawa miss told officials of the Employment Service after she had registered and made formal application for a job.

Further inquiry revealed the fact that Miss Campbell's mother had left her Ottawa home for Belleville, and had since written her daughter giving her address as "General Delivery" this city.

Upon receipt of the letter, the daughter immediately gave up a position she held in Ottawa and left for Belleville, without answering her mother's missive. She searched all day Saturday and Sunday, but no trace of her mother was found.

"There was a Mrs. Campbell in here a few minutes ago," an official told the young lady," would she be any relation?" A description of the Mrs. Campbell was answered with a cry of joy and delight on the part of the young lady without the formality of a 'thank you' she dashed out of the office to the address given her by officials.

A few minutes later, her mother walked in the office, and being told of what had happened likewise left in a hurry to see the daughter who had followed her here in search of employment.

RECORD SNOWFALL AT KITCHENER

Over Foot of Snow Makes Roads Slippery and Slushy

(By The Canadian Press)

Ontario today had what she hoped would be the last testament of a dying winter. A general snowstorm started yesterday afternoon and continued until early today.

Soft, wet snow made things unpleasant for pedestrians, blocked some rural roads and prevented many city motorists from using their cars.

Fair and cold was the weatherman's prediction for today. Temperatures generally were just around freezing with the prospect they would go lower tonight. Skies were dull with soft snow and rain falling in some areas.
fall of a foot. Previous record for continuous fall here was ten inches. Previous April record was six inches in 1926.

"Unusual for this time of year" Ottawa reported after a three-inch snowfall, bringing the season's fall to 92 inches, slightly above normal.

In the Niagara Peninsula there was rain and snow, St. Catharines reporting half an inch of the former with the temperature around freezing.

Brantford had rain and snow. Spring's delayed arrival has hindered farmers from getting to work on the land, Brantford said.

In the Galt area nasty driving conditions were reported. Rain fell first and was followed by seven inches of snow. Then the temperature dropped and roads became crusted with sleet.

VICTORIA LADIES' AID

On Wednesday evening, March, 29th, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Fox were at home to the Ladies' Aid families for a social evening. The business meeting, with the President, Mrs. Cunningham, in the chair was opened by singing a hymn and the Lord's Prayer. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Audra Brickman. Dues were paid by Mrs. Catheral, Mrs. G. Waterhouse and Miss Irma Bonter. The flower committee reported having sent a plant to Mrs. Hennesay. It was planned to have a bacon and egg supper at the Church and to have both a bazaar and fish pond. The Aid members to donate articles for each.

A bean guessing contest was held with Harmon Montgomery winning the prize—a picture donated by Mrs. Fox. The remainder of the evening was spent in games and contests after which a delicious lunch was served. Mrs. C. Vancleaf won the lunch prize—a box of candy. Proceeds of the evening $7.00. A hearty vote of thanks was extended Mr. and Mrs. Fox and Gerald for the very pleasant evening all had enjoyed.

Veteran Relates War Experience

Oldest veteran of the Great War at the annual Vimy dinner of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Legion, on Saturday evening was ex-Sergeant Daniel O'Connell now of Indian River, a former school teacher in Belleville district, who enlisted in the 155th Battalion at Marmora, at the age of 60. One of the oldest men in the Canadian Army at that time, he gave his age as 42.

"I joined up because I thought my country would need me as well as every other able-bodied man, and if I thought they needed me tomorrow, I wouldn't hesitate about going", he told friends at the Saturday night dinner.

After joining the 155th at Marmora ex-Sergeant O'Connell was later transferred to the Mercantile Marine Corps. Ships on which he served were torpedoed four times. He served until November, 1917, when he was struck by part of a shell when his ship was blown up in Dunkirk Harbor in France. All the crew between decks were killed except him, and he lost the sight of his left eye when a splinter struck him. He was sent to the Royal Infirmary at Edinburgh, Scotland and the eye was removed. In 1919 he returned to Canada and has since been on pension.

Daniel O'Connell came first to Canada from Ireland in 1882 after graduating in arts from Mynouth College, Dublin. He started to teach school at a salary of $200 per year. For twenty years he taught schools in Toronto, Belleville, Napanee and other sections of this district.

SCRAP LADEN SHIP SINKS OFF COAST

Crashing into the treacherous rocks of the Quillayute Needles off La Push, Wash., the British freighter Temple Bar sailed to her doom with a cargo of scrap iron for Japan. The Temple Bar was on her way to Comox, B.C., to refuel before proceeding to Yokohoma. Her crew of 36 went over the side in two lifeboats and were rescued.

POLICE COURT

Today's session of police court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., came to an abrupt end when it was discovered no court stenographer was available this morning. One witness had testified in an assault case when the court reporter was summoned to appear for an examination for discovery at the Court House.

Charges of assault were read against Peter and Ted Lambros, the charges arising out of altercations which occurred outside the Guild restaurant. Peter Lambros pleaded not guilty through his counsel, Mr. Frank Cushing. Subsequently the court reporter was called away, which prompted His Worship to enlarge the case until Friday.

Prior to the opening of court Clerk Chief Kidd was forced to request those not directly interested in the morning's proceedings kindly vacate the seats in favour of the larger number of witnesses, who were standing in the hallways.

Three local youths appeared charged with disorderly conduct and the use of obscene language on Front Street. Pleas of guilty were accepted in each case and the accused lads were fined one dollar and $4.50 costs each.

"I believe the officers found evidence of hilariousness, due to mild drinking," announced Crown Attorney B C. Donnan K.C. in summing up the cases.

Two confessed inebriates enriched the city's coffers somewhat upon the payment of ten dollars and costs, amounting to $16.35 in all.

Police Blotter

Following the pilfering of some $25.00 worth of groceries from a truck parked on North Park St., on Saturday night, city police today reported the recovery of all of the groceries, with the exception of one roast of meat. Yesterday Mrs. W E. Kilpatrick, 150 East Moira St., found a quantity of the stolen loot, cached on East Moira Street. The groceries recovered by Mrs. Kilpatrick included several parcels including children's Easter packages of chocolate bunnies and Easter eggs, which were meant to gladden the hearts of local kiddies before being stolen. Police have two local youths charged with the theft.

W. G. Downs, Toronto, parked his automobile on the public parking lot immediately south of the Post Office last night. This morning he returned to find a valuable spot light, the fog penetrating type had been removed from the front of the vehicle.

Last night's heavy fall of snow proved hazardous to the general flow of transients travelling judging from the increased number seeking shelter at the police station last night when 27 weary and wet hoboes applied for warm and dry sleeping quarters in the cell block.

Shannonville

Shannonville—A very delightful affair occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mark on Saturday night when the Shannonville Women's Guild and members of the Trinity Church Congregation were hosts to the Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Pepper previous to their departure to Tweed where Mr. Pepper will begin his new duties this coming Sunday.

The evening was spent with the playing of games, social discourse, and community singing and all in all a delightful evening was spent by everyone. At the social hour a delicious lunch was served which was furnished by the losing team in the recent "Penny" contest to whom considerable credit is due for their delicious lunch. During the course of the evening presentations were made to both Mr. and Mrs. Pepper. On behalf of the Women's Guild Mrs. Herbert Houston presented Mrs. Pepper with a beautiful rug and on behalf of the congregation, Mr. John Craig, Church Warden, presented Mr. Pepper with a purse of money. When presenting Mrs. Pepper with her present a presentation address was read by Mrs. Houston and Mr. Craig addressed a few appropriate words to Mr. Pepper when presenting him with the purse of money. Both Mr. and Mrs. Pepper in their customarily charming manner replied to the addresses in which they thanked their many friends for their kind words during the past few days and also expressed their keen praise to the congregation for their co-operation during their sojourn in the village.

The address as read by Mrs. Houston.

Dear Mrs. Pepper:

It was with feelings of regret that we learned of your departure, but we know that which is our loss is someone else's gain.

You have been a patient and understanding member, and co-worker during your stay among us, and your sweet smile will soon win you many friends in your new field of endeavour.

We are truly going to miss you and we wish you to take this little token along as a reminder of the time spent among us.

Our best wishes follow you and may God bless the wishes of the members of the Women's Guild of the Trinity Church.

Signed, Mrs. Harriett Toppings, Mrs. Herbert Houston.

Entertain Friends

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Burtt entertained a few of their friends on Friday evening. The evening was spent in playing games, dancing and social discourse. At the social hour a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Burtt. The music for the dancing was furnished by the Messrs Jim Robson, Blake Cook, and Carm Spencer Jr.

Delightful Gathering

On Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. William Houston were hosts to a few members of the younger set of the village. The evening was spent in dancing, games and other delightful modes of entertainment. At the social hour a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Houston.

Easter Celebrated

With the snow acting as a silent reminder that old man winter was still peeking around the corner, local lads and lassies had their first opportunity to wear their new Easter apparel on Sunday when a bright sun and ideal weather from every standpoint greeted the holidayers. Friday and Saturday were however far from pleasant.

Miss Vera Smith, Frank Smith and Clare Smith motored to Kingston on Saturday.

Local gasoline station proprietors who have been suffering from a lack of business throughout the winter months enjoyed a very brisk business over the holiday weekend.

The Rev. A. E. Pepper conducted his farewell service in the Trinity Church on Sunday afternoon at which a very large congregation was in attendance. The name of the new minister has not as yet been ascertained.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Swan of Hamilton spent the week end with her sister Mrs. J. R. MacDonald.

Mr. Gordon Castleman of Ottawa spent the holiday with Mrs. Castleman and Gail.

The many friends of Mrs. Jack Rosevear (nee Miss Daisie MacDonald) are sorry to hear of the serious accident in which she was badly injured. Mrs. Rosevear is confined to Belleville General Hospital. Mr. Rosevear was also injured. They were motoring with friends from their home in Toronto to spend the Easter holidays with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Dan MacDonald.

Pepper held before his departure for his new parish at Tweed.

FASCISM CROSSES ADRIATIC

Italy crossed the Rubicon when she went into Albania. Julius Caesar crossed his Rubicon nearly two thousand years ago to fight Pompey the Great, a civil war followed, Pompey lost his life and Caesar was dictator in splendid isolation. But there was opposition and he was stabbed for liberty's sake The insurgent group of Cassius and Brutus was defeated and ancient Rome seemed to settle down but it came into the hands of a new dictator or emperor Augustus at last After Augustus ancient Rome felt the breaking of ties, some barbarians became emperors and the next few centuries of Rome were a story of disintegration. Italy was never so powerful as in the days of the republic before the emperors.

Modern Italy's reward in crossing her Rubicon will be, what? A gift from Hitler — assurance of aid while Italy helps Germany?

It seems she has cast her decision to go the way with the German Fuehrer. The halt of the German drive in the Baltic area by the anti-German bloc gave Italy her chance to make a move — pleasing to German imperialism. So the Italy which had attacked the indefensible Ethiopians and seized their territory, attacked the weak Albanians. But Albania is important territory. It appears to be the key to the East Mediterranean and the other Balkan states.

Talk has it that Franco has taken a decision about what nationalist Spain requires along the Mediterranean with a hint that Spain may think herself justified in demanding Gibraltar. Such a demand would probably be no other but the fine Italian hand, grasping for power and control of the Italian lake or the Mediterranean Sea.

Is Italian ambition as German ambition is reputed to be — to build up a gigantic empire within a space of a few years? No lasting empire was built that way. Empire-builders in the past have consolidated their empires slowly. Then too history knows little worse than the ruthlessness with which the totalitarian states are moving. Besides it must be remembered that ancient Rome conquered and built up an empire largely of barbarian peoples, though some fine civilizations like the Greek and the Egyptian fell to Rome. Still in the main the Roman empire was made up of provinces whose civilization had not advanced as fast as that of Rome. Today Rome and Berlin if they go on to carve out gigantic empires deal particularly with a civilized world, a world which knows something better than German or Italian deals, at least those ideals which are expressed in domination and crushing of liberty. An empire rapidly built will fall rapidly. Bismarck's German empire bit the dust in 1918 less than fifty years after Germany became imperialistic. The great empires built up by Genghis Khan and other conquerors went to wreck in brief spaces of time.

LOSS TO AUSTRALIA AND EMPIRE

The late Prime Minister Lyons of Australia is praised throughout the Empire and without its bounds for his great qualities as a statesman. His death is called a loss to the Commonwealth of Australia and to the entire British Empire. He is called by many the founder of modern Australia. Under his government the country became a material and spiritual unit.

He was the son of an Irish emigrant, went to work at the age of nine until means for his education was found. He studied at the University of Tasmania and became a school teacher. Taking a lead in this profession, he turned to politics, somehow feeling an instinctive attraction to public life. He started as a Labor member in Tasmania and in the financial crisis he found his way into the Dominion politics. He was called into the Scullian cabinet. It looked as if Australia would go the way of inflation but Lyons opposed this policy. He resigned, campaigned for a united Australia, united all the anti-extremist forces and in 1931 he and his United Australian party came into power.

He stood the test of the crisis. He handled the situation, created when the New South Wales Government defaulted in interest payments and introduced revolutionary legislation. This his government disallowed and took the heroic measure of seizing the taxation revenues of New South Wales to satisfy debt defaults, the Montreal Gazette points out. The Premier of New South Wales was dismissed from office by the State Government. The Gazette says "It was by sane federal legislation, economical administration in every branch of the public service and considerate treatment of the states that Premier Lyons after rescuing New South Wales from financial disaster and worse, beat the depression." It is the popular view that he was the savior of New South Wales and the Commonwealth.

When he was taunted with having left his old party, he replied that he would a thousand times rather desert his party than his country and his conscience. He brought chaos out of national discord and inspired a sound federal sentiment at home and strengthened the ties of Australia with the empire.

He was one who possessed the great gift of leadership, so that in her crisis he was able to render unparalelled service to his country and to the British Commonwealth.

A MOUNTAIN IS MY ALTAR

A mountain is my altar; my temple is the sky,
And none has ever worshiped more ardently than I;
Worshiped the peace of hilltops and blue-green shining miles,
With the ridges sharply billowed and the canyoned redwood aisles.

Within that vast cathedral whose organ is the breeze,
There is no need for praying with solemn litanies,
For all the cliffs and valleys, the woods and gnarled old domes
Join in a prayer of gladness wherever the vision roams.

Strangely, like shadows drifting, the peaks and cloud-land fuse,
I am part of the timeless ranges, of the crags and the streams; and lose
The oneness of self and of passion to merge with a greater One
That embraces the gorges and summits, the groves and the rivers and sun.

—Stanton A. Coblentz in New York Times.

AS THE TIME APPROACHES for the visit to Canada of the King and Queen Canadian newspapers should get together on the accepted style for referring to Their Majesties in print. Some newspapers in referring to the royal visitors keep them "down" as king and queen — most newspapers capitalize the words, as, King, Queen, and we think that style looks the more respectful. Keeping the words "down" with lower case letters as king and queen looks neither respectful nor correct from this typewriter viewpoint, but perhaps we are prejudiced. Old hand set compositors always favored a "down" style because of the frequency of running short of capital letters — there being plenty of lower case letters but few capitals. Let's greet Their Majesties with Capital Letters — K and Q — all in favor — reponents no — the Capitals have it.

PAINT UP, CLEAN UP — Just as soon as the weather condescends to assume a more friendly attitude, warm up to its job as it were, the annual paint up and clean up campaign should get under way — earlier this year because of the impending visit of Their Majesties. Gosh all hemlock, we want to feel clean and tidy whether Their Majesties look our way or not.

PUNCH AND JUDY ARE HERE AGAIN—same old Punch and Judy show with the same cast N'everything — except the Devil, who has been withdrawn from the cast by request of the society for Suppression of all Devils, and everything else not nice for children's eyes. The Devil has been supplanted by some kind of a hybrid animal, a cross between a duck and an alligator. Such was the modern Punch and Judy show presented at the Belleville Rotary Club Children's Day. Children there from six to sixty enjoyed the show, but it seemed that the old enthusiasm of our youth was absent. The children took the show quite calmly like the sophisticated playgoers they are in this day and age.

WOMEN WILL WEAR SUSPENDERS THIS YEAR, says a Fashion Note. Looks like its all up with the sterner sex, for the women will certainly wear not only the trousers now but the coat and vest — why else should she want suspenders? While the women deny that there is anything sinister behind the suspenders the men are fearful, remembering the peaceful assurances of Hitler and Mussolini which always precede a big putsch which shakes the stock markets of the world down to the lower brackets. With suspenders for women waving gaily in the breeze, men are fearful of the last ditch for them. Cheer up brothers, the worst is yet to come.

Short Takes From the Newsroom

VIVID REPORTING as it is done for the White Bear ((Minn.) Press:

Red Hot Mama on Rampage

Ruby White got a good sized jag on last Thursday night and proceeded to make Rome howl. She strode up and down the streets and offered a profuse and choice line of profanity and vulgarity which even made Policeman Frank Swanson blush. Just as she blew the roof off the town and was painting a pink tinge on the sky—Frank Swanson gathered her in and placed her in the City Home for Wild Women. Mrs. Flater, jail matron, was then in charge of her. She tore up the bed clothes and was going to hang herself, when she changed her mind and didn't.

The next morning the roof was back on the town, the sky had taken on a dark drab and the whole world was wrong. A visit to the court of Judge Getty cost $16.50 and stuff was off until the next time—seems if.

FRANK GUESS, of the Rock Hill (S. C.) Herald, called the Charlotte, N. C., Associated Press to turn in a story.

"Who is this speaking?" asked the AP.

"Guess," replied Guess.

"Guess h—!" roared the busy AP man. "I'm paying for this call. Quit playing and tell me your name!"

ADD TO THE "DUMB CUBS" yarns this one on the youngster who was sent to cover the police station for the Wichita Eagle while the regular police reporter was elsewhere. A prisoner was found hanging—but alive—by his belt in a cell.

The excited cub called the city editor who, wise to the ways of a police station, in turn called the captain of detectives. "He's a hophead only trying to get sent to the hospital for a shot of dope" the chief sleuth said. The city desk told cub reporter to "play it down."

He did. His lead came over "So and so slightly attempted to commit suicide——"

DOWN IN Newport, Tenn., they stand for no funny business from their school teachers. The Newport Times the other day carried a front page story on new rules promulgated for the teachers, who had to sign agreements before they were re-elected.

Here is a paragraph from the Times' story:

"The lady teachers signed: I agree to discharge when proved guilty of pregnancy, visiting road houses, drinking or smoking in public."

YEARS AGO, the boys in the news room of a Georgia newspaper were thunderstruck upon receiving the first take of a yarn from a reporter on an out-of-town assignment.

"In the beginning God created ...." it began. More, and more, and more of the Chapter of Genesis followed in this and successive takes.

"Lousy drunk," the stay-at-homes commented.

But the reporter was far from intoxicated. Assigned to cover a hanging of great importance, he had arrived on the scene before anyone else and, with the aid of a Gideon Bible, had effectively tied up the only wire running out of the country town.

A FEW YEARS ago there appeared in the Edinburgh (Scotland) evening newspapers a half page advertisement for a firm known as Hyam's.

Hyam's was a clothing store which used to feature sales of odd pairs of men's pants at certain intervals. The first day the pants might be marked up at say $5 and as the stock became depleted the price was reduced each day accordingly. One day a half-page advertisement appeared with the ambiguous heading, "Hyam's Pants Are Down Again."

GREGG McBRIDE, sports columnist for the Omaha World-Herald and manager of the W-H Lincoln bureau, searched all over the grounds at the State Fair track in Lincoln, Neb., for a feature. Finally over in the cattle barns he found the oldest horse at the track, Logan G, 15 years old. The veteran had been put into a cattle stall because the other barns were full. McBride wrote a column long feature about the old hayburner. When he sat down in the press box to cover the first day's races, Logan G was in the first race. For sentiment's sake, he was about to place $2 on the nag's

Logan G won by a length, and paid $78.60 to win.

IT WAS SEVERAL years ago when the Vincennes (Ind.) Sun, (now the Sun-Commercial), decided to distinguish its two editions by using the words, "First," and "Final" in the ears of the front page.

Shortly after the "Final Edition" was on the street and had been delivered to the homes, a woman subscriber, in all earnestness, called the newspaper.

"I certainly am sorry that you are going out of business," she said. It took the city editor several minutes to explain that the Sun was not going out of business.—From "Short Takes" in Editor and Publisher.

CLOSE THE BUNDS

Many letters are reaching the Leader-Post suggesting that the government should close up the German bunds in Canada and take energetic steps to "crack down" on Nazi sympathizers in this country.

Canadians have been lenient with that sort of thing and have tolerated utterances by a German language newspaper in Winnipeg that has repeatedly insulted Canadian and British democracy and large sections of the Canadian people.

But it is apparent that there is hot anger smouldering underneath at the words and actions of Nazi sympathizers here. It must also be apparent that if it comes to war they are leaving themselves wide open to attack, the hostility toward them will be deeper than anything witnessed at the time of the Great War. It is terrible to contemplate that there should be Nazi defenders in Canada, especially in view of the fact that Canada has offered everyone the opportunity to enjoy the full rights of democratic Canadian citizenship. Why should any Canadian defend Nazism?—Regina Leader Post.

SCIENCE TREATS STEAK

If the scientists can be regarded as one hundred per cent dependable, tough steak is definitely on the way out.

At Pittsburgh the other day, the Melon Institute of Industrial Research announced that a process for "tenderizing" tough meat had been attained. It involved the application of the ultra-violet ray. Dr. Coulter, in charge of the department, made an announcement to the effect that the discovery had raised beef approximately one grade in palatability without affecting the natural flavor, juiciness and food value. That seems to be an important matter since the principal objection to certain grades of meat, especially beef, is its toughness.

Endless are the stage and almanac jokes concerning tough steak. These will now have to be abandoned. According to the scientists, a specially-designed ultra-violet lamp bombards the meat for two or three days at a controlled temperature of 60 degrees, thus speeding the break-up of the connecting fibres that cause toughness.

It used to be that the meat industry had to "ripen" or "hang" meats for weeks to obtain tenderness. This age-old and costly method will be unnecessary. The new method shortly will go into commercial use at Cleveland and if it proves as effective as the preliminary reports suggest, it, no doubt, will be utilized all over the continent. Thus we will not have tough steak to contend with. The cheap cuts will be as palatable as the expensive sirloin, which may or may not prove entirely advantageous for the catering industry.—Sarnia Observer.

HITLER'S DOUBLE

According to The New Yorker (and we've heard versions of the tale before) Hitler died four years ago, and the Nazis have been using one of a quartette of doubles to sub for him on state occasions. A physcian has testified that a man with a throat as bad as Hitler's could not make a speech for 10 minutes, let alone three hours as Hitler does. And from London come reports that Chamberlain was so shaken on his return from Munich because, in the darkened room there, he suddenly realized the man he was talking to was not Hitler at all.

After copious meditation, the Record says, "our reaction is: "So what ' Four fake Hitlers are certainly as bad and maybe even four times worse than one genuine article."

DEER PLENTIFUL

In recent years deer have been spied quite frequently either singly or in small groups in Eastern and Southern Ontario, but it is only within the last week or so that herds of these fleet-footed denizens of the woods have aroused more than usual interest in the older section of this province.

A resident of Glenmorris saw a herd of 21 deer crossing the road as he was driving along the West River road near Ayr.

A London insurance man stopped his car for half an hour and watched and counted a herd of 72 deer grazing in a farmer's wheat field about nine miles from Goderich.

What accounts for their presence in such unusually large numbers in the more settled parts of Ontario? Did the long, severe Winter drive them south where it takes less scratching to make a living Or are Jim Curran's wolves on the rampage again.—Kitchener Record.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Numbness or Tingling of Hands or Feet often Due to Lack of Lime in Blood

When you find a numbness or tingling of the hands or feet you may wonder if it is due to poor circulation of the blood— weak, muscular heart, or the little blood vessels in the hands or feet are not open sufficiently or perhaps to some infection elsewhere in the body that is using up some of the nourishing part of the blood or interfering with the white cells or corpuscles—the disease fighters of the blood.

Physicians have been finding that in a number of cases of tingling or numbness in hands or feet, there may be also, in some cases unhealed or slow healing varicose ulcers on the legs. Some years ago in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, Canada, in a group of patients whose blood was not 'sticky' enough, due to lack of lime, the use of a specially prepared chloride of lime syrup (not the commercial chloride of lime) not only thickened the blood but healed the varicose ulcers of the patients which had resisted other forms of treatment.

Dr. G. P. Norman in Western Journal of Surgery, Obstetrics, and Gynecology, states that numbness and tingling of the extremities (hands and feet) associated with one-sided headache and blanching of the fingers is often associated with a mild hypocalcemia—less than normal amount of lime in the system, —and is frequently relieved by the administration of viosterol in five-drop doses, three times daily. To prove that these symptoms are due to lack of lime in the blood, have the patient breathe deeply for several minutes and the numbness and tingling will usually occur. The blood calcium (lime) is found to be at low normal or definitely below normal.

Remember, when the feet are cold painful and dark red, with perhaps blueness of a toe, the condition is more serious being due to poor circulation.

However, where there is just tingling and numbness which can be brought on or increased by deep breathing for a few minutes, more lime is needed.

The lime may be taken direct in the form of gluconate or lactate, or by eating more of the foods containing lime such as milk—skimmed, whole, or buttermilk—cheese, green vegetables, and oranges.

FISHERMEN WOLVES

Many people do not know it perhaps, but, wolves are fishermen as well as salmon killers, like the bears. "This year," says the last report of one of the British Columbia inspectors of the Dominion Department of Fisheries, "wolves were a decided menace to the salmon runs ....In other years where the odd salmon would be found fished out by wolves, this year there were tens and hundreds". The reference, of course, was to conditions on salmon spawning streams in the more remote areas.—Quebec Chronicle Telegraph.

GREEK INTEGRITY

plying the waters off the island of Corfu.

(In London it was generally believed Great Britain's Mediterranean fleet was converging upon the strategic Greek island near the mouth of the Adriatic and within sight of the south shore of Albania, following a reported warning by Prime Minister Chamberlain that seizure of the island by Italy would be cause for war.)

Only Natural Course

At the same time Greeks said they would consider it only natural if Britain takes steps to guard the integrity of Corfu.

They pointed out that the neutrality of the island is guaranteed in perpetuity by terms of a treaty of 1862 among Britain, Denmark, Russia and Greece by which the island was ceded to Greece.

(The island was under British administration from 1809 when the French were driven out, until its cession to Greece in 1862).

Public uneasiness growing out of Italy's Albanian invasion was partially relieved meanwhile by unofficial reports of an imminent Italian non-aggression declaration to Greece.

Premier John Metaxas tried further to ease the tension by urging Greeks to remain calm.

Cause For Alarm

A cause for alarm was a report from Piraeus of recent concentrations of Italian troops, said to number 45,000, and large consignments of ammunition and war supplies sent to the island of Rhodes in the Dodecanese islands off the southeastern coast of Greece. From 800 to 1,500 Italian soldiers were said to have been landed on each of the 12 other islands in the group.

Presence in Greece of the deposed King Zog I of Albania, and his Queen, Geraldine, also was an unpleasant reminder to Greek's of Italy's latest aggression.

Queen Geraldine and her six-day-old Crown Prince were resting at Larissa, on the Aegean coast.

Liberal Association that the Liberal government of Premier Mitchell Hepburn has "placed our provincial affairs in order; we have balanced our budget and reduced taxation; we have reduced taxation and restored municipal credit."

Mr. Cross said Ontario made municipalities the "sheet anchor" of credit by putting them on a pay-as-you-go basis. Taxation on real estate had been eased and municipal taxation had fallen from $128,000,000 in 1931 to 116,000,000, the lowest level in 10 years.

Drew is Criticized

The Minister criticized Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, for the opposition's non-participation in the debate on the Throne Speech during the present session. He said Col. Drew had offered no constructive criticism in his remarks on the unemployment relief questions and had given an erroneous impression the province had contended in its submissions to the Rowell Commission that it was sovereign and autonomous.

Mr. Cross said the Rowell Commission had been set up because western credit was suffering serious strains, the credit of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba had become exhausted.

Advocates Realignment

He said it appeared to the Western Provinces there should be a realignment of the taxing powers and resources of the Dominion so the West could be delivered from the dilemma.

"It does not follow," said the Minister, "that Ontario should immediately and without question surrender its wealth and resources to the demands of the West, so that in turn its credit may be exhausted as well. It may well be that we serve Canada best by standing firm and that we should insist that all provinces and the Dominion as well should put themselves on a pay-as-you-go basis."

DALADIER DRAWS

3. To have asked nations already lined up in the "anti-axis" bloc to coordinate their defence measures with the French-British military forces in event of trouble.

Swell French Army

The French press reported that Daladier, during his extraordinary session yesterday with the National Defence Council, had drawn up plans to swell the French army.

Prevented by a recent decree law from publishing military information, Paris newspapers referred only to "measures of military precaution" which may be submitted to President Albert Lebrun for signature tomorrow.

The war ministry has given no official figures on France's armed strength since a number of reservists were called to the colors last month, but estimates placed it at more than 1,000,000 men.

The Premier has kept in constant touch not only with his own cabinet and commanders of the land, air and sea forces, but also with the British Ambassador and with London by direct telephone.

The government's activity and the lack of an official communique, left no doubt he was using his powers to enable France to move "as quickly and quietly as the dictators" as he promised to do when he asked the decree powers.

Foreign Minister Busy

His Foreign Minister, Georges Bonnet, was so busy trying to line up French alliances with Turkey, Rumania, Poland, Russia that he had no time to report personally to the Chamber of Deputies Foreign Affairs Committee.

Although Italy was reported to have given assurances she contemplates no pressure on Greece, the French recalled Italy gave similar assurances regarding Albania just before she moved in to occupy that country.

Continued presence of Italian soldiers in Spain, reinforcement of Italian garrisons in Libya, and reported Italian concentrations in the Dodecanese Islands off the coasts of Greece and Turkey cause French observers to believe they were justified in taking precautions.

INTERNATIONAL

Warsaw, April 11—(AP)—A German radio station in Gleiwitz, in the German part of Silesia, today began broadcasting programs to Germans in the Polish section of Silesia urging that they compile lists of Poles who "persecute" them.

Included in this list, the broadcast said, should be the names of Poles who remove white stockings from German legs. (White stockings have been adopted as the Nazi uniform in Poland.)

Sydney, Australia April 11—(AP)—With 500,000 persons lining the two-mile route of the funeral processions, the body of the late Premier Joseph A. Lyons, was taken aboard a destroyer today to be carried to his native Tasmania for burial. The casket, heaped with flowers, was moved to the harbor on a gun carriage. Mr. Lyons died last Friday.

Casablanca, French Morocco, April 11—(AP)— French officials today blamed "foreign agitators" for Jewish-Arab fighting last night at Meknes, in which one native was killed and several injured.

French observers reported the presence in the French zone of many "foreign trouble-makers" who said they had come from adjacent Spanish Morocco.

Police at Meknes rounded up several foreigners and charged them with inciting race hatred.

Buenos Aires, April 11—(AP) — The Argentine Government in a short exchange of diplomatic notes with Germany today stated its determination to carry out a complete investigation of a purported plot for German annexation of Patagonia, 267,000-square mile area in southern Argentina.

Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo, replying to a German protest at the investigation, said "clarification of the alleged facts would be the best manner of serving the cordial relations which happily exist between our two countries."

Ankara, April 11—(AP)—Turkey "is maintaining and will try to continue to maintain her friendly relations with all powers, great and small," Premier Refik Saydam said in a statement of government policy in the National Assembly today.

"No act capable of putting in peril the life or well-being of the Turkish nation will come first from your government unless our goodwill, our sincere and friendly neutrality toward all states, should be directly or indirectly the object of an attempt at violation," the Premier said.

"Turkey, thanks to her powerful army, is capable of warding off any danger and any aggression, "Saydam said.

Paris, April 11—(AP)— Marshal Henri Petain, French Ambassador to Spain, arrived unexpectedly today from San Sebastian for a conference with Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet. It was understood the Marshal made the trip on his own initiative to discuss French-Spanish relations. It was also considered likely that he wanted to discuss persistent reports of Italian troop movements to Spain as well as Spain's adherence to the Anti-Comintern Pact.

London, April 11—(CP-Havas)—The Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, left today for Teheran where they will represent King George and Queen Elizabeth at the marriage of the Crown Prince of Iran.

Cairo, Egypt, April 11—(AP) — Important discussions on British plans for ending Arab-Jewish strife in Palestine were reported underway here today, following the arrival of the Egyptian Ambassador to London, Hassan Nashat Pasha, and Chaim Weizmann, President of the World Zionist organization. Nashat was reported to have brought from London important amendments to the British plan.

Tirana, April 11—(AP)—Provisional Albanian Council has convoked a Constituent Assembly for 4 p.m. tomorrow, it was authoritatively announced today. Calling the Assemby was the first step taken by the Italians to establish what appeared likely to become a new, permanent government to succeed that of King Zog.

London, April 11—(CP-Havas) — Sir Charles Petrie, historian and writer, today resigned from the council of the Anglo-Italian Cultural Association in protest over the Italian invasion of Albania.

Sir Charles was decorated Commendatore of the Crown of Italy by King Victor Emmanuel in 1935.

Nottingham, England, April 11—(CP-Havas)—The annual conference of the National Association of Teachers today adopted a resolution denouncing Italy's seizure of Albania as an "act of brutal aggression on a small defenceless people."

The resolution pledged the entire support of the Association to government moves to prevent any similar move against other independent states.

Burgos, Spain, April 11—(AP)—Sir Maurice Peterson presented his credentials as British Ambassador today to General Franco, leader of Nationalist Spain.

Poland's from Germany.

"They could come in danger only if they let themselves be misused by the incorrigible imperialists of the west."

All newspapers hit hard at British efforts to line up Balkan countries, especially Greece, for agreements similar to the mutual defence understanding between Britain and Poland.

Germans returning from their Easter holidays were told of the activity of cabinets and diplomats in London and Paris. Hitler still was resting at Berchtesgaden.

Voeklischer Beobachter said: "Democratic policy now attempts at least to use the opportunity of pushing ahead with encirclement of the Central Powers."

The newspaper said Greece's western "friends" were trying to force the same role on her that she had to play against her will in the Great War—"the role of an airplane carrier and the main starting point of the Entente attacks against the Adriatic and Balkan positions of the Central Powers."

'Before Gates of Roman Empire'

Deutscher Dienst said recent developments must have opened the eyes of even the smallest states and that it hardly could be believed that they would fall for the British-French press campaign.

"Even for them John Bull's role of savior is over," the commentary said.

The 12 Uhr-Blatt, in a four-line streamer taking up half of its front page, said, "The limit of Democratic impudence has been reached. Britain intends to move her warships before the gates of the Roman Empire."

To Widen Mutual Aid Pact

It was reported reliably that Maisky expressed the Soviet view that the Anglo-Polish mutual aid pact was not enough to stop the axis powers and to have discussed the possibility of a wide agreement which would include Rumania, Turkey, Greece and Bulgaria.

Lord Halifax was said to have asked Maisky for a direct statement of Russia's intention in case Germany or Italy attacked one of the Balkan countries. It was recognized both in British and Soviet circles that Italian domination of Greece or Turkey might block any attempt by Britain and France to get help to Rumania or Russia through the Dardanelles.

The Egyptian government was said to have urged Mr. Chamberlain to press the plan to guarantee the independence of Greece and Turkey to strengthen Britain's position in defence of Egypt and the Suez canal following Italian occupation of Albania.

Question of Russian Aid

A week ago David Lloyd George told Mr. Chamberlain that "if we are going in (to a guarantee of Poland) without the help of Russia, we are walking into a trap.

Mr. Lloyd George was understood to have urged the necessity of Russia's active military support in another private conversation with Mr. Chamberlain and it was believed the Prime Minister now was doing everything possible to expedite an agreement with Moscow.

Reports Rumania had told Britain she now was prepared to sign a mutual defence pact were denied in both British and Rumanian official quarters. It was admitted in both places, however, that such an agreement might be reached shortly.

Reports Premier Mussolini had sent a personal message to Mr. Chamberlain assuring him that Italy had no aggressive intentions toward Greece lacked confirmation at both the foreign office and the Premier's office.

Despite denials, there was some speculation in labor circles that the Prime Minister might be trying to revive his appeasement policy through direct negotiation with Il Duce.

Deny British Ships Near Corfu

Admiralty officials denied any British ships were near the Greek island of Corfu, off the Albanian coast, or in any other Greek waters. They said, however, the Mediterranean fleet was concentrating at Malta, the closest British naval base to Corfu.

Meanwhile, the foreign office drafted for the Prime Minister a declaration of protection for Greece and Turkey as an aftermath to Italy's seizure of Albania.

Preparations to include these two countries in the anti-aggression bloc were formulated as it was reported in London that Rumania, through her Foreign Minister, Grigore Gafencu, had accepted a British offer of a mutual Anglo-Rumanian defence pact similar to the one concluded between Britain and Poland last week.

Tension Indicated

The tension that has seized Europe was indicated in two other widely separated quarters — the Netherlands and Great Britain's vital Mediterranean base, the island of Malta.

Queen Wilhelmina decreed that border battalions take up arms as a precautionary measure because, as an official statement expressed it, "the actual international situation contains war danger." The call was effective yesterday.

At Malta, only 55 miles from the southern shores of Italian Sicily, gas masks were distributed to civilians and a few United States nationals residing there were advised to leave. The families of many British navy and army officers left for England.

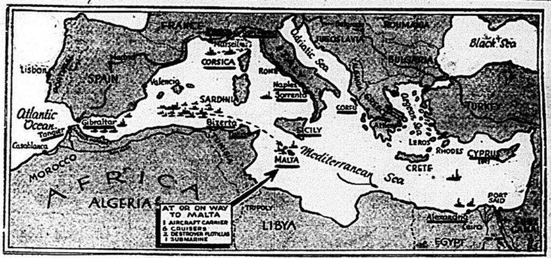
Diplomatic circles believed a show of British naval power off Corfu would have the psychological effect of deterring Premier Mussolini from any attempt on the island.

Corfu, 40 miles long and 20 miles wide at the broadest point, lies off the Albanian-Greek Adriatic border, only two miles from the shores of Albania which Italy absorbed in her Good Friday invasion. It is in strategic position to control entrance to the Adriatic.

Presence of the fleet in the eastern Mediterranean, British leaders hoped, also might offset pressure by Rome and Berlin to keep Balkan states out of the British-French "anti-aggression" front.

The British cabinet in an Easter Monday session, set for Thursday Mr. Chamberlain's delivery of a declaration reported to contain promises of aid to Greece and Turkey after the fashion of the British commitment to Poland.

To hear this pronouncement, parliament was called into the first extraordinary session since the September crisis over Czecho-Slovakia.



BRITAIN WARNS ITALY CORFU COUP WOULD BE AN ACT OF WAR

British warships visiting Italian ports were ordered by the British admiralty to leave them immediately as officers and men of the British Mediterranean fleet rushed to their posts to await further orders. Prime Minister Chamberlain was reliably reported to have warned Italy that any act of aggression against the Greek island of Corfu off the southern tip of Albania, would be considered as an act of war. Current reports in London and Paris state that Britain and France are preparing a gigantic naval display off Corfu to warn the Fascist powers to keep their hands off Greece. The largest concentration of warships was expected at Malta where the Mediterranean fleet was getting up steam and the garrison of the Royal Air Force was recalled to stations. c..ko,

Whose face carries the radiance of tranquility

By HELEN FOLLETT

ARE YOU a "drive yourself" woman? Do you crawl into bed late, drag out early? Do you tear through the day's activities, flurried, breathless and jittery? Do you go to parties when you don't want to go, just because somebody asks you? Then your life is not organized. You are imperilling your health and the appearance of youth will depart long before its time.

Confusion and hurry stamp ugly marks upon the countenance. They interfere with normal digestion, play the dickens with the nervous system. They keep one from doing one's best work because there is no time for planning or solving one's problems. The loveliest faces carry the radiance of tranquility; that is a beauty blessing one cannot have if the world is at sixes and sevens, everything helter-skelter and topsy turvy.

The human machine is wonderfully made, but it is not made of wire and fiddle strings, will stand so much wear and tear and no more. Everyone should have periods of isolation and rest. They give one an opportunity to take inventory of one's qualities, good and bad, and to profit by a bit of introspection. Will the class please keep these words in mind? There will be fewer beauty griefs.

Do you find that the flesh at your fingertips is cracking? These little wounds can be most annoying and they ruin the appearance of the hands. They come through the use of harsh soaps, having the hands in hot or cold water.

AFFAIRS are likely to move at a lively and insistent pace, judging by the strong influence of Pluto, which moves with drastic force and brings unexpected results. Perhaps an unusual state of affairs may be definitely precipitated. Progress and good fortune are possible if the devastating or negative side of this planet is not permitted to bear rule. Other expansive and productive elements are at work, bringing happy and probably romantic adventures.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of activity accompanied by an upheaving force of deep significance. There are prospects of very expansive and happy personal experiences, bordering on the romantic and festive.

Eight Correct Forms of Introduction

At any minute of any day we may be called on to make an introduction. And so important is it that we make an introduction correctly, that we should practice the forms so that we will never have any hesitancy about the right one to use. For make no mistake about it, one of the quickest ways of judging whether or not a person knows what's what in etiquette is the way he or she makes an introduction.

Here are some definite examples of correct forms of introductions:

1—You introduce a man to a woman. Let's say that in this case you wish to make the introduction somewhat formal.

Correctly, you mention the woman's name first, and say "Miss Lee, may I present Mr. Norton?" or more informally, "Miss Thorne Mr. Emmet."

3—You introduce someone to your mother. And regardless of age, sex, or rank, you introduce everyone to your mother. "Mother, may I present Mrs. Gilbert?" or, more informally, "Mother, this is Mr. Walter Preston."

4—You introduce a relative-in-law. Don't let the in-law label be an introduction bugaboo. For instance, a mother introducing a son's wife may say, "John's wife" instead of "my daughter-in-law". Or you, the daughter-in-law, may prefer to say, "John's mother" or "my husband's mother", in preference to "my mother-in-law". Or, instead, of "my sister-in-law" you may prefer to say "my brother Howard's wife".

5—You introduce one man to another man. "Mr. Delafield, Mr. Bradley", is the customary form for this introduction, mentioning first the name of the older man, or the more important or distinguished one.

6—You introduce an unmarried woman to a married woman. "Mrs. Atwater, may I present Miss Hall?"

7—A wife introduces her husband as "my husband" to friends and acquaintances. To relatives and to very intimate friends, she uses only his first name, "Dorothy, this is Tom".

The same rules apply when a husband introduces his wife.

8—You introduce yourself. When it is necessary for a man to introduce himself, he does not put the "Mr." before his name, but he says, "I am Philip Cornell". If a title is used in addressing him, he says, "I am Doctor Bryan", or "I am Colonel Holbrook".

When a married woman introduces herself, she says, "I am Mrs. Elliott", or "I am Mrs. Robert Elliott." When the occasion is a social one, an unmarried woman usually says, "I am Anne Hunter". If a business one, she says, "I am Miss Hunter."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Beware Stage Romeos

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"In advance I know what you're going to think of this letter—that the writer is foolish and wasting her sweetness, if any, on the desert air. But whether it's foolish or not, I've been honestly in love with a movie star, who also appears on the radio.

I've never sunk to the level of writing him mash notes, but I did succeed in getting an introduction to him. In fact, I was one of a supper party where he was the ranking guest. I know I'm pretty am 23, and my dress for that occasion was a knockout. Still, the gentleman paid me very scant attention.

Indeed, after acknowledging the introduction, he paid no attention to me at all, but talked to a woman playwright old enough to be his mother. He smoked moderately, drank nothing but mineral water, and went home early. I'd expected something so different, and was horribly disappointed.

I suppose this man has already forgotten me and would you advise me to forget him? I could meet him again at the same friend's, who brought about our introduction in the first place. But after his indifference, seems to be such a waste of time.

Some Wiser if not Much Older

Your decision not to waste any more time on the movie star, whose name I've refrained from giving, is sensible. That particular man has been bored to tears by the unwelcome attentions of women, who hang around studios to see him, write him mash notes which he never answers, and otherwise "waste their sweetness on the desert air."

It happened that a few weeks ago I was invited to a party where he was a guest. None of us, my dear, happened to be dangerously young, and your hero is not as young as he once was. His next birthday I believe will come pretty close to grazing the forties.

We oldsters got him to talk about girls and the type he preferred. He was very humble about the whole pursuit-by-women business — fan mail, hanging about studios to see him come out, getting him to sign photographs. His chief pets, he admitted, are the younger married women, who are just emerging from the thrill of marrying the "one and only" man and are beginning to realize that their husbands don't know how to make love and are not the demi-gods they supposed them to be.

This might sound as if he were a Grade A egotist, but he isn't at all. He is just a man whose job compels him to be professionally fascinating, and who is bored to death with the consequences. His secretary attends to his fan mail, which he never reads. The young married women, who are his chief trouble-makers, cause other men to smile and tilt a scornful eyebrow. They guy him and other male charmers as professional Romeos. Breaking colts is more to this star's taste. He is also a skillful fencer, flies a plane —and loves his wife.

A woman noted for her humor suggested that someone would reap a harvest by writing a Romance Primer. There would be ten lessons in which the steady, plodding husband would be taught how to make love to his wife.

Ten of the most popular actors on stage and screen would each give a lesson, money to be refunded if the pupils didn't make their grades, and wives continued to look beyond the hearthstone for romance.

Then the star amazed us by saying the women he liked best had jobs, because they were able to look at life more impersonally. They know men from other angles than that of great lovers. "And believe me," said the Great Lover, "when we take off our makeup, we like to slide into something more than the Romeo role."

Spider Corn Bread—Put one pint of sour milk in mixing bowl, add one teaspoon each of salt and soda. Stir well, then add one pint of yellow corn meal, beating it in a little at a time. When meal is well stirred in, break in one egg and beat thoroughly. Be sure to have your spider or heavy frying pan very hot, grease it liberally. Put in batter and bake in a quick oven until done and brown. Turn out and serve hot.

Belleville Women Get "Head Start" in Fashion

Believing in the psychological value of a bright new hat, Belleville women are busily launching the most colorful millinery season seen in years. Flirtatiously veiled in gay fuchsia, or pink, crowned with flower-decked turbans, or their faces framed in "little girl" bonnets that tie with ribbons under the chin, smart women are seen about the city looking consciously delighted with their new hats.

With flowers and veils matched to the flower tints of their make-up, this year's well-dressed woman is a "picture" of feminine beauty. She chooses from the dozens upon dozens of bewitching new creations, while her bewildered escort wonders over the tall cone crowns, wrapped in bright ribbon, the flowing wimples that swath milady's neckline, or the aerodynamic sailors that perch recklessly high on her new coiffure.

"Veiled Strategy" for Spring

Dashing little hats, baby bonnets, siren turbans, sailors, pill-boxes, Homburgs, they're all tied on with bright colored veils that loop into great frothy bows at top, stream out loosely in long flying ends, or tie in enormous chou-chous under the chin. There are little draped hats, with veils wrapped around the face and head like an amusing frame. There are silly little flower hats, with veils hanging half askew to one side, or draping down alluringly over the face. Veils match with gloves. Veils match with blouses. Veils match with make-up, or eyes, or flower corsages. Nothing is too much to ask of a veil this year!

Delightfully becoming are the whole range of new pastel felts and suede hats, softly draped in swagger lines, jauntily perched on one side of the head, often with high peak crowns that are tied in the middle with a ribbon banding. Matched perfectly with gloves and handbags, or even shoes, these new casual hats will be seen at all fashionable daytime occasions, for they are formal enough to wear with prints.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Scarlet Fever Calls for Strict Isolation

Some of you readers will no doubt remember the days when the attitude toward children and scarlet fever was "the sooner they get it and get it over with, the better.

This school of thought has died out. It always reminded me of the farmer who had a little colt that got tangled up in a barbed-wire fence and was badly hurt. The farmer's reaction was much the same: "He had to find out what barbed wire is sometime".

I have never subscribed to the "let him get it and get it over with" idea, for I have always felt that the older a child is, and the more his resistance is built up, the better he comes through an illness like scarlet fever. In fact, I think the fact that the old idea is dying out is partly responsible for the decline in the death rate among children.

A child unfortunate enough to contract scarlet fever should be isolated at once. He must be given very careful nursing, and no one but the nurse and his doctor should be allowed near him during the three stages of the infection. The disease is so infectious that every precaution must be taken to confine it to one room, or one part of the house. If you aren't careful, it will spread.

The person who is doing the nursing should wear a mask and gown when in contact with the patient. Just remember that although you may not be in any danger of contracting the disease, you can carry the germs out of the sick-room and pass them on to someone else. As a doctor, I have always had a horror of carrying germs out of a sick room and passing them to anyone else.

During the approximate four weeks of quarantine, it will require every precaution to keep the disease from spreading. Books and papers in the sick-room should be burned. If possible, children who contract scarlet fever should be taken to a hospital. When you have them there, you are in a position to handle the complications that so frequently arise from the disease.

Yes, the hospital is the ideal place to have your patient. But unfortunately we can't all have that convenience. In my practice, hospitalization has often been out of the question. All we country doctors can do is warn parents of the dangers not only of complications, but of infection to others. If any other children have been exposed to the infection, it is wise to isolate them for a period of about a week. The incubation period—the time between contact with the infection and the development of the sore throat and the rash—is about five or six days, rarely longer.

We know now that one of the ways scarlet fever is spread is through infected milk. That is one of the reasons why I am so strong for pasteurization for this destroys any such bacteria that may have gotten into the milk.

There has been a steady decrease in the number of people who contract this disease. The fall in the number of deaths from it is even more noticeable. In another column I will discuss the discoveries that have made this possible.

Forestry Expert To Advise on City Tree Planting Plan

Full reports of the matter have been prepared by city engineer Chas. Mott, and reveal that average cost of each tree will be but three or four cents. Trees will be supplied free of charge by the department.

When Pete Picobac came home to Essex Centre after a career in Big Time Hockey and married Betty Smith, he had decided to devote all his time to business.

"Dad," said he one day, "I want you to give me the low-down . . . Betty says it's time I smoked a pipe."

"Pete," said Mr. Picobac earnestly, "Betty is a wise little woman. Sticks and stones may break your bones but a pipe will never hurt you. There's nothing like a pipe and a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke for making a young man happy and contented by his own fireside."

"What kind of tobacco," asked Pete anxiously, "I mean . . . you know . . ."

"Now Pete!" reproved Mr. Picobac, tamping his fragrant bowl, "Are YOU asking ME?"

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

Winning Team Spirit Sought By Both Coaches as Teams Prepare for the Crucial Game

Boston and Leafs Prepare for Third Game in Toronto Tonight

FREE OF INJURIES

Schmidt Has Shoulder Bruise and Langelle Sports Black Eye

By JACK CALDER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, April 11—(CP)— Now that the turning point has come in the Stanley Cup finals, the thing the Boston and Toronto club leaders are seeking most of all is that essential to success—a winning team spirit.

For Manager Art Ross of Boston's National Hockey League champions, the task is one of restoring confidence damaged by Toronto's 3-2 overtime victory at Boston Thursday, which levelled the series at one game each. Manager Conny Smythe and Coach Dick Irvin of the Maple Leafs, on the other hand, had to guard against over-confidence.

Bruins Are Glum

The Bruins were glum and disconsolate when they arrived from Boston last night on the same train as the cheerful Maple Leafs. Ross admitted he was disappointed in Sunday's result and felt the Bruins should have won in regulation time.

The Leafs, realizing they will be playing on home ice tonight and Thursday in the third and fourth games of the best-of-seven round, felt they could win both and take a long lead. The fifth contest is scheduled for Boston next Sunday. If a sixth is necessary it will be played here next Tuesday and if there is a seventh it will be in Boston two days later.

"It was just as well we got the players off the train when we did," Irvin said. "They'd have bubbled right over with confidence if we had been aboard much longer."

Coaches Hold Conferences

Both Ross and Irwin ordered player conferences at noon today to prepare for tonight's battle. The teams probably won't hold a regular practice session until Saturday in Boston.

When the clubs return to the hub, they will walk right into the baseball season. The Red Sox and the Bees start the intra-Boston preschedule series that day.

Neither side lost a man through injury in the first two meetings but both sides drew big quantities of bruises. Milt Schmidt, great playmaking centre on Boston's sauerkraut line, suffered the worst injury—a heavy shoulder bruise—in a crushing body-check from Captain Red Horner of the Leafs Sunday. Pete Langelle of Toronto came out of a mix with Eddie Shore wearing a black eye.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, April 11—(AP)—Right quick, now and before reaching for the records who played field for the Yanks before Babe Ruth?....It was a chap named Gilhooley.... Nova and Baer are due this week to start getting ready for each other....Tip: If Freddie Hutchinson flops as a pitcher, Detroit might stick him behind the plate.... He was a catcher in high school and could hit like a fool.

Johnstown looks dandy and will win any time they ask him to.... Ditto, fighting fox....A good one to watch is a sleeper at Bowie named Woodsia.

Washington sports writers say the Senators are two years away—that it will take them that long to stagger in via Cuba and Venezuela.... That's where their rookie pitchers hail from. New Orleans promoters are trying to talk Jack Torrance, the well-known Baton Rouge cop, into trying a ring comeback. Correction: Umpire Bud Newman (he's the one who can't hear what you call him) will be in the southeastern, not the East Texas League this season.

Today's guest star—Sammy Cohen, Meriden (Conn.) Journal: "Henry Armstrong is writing his autobiography under the title "The Glory Road"....We suggest it be called 'The Gory Road'."

One shrewd follower of the bangtails has his derby dough riding as follows.... 20-20-20 on Xalapa Clown (in the future books at 15-8-4)....$20 on El Chico at 5 to 1.....Also a 10-spot on Buffalo Bill at 100 to 1, just for the fun of it .... Old Lefty Grove probably will go down in baseball as the only guy for whom two other guys paid 100 grand and both got their money's worth....The latest from Carl Hubbell is that his shoulder is o.k. but his arm still is "half dead".... If you have a ticket on either Bartell, Dean or Galan, you've a swell chance to win the Chicago hospital sweepstakes.

CHECKER CONTEST OPENS IN CITY

Kingston and Trenton Players Tied for First Place

Jack Traves, Kingston, and A. W. Flindall, Trenton, the two players who tied for the Eastern Ontario checker championship and the S. R. Colliver trophy in 1938 were again tied and leading a large field of crack checker players from all parts of Eastern Ontario at the end of the preliminaries of the Eastern Ontario Checker Association's annual tournament, which opened at the Belleville Y.M.C.A. yesterday.

Players from Cobourg, Port Hope, Kingston as well as intermediate points contested in the preliminary rounds which concluded at the "Y" late last night. The final tournament will open today with the ultimate winner being declared champion.

The results of the preliminary round of the Eastern Ontario Checker tournament with the maximum number of points left available were as follows:

Jack Traves, Kingston, 17 points, and eight to go.

A. W. Flindall, Trenton, 17 points and eight to go.

J. Livingstone, Picton, 16 points, and eight to go.

James Rolston, Picton, 14 points, completed.

Edward Morton, Cobourg, 13 points, and 12 to go.

C. F. Goodman, Port Hope, 13 points, and 12 to go.

Fred Flindall, Trenton, 10 points, and eight to go.

J. Johnson, Picton, 9 points, and four to go.

Harvey Grimmon, Picton, 8 points, and four to go.

Natie Brown Thinks Two-Ton Galento Will Whip Louis

Richmond, Va., April 11 (AP)—Natie Brown, the former Washington heavyweight who has met them both, squared off here and let fly with the left-handed prediction that Joe Louis won't knock out Tony Galento in June.

"Confidentially," said Natie, "the referee won't let it go as far as that. Galento has worked himself into a frenzy and actually hates Louis. He'll come out swinging with his left and Louis will go to work on him, and it won't take him long. He's made Louis mad with his blabbering and Joe's got no love for him. That's bad—for Tony."

Brown should know something about the relative ability of Louis and the keg-man he says will be tapped. Natie has been in the ring twice with each of them and is one of the charter members of the "I've been the limit with Louis" club.

He stayed 10 rounds with the dusky Detroiter back in 1935 when Joe was first coming into prominence. He tried Joe again in the last fight Louis took before he won the championship from Jimmy Braddock and was put away in the fourth round. "But not before I had given him a hell of a battle for three rounds," he added, emphasizing the point by stroking his scrambled nose.

Brown is rather proud of the 10-round decision he won over Galento in 1932 but he doesn't dwell at length on the two-round knockout scored over him by Tony in a return bout the same year.

Peterboro Included In Toronto Loop To Play Baseball

Toronto, April 11,—(CP)—Peterborough will be included in the Toronto Senior Baseball League this season it was decided at a meeting held between representatives of the Ontario Baseball Association, the Toronto Amateur Baseball Association and the Peterborough club here last night.

Toronto clubs will play one game each in Peterborough, on Saturdays or holidays, while the Peterborough team will take part in week-day twilight fixtures here.

A financial guarantee will be posted by the out-of-town club to take care of Toronto team's travelling expenses. No guarantees were asked of Toronto teams.

O.B.A. representatives to the meeting were W. Smith, Toronto, President, and W. Ward, Niagara Falls, Vice-President.

Women's Hockey Title Won By the Preston Rivulettes

Charlottetown Defeated in Both Games by Wide Margin

WAITED FOR BREAKS

Charlottetown, April 11—(CP)—The Canadian Women's Hockey Championship rested today with Preston Rivulettes for the fourth time since the Lady Bessborough Trophy, emblematic of the Dominion title, first was put up for competition in 1936.

Led by their first string forward line of Hilda Ranscombe, Marm Schmuck, Gladys Pitcher, Rivulettes smothered Charlottetown Islanders 7-1 here last night. The classy Ontario team had won the first game —also played here—4-2 and took the total-goal series 11-3.

There wasn't much doubt about the eventual winner. Capitalizing on the Islander's wide-open style of play, Rivulettes scored twice in the opening period, added another in the second, then banged in four more after Charlottetown had broken their goose egg in the opening minutes of the third. Five of the seven goals were scored by the first forward line, Ruth Dargel getting the others on breakaways.

Content to lie back and wait for the breaks, Rivulettes' first goal didn't come until 13:47 of the first period. Hilda Ranscombe slapped it in the cage after taking Marm Schmuck's pass. Less than three minutes later Gladys Pitcher tallied with Marm Schmuck again supplying the assist.

Lone goal of the middle period went to Gladys Pitcher. Vimy Jones' accurate shot was good for the Islanders' at 2:30 of the last frame but from there on it was all Rivulettes. Ruth Dargel scored at the six-minute mark and Hilda Ranscombe and Marm Schmuck ran it to 6-1 before Ruth Dargel's final counter.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By The Associated Press

Texarkana, Ark.—Big John Whitehead, who promised Chicago White Sox he would fill Monty Stratton's place as No. 1 pitcher, will try to go the route against Pittsburgh here today. Merv Connors, first base rookie, has been shipped to Shreveport on option.

Wichita, Kans.—St. Louis Browns' Buck Newsom faces Chicago Cubs today, with Chicago's prize hurling newcomer, Gene Lillard, pitching. A good showing would assure Lillard a starting spot on the Cub staff.

Petersburg, Va.—Bill McKechnie of Cincinnati Reds will do a little experimenting in today's exhibition game against Boston Red Sox. He wants to see what Harry Wolfe, six-foot, three-inch right hander, has got on the ball and assigned him a starting role. Wolf pitched for Sioux City in the Nebraska league last year, winning 15 and losing eight.

Knoxville, Tenn. — Knoxville of the Southern Association was elected today to chase balls for the free-swinging St. Louis Cardinals. The Cards have been getting their roadwork around the bases in their tour through the south with scores that read like basketball results.

ROYALS TO HAVE CRACK INFIELD OF INT. LEAGUE

Montreal Promises to be Best Fielding Team in Loop

HURLERS WEAK

Grimes Has Only Two Holdovers from Last Year

Montreal, April 11—(CP)—If defensive skill were all that counted in baseball Montreal could be positive of having a first division club in the International League this season.

Like any other team in spring training, the Royals have had their share of problems, but as far as straight fielding ability is concerned, the team is free of worries.

Manager Burleigh Grimes is chary about making any predictions as to what his club is likely to do, but he has no hesitation in saying he expects to have one of the league's crack infields in Don Ross at third, Ben Sankey at short, Sammy Bell at second and Bert Hass, due to come to Montreal from Brooklyn, at first. Grimes figures Ross, who has a trolley wire throw, will be the best infielding third sacker in the league.

The outfield, even as consisted at present without reinforcements expected from Pittsburgh and Brooklyn, is well equipped with speed and sure hands in Arnold Moser, Art Parks and Linsay Deal. Parks and Moser have been hitting the ball at a terrific clip in spring camp.

Only Two Holdovers

The pitching corps has only two holdovers from last year, but it is well staffed with experienced men and promising recruits. It has yet to prove itself of course, but it has the makings of a strong and effective brigade with Marvin Duke, Jim Winford, Kemp Wicker, Xavier Rescigno, Lee Rogers, Sam Nahem and Frank Halseed on hand.

Grimes has three seasoned catchers to choose from in Norman Kies, Paul Chervinko and Chris Hartje.

If the hurling staff comes through the Royals will be a first division team. Their only glaring lack at the moment is an outstanding power hitter. Either Hass or Maurice Van Robays, sold to Pittsburgh by the Royals and due back on option for the season, may supply the necessary punch.

Allan Cup Finals Slated for Montreal

Winnipeg, April 11—(CP) — Montreal Royals and Port Arthur Bear Cats will open the best-of-five Allan Cup Hockey final in Montreal on Friday, Dr. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said last night but no decision has yet been made regarding where the Canadian junior final will be completed.

C.A.H.A. officers planned to decide on venue for final games between Oshawa and Edmonton Roamers at their earliest opportunity.

ROYALS TOPPLE GOODYEARS IN DECIDING GAME

Montreal Wins 2-1 Coming from Behind in Gallant Fight

MINUS TWO STARS

Royals Played Without Gamble and O'Connor in Centre Ice

By ROBERT CLARKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, April 11—(CP)— For the first time in many a season it was possible to say truthfully that Montreal's amateur Royals are in the favor of this hockey-conscious populace. But Royals needed to win the Eastern Canada crown against heavy odds to turn the trick.

Oddly enough the Royals were hated cordially—and have been for years—when they played through their regular schedule this season in the Quebec senior hockey league. But 12,000 fans cheered them almost to an echo last night as they topped Toronto Goodyears 2-1 in the deciding game of a best-of-five series for the right to enter the Allan Cup final.

Gallant Fight

Royals stirred the imagination with as gallant a fight as ever has been put on by a home team, as they came from behind to whip Ontario champions with a lineup bereft of two stars—Buddy O'Connor and Carl Gamble.

Royals gained the victory in the deciding game on sheer fight and the great defensive work of goalie Patsy Seguin, Bert Janke and Herman Murray. Without O'Connor and Gamble, both centremen, their combination up front lacked precision but they back-checked tirelessly and just kept on plugging away.

The break finally came near the half-way mark of the third period when defenceman Bobby Laurent, who had put Goodyears into the lead with a goal on a breakaway in the first period, was banished for holding the puck in his hand while sprawled on the ice. While Laurent was off Pete Jotkus and Johnny Acheson slashed in goals, with Acheson getting the winner.

Cleared Cautiously

Then for 10 minutes Sequin staved off every Toronto rally. At times he looked far from his usual stylish self as he tumbled to the ice, cleared cautiously while on his knees and the like, but he kept his net clear.

Janke and Murray played nearly the whole game on the defence, for Royals used Jotkus, only other rearguard dressed, strictly on power plays and at a centre post. Jotkus was dressed in place of defenceman Bill Davies, while Cy Allen and Hal Dewey were in uniform in place of O'Connor and Gamble.

TAYLOR SCORES 5 AS OSHAWA SQUAD WHIPS EDMONTON

Final is 9-4 With Generals Showing Way in Last Period

AGAR HURTS LEG

Western Players Handicapped by Atmospheric Conditions in East

(By Dick Sheridan, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 11 (CP)—None other than Eddie Shore today had the answer—or at least a logical one—for the startling 9-4 shellacking Oshawa Generals handed Edmonton Roamers in the first game of the Memorial Cup hockey series. Boston Bruins' great defenceman credited atmospheric conditions with an assist in the result.

Shore, who farms north of Edmonton during the off-season in the National Hockey League, has played under almost every known condition during his more than 10 years as a professional. So he should know.

The heavy, moist Toronto air almost gags a player when he plays in it the first time. Particularly if he is from the West where the higher altitude tends toward a dry climate. Shore said he believed Roamers still would be handicapped in the next game of the best-of-five series Wednesday night.

George Agar, Roamers' regular centre supported Shore's explanation. "I could hardly breathe after I had been on the ice for a minute or so," he said. "Whew, it was hot." Agar injured his leg when he crashed into a goal post in the third period and couldn't straighten it after the game.

Taylor a Big Factor

While atmospheric conditions, no doubt, had something to do with the upset, another big factor was Billy (The Kid) Taylor, Oshawa's incomparable centre. Taylor pumped in five goals. And he played the last half of the game with a charley horse.

Once the kid found the range, the 2-0 lead Roamers set up in the first part of the opening period faded. Before the session ended Generals had tied the score by tallying in less than a minute.

Oshawa took over the lead in the second by outscoring Edmonton 3-2 and then went on to tap in four goals in the third and win going away. Agar's injury in this period broke up Roamers' best scoring line and blasted any chance they had of winning.

Jud McAtee got two of the other Oshawa goals with his brother, Norm and Gerry Kinsella scoring one each. Bob Carse scored twice for Edmonton and Agar and Johnny Chad got the other two.

The Oshawa defence, woefully weak on Carse' first goal at 1.07 of the first period, tightened and at the end threw back the Roamers' rushes without trouble.

Coppercliff Wins Calder Trophy in Midget Series

Sudbury, Ont., April 11 (CP) — Tying up Georgetown's Star "Apps" Beaumont, Coppercliff won the "Midget N.H.L." title of Ontario last night at Coppercliff. The Coppercliff crew, playing as Boston Bruins, won 8-0 over Georgetown in the deciding game of a best-of-three series. In the two previous games Beaumont scored 11 goals and got two assists for Georgetown. Coppercliff won the first game 10-9 and Georgetown triumphed 8-1 in the second tiff.

While "Apps" was eclipsed, Coppercliff's own "Hill" Rogers went to town. Young Rogers, playing as Mel Hill, Boston trouble shooter, got six goals and had one assist. It was particularly fitting since the real Hill played his best amateur hockey with Frood Tigers at Stanley Stadium in 1936-37.

Coppercliff's win gives them the Calder Cup, gift of Frank Calder, N.H.L. President.

Although the Belleville softball delegation to the annual meeting of the O.A.S.A. gained a few points and concessions, they failed to put over their principal motion as an amendment to the Association's constitution. The Belleville Softball Association tried to put through softball legislation whereby cities with a population of 15,000 or less would be permitted to compete in the Intermediate "B" series, after first sending out a league winner in the Intermediate "A" series. The convention pointed out the "B" series was instituted solely for playdowns in the smaller towns and it would lead to complications if the larger cities were permitted in the "B" playdowns; a point well taken, we'd suggest. However, Point Anne, with a purely home brew team this year, was relegated to the intermediate "C" class and given a bye. The "Cementmen" will play in the Belleville City loop, however. Art Cole, who was suspended for striking Umpire Art Twigg during the melee last fall, had his suspension lifted and will be out with Corby's A.C. again this year.

From long distance observations it looks as though tomorrow night's Bay of Quinte League conclave at Napanee will be something of a stormy session. The league executive obtained a few concessions for their Quinte loop clubs, providing the league expanded. It was proposed that Kingston, with a population of over 26,000, enter two intermediate clubs. Now, it seems the Limestone City mentors contend they can only enter one intermediate team against such towns as Napanee and Picton, with populations of less than 4,000, or six times as small as Kingston. Last year the Kingston 'Locos' finished in the Quinte League playoffs and to date have imported Stan Spratt and Cliff Bennett, to say nothing of players like Bob Elliott, Joe Corky, Vin McQuaide, Blu Webber, Scrutton and other members of the old Kingston Ponies who will be available for baseball service in Kingston.

Recently the O.B.A. approached Kingston relative to returning to the senior ranks of that Association, but the Limestone City moguls turned a deaf ear on the proposal, which opened up last year's old sores and no doubt added to the decision of the Kingston Quinte loop entry squad in fostering only one club. Belleville is no stronger than in 1938, while Napanee lost the services of their two hurlers, Bell and Spratt, the latter being lured away by Kingston. Picton lost the services of Dainard, one of their ace moundsmen, so it naturally follows Picton and Napanee are in no position to cope with the packed Kingston 'Locos'. The Kingston scribe suggests certain officials are trying to "dictate Kingston baseball from long range without knowing the conditions prevailing in Kingston." Such is not the case, however, as there are more serious conditions prevailing in places like Napanee, Picton and Belleville than in Kingston, where they have a surplus of players today. However, the Quinte League has little to worry about, with or without Kingston.

Jack Dempsey says Buddy Baer is the logical white hope to beat champion Joe Louis. "Buddy is big, he can hit, he can take it and one of these fine days he's going to find himself as a fighter," predicted the Manassa Mauler. However, Dempsey doesn't think much of the chances of either Jack Roper, who meets Louis on the 17th of the month or "Two Ton Tony" Galento, who clashes with Louis in June. "Roper can't fight, but he has a better chance against Louis than Galento, as he has a punch and might land one on Louis' chin. Galento is not as good today as he was four years ago because he's wide open these days. Take it from me Louis is game and he'll get up off the floor," predicted Dempsey in an interview recently.

Joe Mowry, former Boston National baseball league outfielder, will be playing manager of the Winnipeg Maroons in the Northern league this coming 1939 season. The Maroon's franchise was bought by a Winnipeg syndicate this year from Bruna Haas, former owner-manager.

Mowry played with Boston in 1933, '34 and '36. Last season he was with Oklahoma city in the Texas league.

Paced by Billie Taylor, the Oshawa Generals experienced little difficulty in disposing of the Edmonton Roamers 9-4 in the first game of the Memorial Cup finals last evening. At the same time, down in Montreal, penalties proved costly to the Toronto Goodyears, as the Montreal Royals came from behind to snatch a belated third period 2-1 victory over the 'Goodies.' The Royals now meet the Port Arthur Bearcats in the Allan Cup finals; while tonight we find the Stanley Cup finals being renewed in Toronto. Incidentally the Leafs are 6-5 favourites today, but watch them thar Bruins.

Hither and Yon—Gerald "Shud" Ethier and Frank Farrare, Belleville's gift to Northern Ontario's softball ranks, are in the city enjoying an Easter vacation.... Walter Young the Verdun copper who won the Boston marathon in 1937, is training strenuously for a repeat job April 19th.....The Eastern Ontario checker tournament passed into the semi-final stage shortly after midnight at the "Y" last night....Players from Port Hope to Kingston are batting it out, without the need of cheering crowds, however. .... Jack Doyle quotes the Yankees as 2-5 favourites to repeat in the American League with no odds, quoted for second or third....A crowd of 100,000 is expected to witness this year's running of the Kentucky Derby, but here in Ontario we'll have Royalty attending the oldest consecutively run race in the new world, the King's Plate.

Charlotte, N. C. — Boston Bees' rookies were a subdued lot when they checked in today to continue their series with Washington Senators. Manager Casey Stengel announced on the trip over from Savannah that five would be set adrift after today's game. Stengel started his final pruning yesterday when outfielder Johnny Dickshot, former Pittsburgh Pirate, was sold outright to Jersey City.

MAY LENGTHEN SEASON

Gananoque, Ont., Apr. 11 (CP)—Local muskrat trappers believe that the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries should extend the season for hunting muskrats, due to the fact that the bays and rivers are still frozen and the trappers have been unable to put out their traps, let alone get any muskrats. One expert trapper said he had only seen two muskrats this season.

BRITISH MIGHT SEEN AS SAFETY

London Express Tells How War May be Warded Off

London, April 11—(CP-Havas)—The threat of war can be warded off if Great Britain makes herself so strong "that a conflict would mean damage, everlasting and irreparable to any combination of powers that challenged Britain's might," the Daily Express (Independent) said editorially today.

After declaring international tension has eased, the newspaper said:

"War, it is recognized, is not inevitable. On the contrary it can be postponed indefinitely, provided we strengthen our defensive resources with sufficient pace and energy."

Firm Declaration

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said:

"There is....urgent necessity of a full and firm declaration to the House of Commons and to the world when parliament reassembles on Thursday—a declaration which cannot be misunderstood. Nothing in this crisis could be more fatal than indecision and doubt abroad. Only prudence and safety now lie in going forward resolutely and unswervingly."

The Daily Herald (Labor) declared:

"Any attempt by an aggressive and ambitious power to secure a dominant position in the eastern Mediterranean must, in the future as in the past, be at once resisted and prevented. It is in the interests of peace that this be made clear at once to all concerned."

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Topper Takes a Trip"

Large audiences at the McCarthy theatre to see and enjoy the current screen attraction, have been loud in their praise of the picture. We therefore urge all who have not seen this production "Topper Takes a Trip" to do so without fail before the final showings. It is the sequel to the vastly successful "Topper" of last season and provides movie fans another ninety minutes of solid entertainment. Or rather, transparent entertainment, for much of the hilarity depends upon the magic of the camera which allows characters to disappear at will.

Roland Young is back as Topper, still harassed by the ghostly Marion Kerby, again portrayed by saucy Constance Bennett. Billie Burke and Alan Mowbray have their old roles of Mrs. Topper and Topper's man, respectively. Verree Teasdale, Franklin Pangborn and Alexander D'Arcy are additions to the comedy cast. Norman McLeod, director of "Topper" again wielded the megaphone.

The sequel takes Topper to Paris in search of his wife, who is seeking a divorce from her pixilated husband. Marion Kerby decides to go along and help out but, as usual, she succeeds in getting Topper in even hotter water. The situation is somewhat complicated by the appearance of "Mr. Atlas," Marion's phantom fox-terrier, who is too lazy to disappear completely, and usually compromises with one half or another.

In Paris, Marion goes to work on a scheming Baron, wins for Topper at roulette, scandalizes a hotel, and finally lands Topper in jail. Between these dilemmas she finds time to create a host of equally uproarious situations by appearing and disappearing at odd moments.

These peccadilloes help to make "Topper Takes a Trip" the most hilarious entertainment any audience has ever been privileged to see....which means that it is the funniest picture ever made.

"Buddy" Rogers (one time juvenile star on the screen) is presented with his world famous band in a musical comedy treat entitled "Swing Vacation" also an amusing and clever Donald Duck, Walt Disney technicolor cartoon and an interesting sportscope entitled "Dude Ranch" precede the feature "Topper Takes a Trip" at each performance.

AT THE BELLE

"HONOLULU"

Eleanor Powell, acknowledged to be the world's most accomplished tap dancer, proves her title again in "Honolulu" which is now on the Belle screen.

This lavish new musical has all that the Broadway shows of modern times can offer and more. Robert Young has the male lead in a dual role, carrying the pleasantly light weight of a humorous, but plausible story. Comedy is provided by George Burns and Gracie Allen of screen and radio fame, and the music is superb.

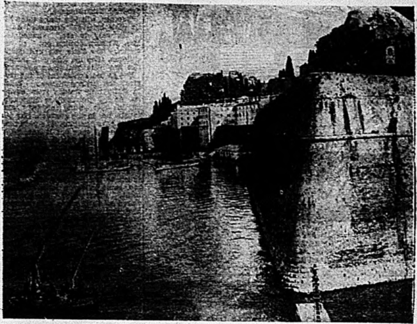
A large and talented supporting cast includes Rita Johnson, Clarence Kolb, Jo Ann Sayers, Ann Morris, Willie Fung, Cliff Clark, Edward Gargan, Eddie Anderson, Sig Rumann, Ruth Hussey, Edgar Dearing and Kealoha Holt, selected in a contest embracing all the islands as Hawaii's champion hula dancer. Then there is also the most famous of all Hawaiian orchestra's, Andy Iona's Islanders, lending authenticity to the musical background of the hula numbers.

Miss Powell offers "Hymn to the Sun" based on the traditional dance of Hawaii; an imitation of Bill Robinson's famous stair dance, and finally, a novel number done with a skipping rope.

Young appears as a Hollywood star who wants to get away for a rest. At an "Opening" he encounters his double and induces him to exchange identities for a while. The scheme works. On a boat for Honolulu, the actor, now free of his fame, meets a cabaret dancer, played by Miss Powell, and falls in love with her. But in Honolulu he faces the past of his double, a planter, who not only is engaged to a girl Young has never seen but is wanted for embezzlement. The complication is adjusted when the planter is induced to return.

Edward Buzzell, former Broadway musical comedy star, directed the picture and his cunning hand is evident throughout.

"Jungle Juveniles" is the title of the new Pete Smith Specialty, to be presented on the same program with the popular Belle News of the Day, and a funny Robert Benchley comedy "How To Sublet."



WILL THESE CLIFFS OF CORFU BE SCALED BY ITALY?

A view of the cliffs of Corfu, the Greek island located just south of Albania, which are to be the next objective of Premier Benito Mussolini and his warriors, according to Paris reports. As justification for the anticipated invasion, diplomats point out the supposed Greek aid to Albanians in their resistance of the Italian invaders. Prime Minister Chamberlain is reported to have warned Il Duce to keep "hands off" the tiny Greek island.

TRAINMEN LEAP FOR SAFETY AS ENGINE AND CABOOSE COLLIDE

Westbound for Toronto, a freight train, piloted by James Karns of Brockville, steamed into Morrisburg. At the station a second freight was taking on water. Seeing the approaching engine, the crew of the second train leaped for their lives. Karns lost three fingers in the collision; his fireman jumped to safety The caboose went up in flames and was destroyed.

POLISH SILESIA MAY PROVIDE SPARK FOR A GENERAL CONFLAGRATION

According to the opinion of U. S. military experts Europe may face the possibility of a general war within the next few weeks as the result of an attempt by Germany to occupy Polish Silesia. When this area was awarded to Germany by a League of Nations supervised plebiscite in 1921, the Poles rose in revolt armed themselves and resisted the German occupation by force of arms. The League of Nations settled the dispute, but this time the league will be powerless. German refugees are shown, UPPER LEFT, fleeing Polish Silesia during the 1921 crisis. Other pictures show armed Polish "minute men" who patrolled Silesia during the Polish revolt.

Self-Expression

By RAY SAPERSTEIN

"I'm afraid you'll find my babies mischievous," said Janet Sturgis when Amy had washed away the stains of travel.

"Pshaw!" exclaimed Mrs. Wilkins, their mother. "It's only that they're more intelligent than most children and have a greater need of expressing themselves."

Being somewhat familiar with her sister's offspring, whose mode of self-expression was not always agreeable to a visitor's taste, Amy Wilkins unlocked her trunk without comment. But the lid was barely lifted before two beautiful children rushed into the room and threw themselves upon her with such force that she gripped the bedpost to keep from falling.

"Not so boisterous, Junior. Be nice, Elsie," admonished their mother, gently. "Aunt Amy isn't used to your rough-and-tumble treatment."

"I guess I'm not permanently damaged," announced Amy. "By the way, I've got a dolly and a fire engine—"

"Where?" shouted Junior.

"Where?" shrieked Elsie.

"In my trunk. If—"

In five seconds the contents of the trunk were on the floor; the children had found what they were looking for and had scampered down the stairs.

"I don't understand their behavior today," said Janet. "They're usually so good."

"You mustn't expect them to be too staid," said her mother. "After all, little folks must express themselves."

"Everything is in order again," said Janet, picking up the last article of apparel, "and dinner is waiting. Fred will be glad to see you."

"Fred?" murmured Amy.

"Fred Sturgis, Will's brother. He lives with us."

A couple of weeks later Amy Wilkins sat on the porch, wondering why she had rashly promised to spend an entire summer with her relatives.

"Those imps have ruined everything I've worn so far," she mourned, "and Janet and Will—and mother—excuse everything they do on the ground of self-expression."

She picked up a book, just as Fred Sturgis emerged from the house and sat down opposite her.

Amy bowed, stiffly.

"Enjoying your vacation?" he asked, and added, without waiting for an answer, "You'd enjoy it more—if those brats were a thousand miles away. There they come, the little fiends, looking as if butter wouldn't melt in their mouths."

Amy saw them. Junior was carrying a heavy club and Elsie a pointed stick, both so winsome and sweet that even their disapproving relatives marveled. And while they marveled the youngsters arrived on the porch, and Junior brought his club down on his uncle's head, while Elsie's stick made a hole in her aunt's silk dress.

"Give me those things!" commanded Amy, indicating the weapons they held.

She grasped Elsie's stick, and threw it over the porch rail. Immediately the child was at her heels, screaming, biting, and scratching. The commotion brought Mrs. Wilkins out of the house; a picture of petrified astonishment.

"Mother, will you make these little pests behave?" demanded Amy.

"It's easy to see," announced Mrs. Wilkins, coming out of her trance, "how little you understand children. Give me that club, Junior, like the little gentleman you are."

But in the excitement of the moment the little gentleman failed to distinguish friends from enemies. As his grandmother approached, his foot swung forward and caught her in the stomach. She fell into a chair, gasping. The next time Junior's leg shot out it knocked a tooth from his uncle's mouth, and cut his lip. Thoroughly exasperated, Fred Sturgis flung the boy across his knee, administering a more thorough punishment than had ever fallen to his nephew's lot. Elsie, too, came in for a little chastisement, after which the children stared at their uncle with mingled awe and respect. But their good behavior lasted only until they saw their parents in the distance, when they scrambled down the steps with the agility of monkeys, their screeches rending the air.

"We'll be . murdered for this!" Amy whispered.

"I'll die happy," returned Fred, with a grin.

Amy laughed, but Janet and Will were already on the porch, their faces aflame with righteous indignation.

"I think," said Amy, "it will be wise to take an early train out of town."

"I have a better plan than that," announced Fred.

"What's that?"

"Marry me—and find a little home for two here."

"It's not a bad plan," she agreed, "provided the home is far enough away to discourage too frequent visits from little folks who must express themselves."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma is going to have the living room decorated over and after supper she said to pop, It's all settled, Willyum, I had a last conference with Mr. Beckwer the decorater on the subject and we decided to have the drapes for the windows made of linen.

That's swell, I hope you wont fail to have the bill addressed to me, and by the way, this whole thing started with some talk of an ottoman for me to put my feet on, when's that going to show up? pop said, and ma said, O yes, that reminds me, I was going to tell you, I was looking at ottomans with Mr. Beckwer and we were going over the various possibilities and we finely selected a lovely one done in flowered satin.

I imagine I'll feel gilty at first putting my feet on anything that noble, but they say practice makes callous, pop said, and ma said, But Willyum wait till you hear, I mean there's a little surprise attached to it. Mr. Beckwer agreed with me that ottomans are so common nowadays that they dont leave any scope for originality, so what Mr. Beckwer has designed for us is more like a padded bench or overstuffed settee, I mean it's really too big to go in front of your chair gracefully, and Mr. Beckwer agrees with me that between the windows would be an ideal spot, ma said.

And I agree too, with the provision that you and Mr. Beckwer take turns holding my feet up for me while I admire the satin squash from a distance, or otherwise it goes in front of my chair. I don't care if it's as big as a piano, pop said, and ma said, Well you dont need to make a scene, Willyum, we can always get a conventional ottoman.

Well then for Peet saze why dont we? pop said, and ma said, We will we will.

Wich we proberly will.

BUILDING A PLANE

Anyone who takes a look at an airplane under construction, or even rides in one, must be impressed by the amazing number of parts that go into it. To design them, to specify their qualities, to purchase or fabricate them, to stock them, to assemble and inspect them, both individually and in the completed ship, is a labor of infinite care and detail. For so much may be dependent on so small a piece.

Just for the sake of knowing, I asked about one of the well-known ships. Take a Lockheed Model 14. Into it go 229,274 parts. That doesn't include the engines, which account for between 5,000 and 6,000 more. The electrical system has 2,056 ft. of wire; there are about 425 ft. in the radio installation. The big total includes 163,000 rivets. But before you say "Oh well—" please recall that each of these rivets must be handled, driven and inspected in place. And I mean inspected.

Any way you look at it, putting an airplane together is a master-craftsman's job. It's a young man's game, too, like the flying of it; and the youngsters that have what it takes are going to find a future in the industry.—Business Week.

NEW DEAL ORIGIN

It was Gen. William T. Sherman, and not Franklin D. Roosevelt, who first used "new deal" in a political sense, reports the new Dictionary of American English being published here. Lineage of the famous expression is traced to Civil War days in the sixth volume of the dictionary which is soon to come from the press.

Earliest usage of the phrase with political significance is found by the dictionary makers in Sherman's Letters, written in 1863.

"Charleston is not taken, the war is prolonged, and but little chance of its ending until we have a new deal."

The word "deal," meaning a questionable political agreement, is another Americanism, the dictionary finds. It cropped out frequently in publications of the '80s.

PUBLIC CITIZEN

The slurs which are being cast so lightly these days in the direction of those who are representing us in Parliament constitute remarkably poor return for the personal sacrifices which many of these men are making that the business of the Dominion may be carried on and it is quite possible that 'better type' candidates could only be obtained with extreme difficulty. Certainly those who have come forward at other times as third-party candidates have not on the whole begun to approach in either capacity or experience the men whom they have attempted to defeat.

Our M.P.'s may not be perfection, but they represent a fine type of citizenship which could not be easily equalled.—Brockville Recorder-Times.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 11—(CP)— Prices tumbled from the opening on Toronto exchange today and trading increased on the decline. By noon the mining and industrial shares were off 2.20 to 3.00 points in the index. A moderate rally soon after noon gave the price level a better appearance but all the gains did not hold. Selling also eased off at early afternoon but turnover of 530,000 shares in the first three hours was much heavier than in other recent sessions.

Alarm over the outlook in Europe was the chief source of weakness. Senior industrials and mining issues harbored losses of 1 to 2 1-2 points and recessions of 20 to 40 cents were showing at early afternoon for Waite- Amulet, Wright-Hargreaves, Macassa, Pickle Crow and others.

Utilities were the strongest of the steels while senior oils, steels, foods and building shares were definitely weak. In the western oil group losses of 5 to 15 cents were noted for Home, Anglo-Canadian, Calgary-Edmonton and Okalta.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 11 (AP)—Buying support came into the stock market today after a fast forenoon selling rush had topped leaders one to more than five points.

At the peak of the set-back the ticker tape fell behind floor dealings. Activity then slackened and extreme losses, near the final hour, were halved in many cases.

Motors, Aircrafts, steels and specialties bore the brunt of the early onslaught. Transfers were about 1,500,000 shares.

LITTLE HOPE OF FINDING WOMAN

Notes Indicate Woman Dreaded Returning to Germany

Cornwall, Ont., April 11—(CP)—Cornwall Township Police intensified a search today for Mrs. Frank Wilhelm, 35, and her six-months-old, son, missing from home since early yesterday. Chief Wilfrid Bertrand, however, expressed doubt the woman would be found alive.

"Notes she left behind and the things she said to her husband indicate she may have done away with herself and the child," he said. "She was in a nervous state and had been brooding a lot lately."

Two sources reported having seen Mrs. Wilhelm and her baby last night. Search of the areas proved fruitless. Last night police called at many homes along a 10-mile stretch of highway west of here.

The husband told police his wife and baby had disappeared when he awoke during the night. He said he found letters addressed to himself, his wife's two sisters, father and stepmother in Germany.

Wilhelm said his wife appeared nervous of late and on numerous occasions spoke of a "dread" of returning to Germany.

"I don't know why she should think she would have to return to Germany, because I am a naturalized Canadian citizen and they couldn't deport her," Wilhelm said. He added that in his wife's note she asked him to "sell the things" and return home to Hungary, from where he came in 1930 The note added that his wife was "going away" and that she "would take to the river" before returning to Germany.

Mrs. Wilhelm came to Canada from Germany in 1932.

Butter Prices Firm Under Light Offering

Toronto, April 11—Prices showed little change on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, with volume of business not large in any line.

The butter market maintained a steady tone. Offerings remained on the light side and appeared to be clearing under the hand to mouth buying. Ontario creamery solids closed out the day in the range of 22 1-4c to 22 1-2c for No. 1 grades, and 21 1-2c to 21 3-4c for 38 score. Prints moved through retail channels at the unchanged prices of 23 1-2c to 24c for top grades and 22 3-4c to 23 1-4c for 36 score.

Trading lacked energy on the egg market, but arrivals of fresh receipts were not heavy and dealers reported a clearance in available supplies. A seasonal increase in production is now looked for by the trade, but it is expected that any surplus stocks will move into storage. Graded shipments were quoted yesterday at 20c to 20 1-2c for grade A large, 19c to 19 1-2c for medium, 18c to 18 1-2c for pullets, and 17c to 18c for B and C grades.

Moved After May 2nd

According to reports in usually well-informed circles, Italy has promised to move all her troops out of Spain immediately after General Franco's "victory parade" in Madrid May 2.

Italy has 25,000 to 30,000 soldiers still in Spain, as well as large supplies of munitions and warplanes. There is no evidence of German troops, although many technicians from the Reich have been helping Franco.

Perth to Leave Post

Meanwhile it was announced the Earl of Perth will relinquish his post as Ambassador to Rome within 10 days and will be succeeded by Sir Percy Loraine. Because of the tenseness between Rome and London, it is expected Sir Percy will assume his new diplomatic post as soon as Lord Perth vacates it.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was cheered by a large crowd outside his official residence at No. 10 Downing Street today as he started for Buckingham Palace for a conference with the King.

Anglo-Russian consultations were resumed earlier when Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador, called upon Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, as a prelude to a special meeting of the inner cabinet to discuss the latest reports of German troops concentrations and of Italian moves in the Balkans.

GREECE, TURKEY

Turkey and Greece lie just on the fringe of the politico-economic empire which Chancellor Hitler has established in eastern Europe and the Balkans. His degree of control over these countries, while large, isn't so great as it is over the rest of the Balkans and Hungary.

Over a considerable period of years Turkey and Greece have leaned heavily towards Britain, fearing that their territorial integrity and even independence might suffer at the hands of Germany or Italy.

As a matter of fact, both these states feared Mussolini much more than they did Hitler, up until the Nazi chief's triumph over Czecho-Slovakia last fall. Then they began to worry about Hitler, who made it plain that he intended to impose at least economic control over them.

Two States Fear Il Duce

As regards Mussolini's intentions, Greece has been fearful that he might annex some of the islands off her coast and perhaps even some of her mainland. Turkey has felt sure that the Italian Premier had his eye on the coastal region of southeastern Asia Minor. The fact that he already has the big island of Rhodes and other smaller neighboring isles has added to the Turkish anxiety.

Now with Hitler and Mussolini apparently working in close accord in the drive down the Balkan peninsula, Turkey and Greece are decidedly worried. And their neighbors of the north also are nervous.

German Best Customer

Despite the desire of the Balkans to protect their independence, they have made it very clear that they hesitate to join the projected Anglo-French "halt Hitler" bloc. There are two reasons for this. One is that all the Balkans are afraid of Germany's military might. The other is that the Reich consumes some 50 per cent and up of their products, and neither Britain nor any other country is in a position to provide an alternative market.

One point looms large in the minds of the Balkans. The German Frankfurter Zeitung called attention to it in an editorial declaring that the western powers are incapable of "rendering timely and effective aid to an eastern European state."

TRIPLETS HAVE CHANCE FOR LIFE

Born in Country Home With No Nurses in Attendance

Pembroke, Ont., April 11—(CP)—Triplets born last night to Mrs. Donat Francoeur of La Passe in Westmeath Township about 20 miles from this Upper Ottawa Valley town, have a chance for life.

The attending physician, Dr. M.O.L. Barrie said today the babies, two girls and a boy, were living and, although they were weak, he had hope of keeping them alive.

The children were born in a country home with no nurses in attendance and there was no means of weighing them. Dr. Barrie guessed their weight at from two to two and a half pounds each.

The triplets are the first children of Mrs. Francoeur who was resting comfortably today.

GAYDA DENIES

under arms another year. Nothing was said about withdrawal from Spain of Italian troops.

Denies Threat to Balkans

Another newspaper, Il Corriere Della Sera of Milan, said Italians were beginning to believe the Mediterranean and "perhaps a short stretch" outside the Strait of Gibraltar were "about to become unsafe for certain formerly dominant navies."

Gayda characterized as a fable supposed dangers to Balkan states, particularly Greece, which prompted proposals at London to lend them emergency aid "as though the enemy were at the door."

"There is, instead, only reason for a new and more intensive collaboration of peace and civilization between Italy and the Balkan countries," he wrote. "Whoever proposes that a Greek port be placed at the disposal of the British fleet serves Greece badly and hurts her elementary interests."

He said Italy was not threatening and did not intend to threaten Greece.

PIG PRODUCTION HERE IS NORMAL

But in U. S. Nature's Birth Control Applies Brake to Litters

Drovers of the Belleville district and local butchers who could offer no reasonable explanation for the lower trend of hog production in the United States this year have failed to note any decided decrease in little pigs in this section of the Province this season. The pig population appears to be normal, it was stated in the absence of official comment from local government bureau.

"The weather hasn't been any too good this spring for growing stock, that may be one reason," it was theorized by a city butcher.

The same statement regarding weather difficulties experienced by district hatcheries was corroborated by Ken Wensley, proprietor of one of the city's biggest. "It's been a hard season for baby chicks," he stated.

No unusual cases of hog abortion have been reported this spring.

It is to be noted that in the last two weeks six-weeks-old pigs reached a new high here, namely $6 each.

Nature Puts on Brakes

Chicago, April 11 (AP)—Nature is applying the brakes to the rising trend of hog production in the United States, a survey indicated today.

Unusually heavy losses among spring pig litters in important hog producing states were reported. Agricultural experts said nature's birth control may offset the sharp increase in sows farrowing this spring and may prevent an increase in the country's hog population, which producers have feared eventually would bring lower prices.

No Definite Cause Shown

Pathologists at the University of Illinois estimated losses of pigs reported to date would more than offset the anticipated boost in hog numbers expected to result from a 23 per cent increase in sows bred to farrow this spring. They could cite no definite causes for the losses, ranging in some instances to nearly 100 per cent.

The 1939 pig crop has been estimated at 80,000,000, about equal to the 1929-33 average that preceded the 1933 government slaughter program and 1934 drought. Since that time aided by abundant feed, supplies have steadily increased and prices declined. Recently hogs here sold at the lowest level in more than four years.

GOEBBEL'S PAPER RIDICULES FLEET

In Typical German Humor Der Angriff Laughs About 'Preparedness'

Berlin, April 11. —(AP)—Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff ridiculed today the "Old Tubs" of the British Mediterranean fleet.

Der Angriff said it found British "war preparedness measures" — viewed in connection with Great Britain's "encirclement efforts"—a "peculiar picture the main tendencies of which swing back and forth between complicated anxiety and naive bluff."

It listed various types of ships in the British Mediterranean fleet and said that five of the battleships were launched between 1913 and 1916.

Mysterious Ways

"You cannot show off any more with old tubs whose movements are reported in such mysterious ways," the paper said.

"In this age of squadron flights" of airplanes, it continued, the "secret meeting place" of the British fleet could not long remain undiscovered.

"The same applies to the laughable reports of war preparedness in Malta and Gibraltar," Der Angriff said. "In every decent army every soldier has his gas mask, the anti-aircraft guns are in order and the men for manning the guns are present.

"This is true in the time of the most complete peace. Hence such a situation can be explained as war preparedness or special precautionary measures only among preachers' daughters".

Paris is Also Ridiculed

In another commentary Der Angriff demanded, "who protects the nations from England's protection?"

BUSINESSMAN DIES

Col. Harry McGee, senior vice-president of the T. Eaton Co., Toronto, and one of the leading businessmen in Canada, died in Toronto at the age of 77.

The newspaper ridiculed Britain's "silly guarantee declarations" and said that Great Britain "does not see with what unexampled quiet and self-assurance the powers of the axis proceed on their way in the midst of a world made nervous by English diplomacy."

The paper asked its readers to study its dispatches from Paris under the headline, "in Paris they have cold feet".

POLICY TO APPLY TO AGRICULTURE

Hon. J. G. Gardiner Outlines Policy Over Prairie Network

Regina, April 1 (CP)—"Canada is proposing to do better for her growers than any other country," said Hon. James G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, here last night.

Mr. Gardiner in a review of the Federal government's new wheat policy, spoke over a prairie network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"We are laying the foundation in Western Canada for a policy which can be applied to all agriculture," Mr. Gardiner said.

The new policy proposes: 60 cents a bushel initial price for No. 1 Northern wheat, basis Fort William, an acreage bonus plan and continuation of the Federal Wheat Board.

He said there was no mention of a 60 cent "fixed price" in any of the farm legislation now before parliament.

"The government has taken the stand that a fixed price cannot be part of permanent government policy."

The government has agreed to make an advance of 60 cents a bushel, an initial payment, without interest and without storage charges.

"There will be no selling you out," added Mr. Gardiner. "This is an absolute guarantee of your credit."

Nearly all criticism of the new policy concerned refusal of the government to accept an 80-cent minimum price. Mr. Gardiner said comment on the crop bonus plan and continuance of the wheat board had been favorable.

The reason the plan had not met requests for an 80-cent fixed price was because, such a plan would pay out to most successful farmers and give little benefit to the farmer whose need was greatest.

Mr. Gardiner spoke of the new aid planned for butter and cheese industries and of possible extensions in other directions.

ITALIANS PUSH INTO INTERIOR

Win Favor of Natives With Food and Free Propaganda Films

Tirana, April 11 (AP)—Italy's troops pushed into Albania's mountain passes today in a drive to complete occupation of every corner of the country.

One of the latest towns to fall into Italian hands was Kroja, ancient citadel of Albania's national hero, Skanderberg, who led a 15th century uprising against the Turks.

There, Italian sources said, Albanians turned out as in other places to welcome the troops. Children, dressed in bright holiday costumes, presented flowers to General Alfredo Guzzoni, commander of the Italian expeditionary force.

Show Free Films to Natives

Italians, who won the favor of natives by offering them food and other supplies and staging aerial acrobatic exhibitions, gave a new demonstration of their benevolence by opening the movie houses in Tirana free of charge. The natives were shown Italian propaganda films.

In a visit to the seaport of Durazzo, an Associated Press correspondent saw 20 shell holes in the walls and hundreds of bullet scars attesting to the bitterness of the fighting there last Friday when a small group of poorly organized Albanians opposed the first landing of Italian troops.

Fighting Recalled

Residents of the town and participants in the battle gave this account:-

A landing force of Italian sailors came ashore at 5.22 a.m., and advanced across a level space at the water's edge, apparently expecting little, if any, resistance.

The Albanians, numbering some 300 regular troops and 60 gendarmes, were concealed in waterfront buildings and behind street barricades, while snipers were stationed on the roofs. They loosed rifle and machine-gun fire and checked the Italian advance.

As the Italians reformed, naval vessels in the port, of which there were about 30, fired several small calibre shots. Most of the shells appeared to have been non-explosive, since the walls of the building were penetrated without the buildings being wrecked.

GANGSTER'S WIFE WAIVES REMOVAL

Benny Dickson Shot to Death on St. Louis Sidewalk

Kansas City, Apr. 11 (AP)—Stella Mae Dickson, 16-year-old Topeka, Kas., girl told today how her desperado husband, Benny, was shot to death by Federal agents on a St. Louis sidewalk.

Benny, 27, and Stella Mae, who shot their way out of a police trap at Topeko last November, had been sought on charges of bank robbery and kidnapping. Benny was killed Thursday night. Stella Mae was arrested here Saturday and has waived removal to South Dakota for trial on bank robbery charges.

Stella Mae who always calls her husband Johnny because he went under the name Johnny O'Malley when he first met her three years ago said she went to St. Louis with her husband to see a friend. She sat in the car while he went to a hamburger stand.

"A few minutes later I saw a man come down the street wave his arm. I didn't think anything about it at the time. I couldn't see the hamburger stand very well because of cars parked in front of it.

"I heard several shots fired across the street. I already had the motor running and I swung the car around to get on Johnny's side of the street and opened the car door as I turned.

"He was lying on the sidewalk.

"It seems as if I looked at him a year lying there on the sidewalk. I can remember everything about him —the way he looked."

POLITICAL ACTION

of the Ontario Mayors Association.

It was not his intention to institute a new party but he considered if the mayors saw to it that there was an independent candidate in each of the 245 constituencies, the municipalities would "not be on the outside looking in, but would have some power in working to erase unemployment."

Proposal of Mayors

The Ontario Mayors Association had attempted to have the new unemployment relief cost distribution of 40 per cent to the Dominion, 40 per cent to the provinces and 20 per cent to the municipalities made retroactive to Jan. 1 last but had not been successful. He was glad, however, that the Dominion had cut the share the municipalities had to pay.

"I should like to ask Labor Minister Rogers why he feels we are entitled to more relief from the unemployment relief burden this year when we have been in the last two or three years," Mayor Cory said. "Would it be because this is an election year? I am just asking the question."

Asks Guarantee of No Change

He urged the government guarantee that the new relief apportionment would not be changed later in the year. "We want an absolute guarantee that the municipalities won't have to pay more than at present for relief."

Mayor Cory's suggestion for political action came when the conference, which opened today with 69 Mayors and Aldermen in attendance, was discussing a resolution urging the Dominion Government assume the entire cost of unemployment relief because of the present economic condition of the country.

Mayor H. A. Ireland of Portage La Prairie, Man., took exception to the implication that the Dominion Government was responsible for the economic condition of the Dominion. "It is not the fault of the government but rather the failure of the business life of the country to distribute the necessities of life to the people," he maintained. In his own municipality a big flour mill had shut down and those who lost employment as a result became a direct burden on the municipality.

Social Services.

The municipalities were unable to provide the social services imposed by the Dominion Government. The government started a new scheme then gradually reduced the Dominion contribution until the municipalities "were left holding the bag". It was time the country abandoned the "horse and buggy system of municipal taxes", which were "killing the building and allied trades".

Costs of unemployment relief would pyramid to staggering figures if the Dominion assumed responsibility, said Mayor Charles Daley of St. Catharines. New taxes would have to be imposed to pay for the increased expenditure and the burden would be back again on the municipalities in an indirect manner. He favored the present system whereby the municipalities, by paying a small share, retained control of relief expenditures within their boundaries and could have some supervision over costs.

Financial statements of the banks and financial institutions for the last ten years would indicate that "things are getting better in Canada," said Mayor George C. MacLean of St. Boniface, Man., but the half million on relief would hardly agree.

There was an enemy in Canada worse than a physical enemy, Mayor MacLean warned, and it was time the Dominion government should be aroused to "declare war on unemployment and to use every asset of the country to destroy it."

Mayor W. A. Johnston of London voiced support of the resolution for Dominion responsibility, declaring that if the burden were taken off the already loaded municipalities, it would mean probably some reduction in real estate taxes, which in recent years had been mounting because of the necessity for municipalities to find revenues to pay for relief.

If the Dominion were to assume responsibility for all unemployment relief, he suggested it should "get the money from the industries responsible."

Bone Urges Federal Duty

The Dominion Government should face the responsibility of relief, Mayor Jamieson Bone of Belleville held. Municipalities should be relieved of the cost and the Dominion and Provincial governments should come to some arrangement. "The Dominion should not take any more back chat from the provinces in this matter." He chided the Dominion for its tardiness in publishing the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations

Much of the unemployment distress was directly traceable to laxity of the Dominion government. There were thousands of young men unemployed in Canada, yet the government had "sidestepped" the British government's proposal for the training of Royal Air Force pilots in the Dominion. Many hundreds of young men were kept out of Canada's own defence services because the educational standards for recruiting were too high. A "buck private" in the army was required to have two years of high school to carry a gun

Too Great Emphasis on Relief

Perhaps too much emphasis was placed on the relief problem, said Mayor William Morrison of Hamilton. He would rather see a broad study of the entire question of municipal government in the light of co-operation with other governments. Mayor Morrison urged early publication of the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations which might enable a readjustment of the whole system of taxation. He hoped to see the day when young people would want once more to own a home of their own. If they felt now they should own a home they should "see a psychiatrist".

So far he had heard no proper solution for unemployment relief, said Mayor J. R. Joyce, of Welland. He did not think the municipalities were "fair to themselves" and he did not believe they were "conscientiously trying to deal with relief."

Self-Help Urged

People on relief should be able to help themselves to some extent by a co-operative effort at self-sufficiency, said Mayor Lyle Telford of Vancouver. A co-operative movement among relief recipients should be capable of production of food and other necessities to the point where those concerned could raise their own standard of living.

Debate on the resolution was adjourned to another sitting. The conference today gave swift approval to the Treasurer's report and the joint report of the President and Secretary which contained statistical data and correspondence on relief costs and on municipal financing.

PLAN OF ITALY TO ISOLATE TURKEY

Manchester Guardian's Correspondent Says Italy Wooes Bulgaria

Manchester, England, April 11 — (CP-Havas)—Italy plans to enlist Bulgaria in a program for the isolation of Greece and Turkey, leaving Rumania at Germany's mercy, the diplomatic correspondent of the Manchester Guardian (Liberal) stated today.

Great Britain, he urged, should take "technical precautions" against further action by the dictatorships, instead of concerning herself merely with diplomacy.

"With regard to Greece", the correspondent wrote, "The Italian menace is so evident that it is difficult to see how any member of the government could have ignored it.

"The Italian forces in Albania are far greater than are needed to 'preserve order' in that country. And why are strong Italian forces concentrated in the Dodecanese? The Italian plan is, clearly, to separate Greece from the rest of the Balkans with the help of Bulgaria and to promote the isolation of Turkey. If this manoeuvre succeeds, Rumania will be at the mercy of Germany and Turkey will have been 'convinced' that she has nothing to hope from the Western powers.

Claims Lack of Precautions

"What would seem to be particularly dangerous is the lack of technical precautions on the part of Great Britain against the further action of the axis powers.

"The language used by the British government is of secondary importance—it may be mild or severe, but as long as it is unaccompanied by precautionary measures of a technical kind, it will be meaningless if it is severe as it will be if it is mild.

"France, on the other hand, has taken bold and far reaching precautions, precaution that are fully justified by the situation and by what is known of the plans and preparations of the axis powers."

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY"

by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

"I shall give you everything that there may be to forgive because tonight I shall ask you once more—"

She put her hand in his.

"Do you need to ask, dear?" she interrupted, with a little break in her voice and a fond gleam in her eyes. "I am Austrian," she confided, "and emotion makes me hungry. Have you to go back to the others or can we find a corner together?"

"Find a corner by all means," he replied hastily. "To tell the truth," he added as they strolled out, "dinner didn't go very well with me. I was being cross-examined all the time by a very earnest lady who had serious political views. We will continue to exchange confidences, but confidences about ourselves—just our two selves—and all that is going to happen to us.'"

The supper party a deux was so much of a success that the sudden intrusion of their host came almost like a nightmare. Sir Francis, too, seemed to carry with him all the suggestions of an overwhelming catastrophe.

"Baroness," he said, "my dear Matresser, I owe you a thousand apologies for this inhospitable disturbance. Matresser, we need your help!"

Elisabeth raised her eyebrows slightly. Her first instinct of resentment showed itself clearly.

"My escort seems to be very much in demand tonight," she remarked pathetically.

Matresser himself, although he had risen to his feet, showed some signs of irritability as he turned to Sir Francis.

"Is it something really vital, sir?" he asked. "It has taken me so long to find the Baroness and we had arrived at a stage in our conversation—"

"The matter," Sir Francis assured, "is of urgency or I should not have intruded. My wife is on her way here to take charge of the Baroness."

Matresser leaned towards his companion. "You will wait for me, Elisabeth?"

"It depends," she answered with a slight trembling of the lip. "Perhaps this time you are going to Tokyo or the other end of the world. My patience has its limits!"

"Please wait," he begged.

"That I promise," she replied.

Matresser was literally dragged away by his host.

"Royalty has just deserted us," the latter confided. "Driven home, I think, by the news. I want you to come to my room, Matresser. Atkinson, my secretary, is glued to the telephone. He is talking to Paris and is holding the line open."

Matresser understood at once.

"So the trouble is that way, is it?"

Sir Francis nodded. He looked carefully around but there was no one within hearing. They had left the room by the service door and were descending the back stairs.

CHAPTER XXXIV

"You have heard rumors of this mobilization of the French fleet?" Sir Francis asked.

Matresser nodded.

"We censored it out of the press" the Minister declared. "We trusted to Donaldson to keep things in status quo until we were in a position to offer our explanation. He seems to have bungled it or the French espionage is too clever. Anyway, they seem to have decided that we have earned our title of 'perfidious Albion.' The French fleet passed through the Straits of Gibraltar late this afternoon at full strength under sealed orders."

"Where on earth are they off to?" Matresser demanded.

"The English Channel," was the grim reply. "This way, if you don't mind, Matresser. This service passage here leads to my study. The Prime Minister is there and Symons."

They reached their destination, Tring almost out of breath. The Premier was talking earnestly to Symons, the press magnate.

"Anything fresh from Paris?" Sir Francis asked Atkinson who was standing by the telephone.

"Not a word, sir," the latter replied. "We have sent messengers in every direction for Monsieur De-Bennet but I am afraid he is deliberately keeping away."

"Cut off Paris, then," Tring directed. "Do everything you can to find the French Ambassador. He may have been sent for, but it is doubtful whether he can have left the house yet. He must be found, Atkinson. Do you understand that? There was always a chance of serious trouble if anything leaked out before tomorrow. Seems to me we've run up against it."

"I understand perfectly," the young man declared, hurrying out of the room.

The Premier, cool and grave, led Matresser aside.

"I sent for you," he said, "because I am anxious to know whether you will act once more in the capacity of—shall I call it envoy extraordinary — from St James's?"

"I am willing to do anything I can sir."

"Will you leave for Paris or Rambouillet tonight?"

"Certainly. If Heston can give me a plane I can be there at daybreak."

"You will have a disagreeable task," the Premier warned.

"It was not exactly child's play, sir, in East Africa."

"You will have to stand up to a very excitable man and, if necessary, you will have to tell him why we did not dare to trust him."

"I think I understand the situation, sir, except for one point," Matresser said. "That, I must confess, puzzles me."

"Go on."

"Why was full disclosure not made to the French Cabinet last night? I understood that that was the arrangement."

"A very serious interference with our plans arose," the Premier confided. "How the news was kept out of the evening papers I cannot imagine. Symons here, with fifteen correspondents in Paris, knew nothing of it. You read of the crashing of the French plane near Boulogne?"

"Of course. All three passengers killed, weren't they?"

The Premier nodded.

"The unidentified one was Somerby."

"What—Lord Somerby?"

"Lord Somerby, our Ambassador to France," the Premier groaned. "Not one of us had the slightest idea that he was travelling by that plane. I'm afraid there was something a little unusual—but never mind that now. He was on the plane, burned to death and his papers with him. His appointment with the French Premier was never kept. Not a soul at our Embassy there knew what had happened to him. Our special wire to Paris has been cut on the French side."

Matresser was truly astounded.

"But what made Somerby travel by that plane?" he demanded.

"An act of idiocy," the Premier said gravely. "He has paid for it with his life. It is for us to try to pull things straight again if we can. Your pane is waiting at Heston, Matresser. You must reach Lacheur and Desselin before dawn, if you have to break into their houses. If you don't, we shall be at war with France by midday."

"I'll do what I can, sir," Matresser answered.

X X X

The British envoy extraordinary paused in some weariness. By means of cunning, tact, princely largesse and stoical perseverance, he had forced his way into an all-night conference between the Premier of France and his Secretary for Foreign Affairs, but it seemed to him that he had never found so unresponsive an auditor as this stiff, gray-bearded and gray-moustached, stockily built little man—the Premier.

"I trust," Matresser wound up, "that you have now, sir, a clearer apprehension of this matter. You will realize, of course, that everything would have been put before you in a more statesmanlike manner many hours ago, but for the unfortunate accident to the plane in which Lord Somerby was travelling."

The conference which was being held between the three men in a magnificent bureau of the Quai d'Orsay had commenced at three o'clock in the morning and had already lasted more than two hours. There was Monsieur Henri Lacheur, Premier of France at that moment but only two months before a dresser of calf skin in Orleans, and Monsieur Gaston Desselin, who had held the post of Minister for Foreign Affairs half a dozen times during his lifetime and who had now been hurriedly recalled to office.

"Certainly," the Premier admitted gravely, "your explanation throws a somewhat different light upon the subject, Lord Matresser, but we are still—my colleague here and I—what words can I use? — dumbfounded, shocked, that you should have proceeded without France so far as you have in these negotiations with a country which we consider our common enemy."

"If you press that point, Monsieur," Matresser replied, "I must answer it. I shall have to ask you to believe that the government, on behalf of which I am speaking, can only offer you plain facts and beg you to consider these for a moment from its point of view."

"Your explanation is somewhat confusing," the Premier remarked drily, "but pray continue."

"The English Cabinet," Matresser went on, changing his place slightly to avoid the first rays of sunshine pouring in through the high windows, "realizes that you may have some apparent cause for complaint but it offers you a frank and full explanation. I believe I am correct in saying that the French government has fallen and been reestablished six times during the last thirteen months."

"France remains!" Gaston Desselin exclaimed with theatrical force.

"Precisely," Matresser assented, "but to whom could we turn to expound our scheme? Since we opened tentative negotiations, first of all with a retiring German dictator and secondly with a small but powerful committee of German statesmen, three French cabinets have been established and fallen. You see the point of this, I am sure. Three of those men who must have answered for your country have abandoned politics and gone back into private life. At least one of these was an enterprising journalist who would have been free at any time to publish our scheme to the whole world and thereby destroy it."

Matresser paused. Neither of his auditors had anything to say except that the Premier muttered a name under his breath.

"That fact and that fact alone is responsible for what must have seemed to you our secrecy, a secrecy which would have been ended yesterday before your Cabinet meeting if this terrible mishap had not befallen our Ambassador."

"I withhold comment," the Premier said in reply to a questioning glance from Matresser. "I wish to hear all that you have to say, sir."

"The crux of Lord Somerby's mission here," Matresser continued, "was to explain why it had been necessary for us to work in secrecy, but there was never a time, nor has any modification or variation in this scheme ever been suggested, which lessened the security of France. The agreement which is drawing towards its final settlement, Monsieur Lacheur and Monsieur Desselin, contains the written pledge of Germany to abstain for fifty years from any act of war or aggression against your country and provides you with definite and cast iron pledges that this promise will be kept ....For this you pay—what? You pay nothing. England pays for you."

For the first time Matresser felt that he had impressed his auditors. It is true that they had flinched at that last baldly spoken statement but they listened to it without protestation. Lacheur rose to his feet and paced the room. With a glance of apology towards Matresser, he beckoned to Desselin and whispered for a moment or two in his ear.

Matresser, grateful for the respite, leaned back in his chair. The early morning fatigue of a man who has been without sleep for many hours was stealing upon him. Presently Lacheur and his companion returned to their places. A glance from the former gave Matresser the cue to continue.

"You must forgive me," he went on, "if I have spoken too frankly, but it is at your own request and a misunderstanding between us now would be fatal. England is willing to offer as a free gift those colonies which have cost her millions to subdue, to say nothing of the lives of her soldiers spent in their conquest. I am an Englishman and yet I dare to say that no nation in the world has ever made such a gesture for peace or offered such a sacrifice to bring it about. I ask you, Monsieur Lacheur, and you, Monsieur Desselin, to recognize that fact and to impress it upon your President. Announce it yourself from the rostrum, Monsieur, point to it—why not?—as a diplomatic triumph achieved by your government, and you should remain in office by popular acclaim. Banish forever from your minds any idea that England, who has never ceased to consider you her ally, has any selfish advantage to gain by the carrying out of this great scheme. It is simply a sincere effort to give peace to the world."

There was a brief silence. Monsieur Lacheur exchanged a few words in an undertone with his companion.

"You must forgive us, Lord Matresser," Lacheur said, "if I confess that you have left us—shall I say a little trobule. We recognize your sincerity but the terms in which you have expressed yourself have been, to say the least of it, unusual."

"I am not a politician," Matresser replied, "neither am I a diplomat. I have travelled all my life in different parts of the British Empire and of Europe and I believe I can say that I was among the first to discover the real feeling in Germany. I have interested myself in that because long ago I came to the conclusion that European peace with a discontented Germany could never become a permanent condition."

"The conclusion was without doubt justified but I shall be as frank as you have been frank," Lacheur declared. "Even after your very plausible explanation, neither my colleague nor I wholly understand how you ventured to proceed with these negotiations and preserve such extraordinary secrecy."

CHAPTER XXXV

"I must ask you once more to remember," Matresser said, "that I am here today an amateur in all the subterfuges of diplomacy or the conventions of political methods. If what I say sounds—well, impertinent—forgive me. A fortnight ago, I think it was, you succeeded in obtaining a vote of confidence in the Chamber by a majority of thirteen votes. Supposing you had been in our full confidence and lost that vote, you yourself would have been a political derelict for the time and Monsieur Desselin once more a free-lance journalist. You both would possess information which, if any of it leaked out, would have ruined the whole scheme. To put it plainly, for some days until your successor was appointed, there would have been no France with whom we could deal and a hungry press would be barking at you.'"

Lacheur twirled his moustache nervously.

"So having come to that decision," he observed, "you took the destiny of France into your own keeping and legislated, as it were, for her."

"Do you complain?" Matresser asked.

It was a vital thrust. Neither seemed prepared with a reply.

"A single paragraph, a single headline in one of your newspapers or ours," Matresser continued, "and the affair was finished. Our government would have resigned and the moment would have passed. As things are at present we are in a unique position. Our cabinet has decided upon this measure. We have an enormous majority and it will be law before we go to the country."

"In other words," Desselin observed, with good humored cynicism, "you are going to act first and tell the people afterwards."

"That is our intention, but meanwhile the swing of great events will have started. Germany will have changed her government, her dictator will have resigned. She will become once more a monarchy, but this time a limited monarchy with a predominant Lower House. A similar change in Austria will be brought about without a dissentient vote. Italy will follow her lead."

"And that insignificant but still to be reckoned with country — France," Desselin asked with gentle sarcasm, "what provisions have you made for her continued existence upon the map?"

"Thank us once more for our reticence," Matresser replied. "We have no means of knowing how strong the Royalists of France may be, but it is our profound conviction that your country can never again revert to any form of monarchial government. Your revolution went too deep, cut too permanently into the heart of the people. Nevertheless, our silence, of which you are complaining, has been your security. I will even go so far as to suggest that our government in this instance has acted with generosity. She suffered the worst blow since the war at your hands, my friends, when you fancied you saw salvation in Italy. She stiffened her lips and accepted what was coming to her, but that was the end of the League of Nations."

"You travel fast, Lord Matresser," Desselin remarked. "The League of Nations still functions. It still has a great future."

"The League of Nations," Matresser pronounced firmly, "was moribund from the first day sanctions were declared against Italy and individual countries began to make excuses. The League of Nations was established to act collectively or not at all. The first state which shunned its responsibilities and was allowed to remain in the ranks reduced the League of Nations to impotency."

Lacheur glanced at the clock.

"Lord Matresser," he said, "although we feel that we must offer you our congratulations for the manner in which you have conducted this amazing conversation, you are without a doubt in need of rest. You and I, Desselin, had better go down to Rambouillet and meet our friend here again this afternoon. It is necessary that we confer with the President at once. The final object of your mission, I presume, Lord Matresser, is the cancellation of the orders under which the French Fleet is at sea?"

"Not in the least," Matresser assured him. "It is quite understood at our Admiralty that that sort of business is only a game of chess. Automatically I hear that our North Sea and Atlantic squadrons are both on their way to the Channel, which they will reach some time before your heavier units. Our Home Fleet, too, is looking forward to the opportunity of entertaining your people as soon as their destination is known."

A few moments' awkward silence ensued, but Matresser was prompt to show that, although he had qualified in no school of diplomacy, he still possessed a certain share of the layman's equivalent—tact.

"Our southern Channel ports complain so often of being neglected," he remarked. "I speak only as an outsider now but I have heard it said that a visit from the French Mediterranean Fleet was overdue and would probably relieve the tension in certain other quarters. My own opinion is that for two great and friendly nations there is scarcely enough fraternization between our militant forces."

"May we know your movements for the next few hours, Lord Matresser?" the Premier asked. "It is possible that the President may desire to see you himself."

"I shall be at your disposal," was the somewhat weary reply. "From here I shall go to our Embassy to discover what arrangements have been made for a temporary successor to Lord Somerby, and I shall probably sleep there until I am sent for."

The two French statesmen took formal leave of their visitor. Neither was willing to commit himself to any definite expression. Lacheur touched the bell and a secretary took the departing guest in his charge.

X X X

"It will mean bringing the Americans back to Paris," Desselin pointed out as soon as the two men were alone. "The bourgeoisie will be on their knees to us. One has not heard much of this man Matresser but he seems honest. The whole scheme fits in with the reports we have had from all our agents during the last few months except—"

Lacheur nodded.

"Except that it was impossible to believe that England was not going to ask a big price. Has she any thing up her sleeve with Washington, do you suppose?"

"Impossible!" Desselin declared. "No one knows better than England that the United States army will never fight in Europe again."

"It makes a great headline for the people," Lacheur reflected. "What do you think, my friend? The greatest headline of the century—

"FIFTY YEARS OF PEACE PLEDGED!"

Desselin was swinging his eyeglass recklessly, his mouth was twitching. He presented the appearance of a man tortured with doubts. His fingers were upon the gate which led into the promised land, but fear and doubt still distracted him.

"If one could only trust that perfidious country!" he muttered.

U.S. COMMISSIONS WAR-TIME DESTROYER FLEET

Swinging high in the air from a huge crane is pictured a triple-mount of torpedo tubes soon to take their place on the deck of one of the more than two score destroyers which the U. S. navy is rushing to remodernize. The fleet of war-time destroyers, which were declared obsolete, will soon again take their place with the regular U.S. naval forces. The navy's decision to salvage the long-idle vessels is believed caused by the present unsettled conditions in Europe.

Thick Ice Covers St. Mary's River

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April, 11—(CP)—Ice from 10 to 20 inches thick in the St. Mary's River here brought prediction from veteran rivermen today that navigation at Sault Ste. Marie would not open until nearly the end of this month.

ABBEY RENOVATION

The renovation of the memorials which stand against the stone screen to the left of the door leading into the Chapel of St. Faith at the south end of Poets' Corner, Westminster Abbey, is now in progress.

The monuments include those of Shakespeare, Burns, Southey and Coleridge.

Shakespeare's monument, an upright figure, standing on a pedestal, holding a scroll which bears some lines from "The Tempest," has never been regarded with much favor. Horace Walpole criticised it severely shortly after its erection by public subscription in 1740.

Burns' memorial is abust by Sir John Steel. It was unveiled by the late Lord Rosebery on March 7, 1885.—London Sunday Times.

Plans Formulated to Guard Against Sabotage

R.C.M.P. to Guard Public Utilities In Event of War

Planning War Measure but Might be Used in Crisis of Major Proportions

NO COMMENT

Regina Paper States Armed Force Guarded Public Buildings on Sunday

Ottawa, April 12—(CP)— Plans are being completed by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to guard public utilities, heavy industry and important government buildings against sabotage in event of war.

A high authority in the force said last night that precautionary measures were being taken now in connection with the current war scare and as part of the civil security scheme being worked out for any emergency which may arise.

"We are planning for a war measure but it might be used in event of a crisis of major proportions," the official said.

No General Posting

There will not be a general posting of guards throughout the Dominion unless such a crisis arises or war breaks out and the major problem of the R.C.M.P. at the moment is making "industry alive to its own protection in case of national emergency."

Officials here would not comment on reports from Regina and Winnipeg that R.C.M.P. officers were placed on duty at legislative buildings in the two provincial capitals Monday night, apart from stating that there were no such guards at the buildings yesterday afternoon or last night.

It was indicated that no general order has been sent out from headquarters here for special guards. Any precautions taken are not in connection with rumored activities of Irish republican army sa-

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather on the high seas! Those who contemplate an ocean voyage next May will in general have a pleasant one. The weather over the North Atlantic in May is more moderate than in April. Storms of the winter type, while occurring, are less severe. A journey to Europe, where the season is somewhat more advanced than ours, is likely to be free from serious discomfort. Fogs, however, are on the increase from the Grand Banks to Virginia, and may be expected about half the time in the former area. Over the South Atlantic the northeast trades will have increased in intensity and steadiness, but gales will be infrequent south of the 35th parallel, and May is the pleasantest month of the year for voyaging in the West Indies.

DOG OBEYS MISTRESS' TELEPHONE ORDER TO RETURN

Pocatello, Idaho, April 12 (AP) —When a woman living several blocks away telephoned Mrs. Clara Wood that the Wood police dog was romping in her yard, Mrs. Wood told her to put the dog's ear to the telephone.

"Ted," she commanded, "you come right home."

"Within two minutes," she said, "Ted was back home."

DOCTOR SAYS PRENATAL CARE FACTOR IN CHILD'S HEALTH

Montreal, April 12 (CP)— The period prior to birth is the most important for a child in the matter of health, Sir John Boyd Orr of Aberdeen, noted nutrition authority, said last night in an address delivered under auspices of the Canadian Medical Association. "If our children are to be healthy," he said, "there must be a correct diet in every home for the mothers and again for the children in the pre-school period."

DOGS CHASE DEER IN TOWN OF CHAPLEAU

Chapleau, Ont., April 12 (CP) —Tired of chasing the neighbors' cats, town dogs have taken to purging deer. Within the past week two deer were chased into town by dogs. The first deer fell into the river, was rescued and returned to the bush. The second fell dead after a chase through the streets.

WOULD SPEND $1,000,000,000 ON CHICAGO-DETROIT HIGHWAY

Lansing, Mich., April 12 (CP)— Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner announced today efforts are under way to promote a superhighway between Detroit and Chicago that would cost $1,000,000,000. He said Federal officials were in favor of the plan and legislation towards that end would be introduced in Congress shortly.

HOTEL MANAGERS WEARY OF UNWELCOME GUEST

Detroit, April 12 (CP)—Suburban police worried today over what charge to lay against Herman Hauk, 39, who apparently can't resist the lure of a hotel bedroom.

Hotel managers complained to police he sneaked into the hotels at night and blandly occupied a vacant room. Hauk was arrested after hotel managers wearied of ejecting his refreshed body in the mornings.

ISLANDERS ISOLATED

Kingston, Ont., Apr. 12 (CP) — Wolfe Island residents remained isolated today, with the exception of service supplied by airplane, with the tug Salvage Prince, which has been endeavoring to break thick ice in Kingston harbor, reporting slow progress. A driving snow storm struck the district today with the mercury well above the freezing point.

John Cleland, lighthouse keeper at the head of Wolfe Island, remains isolated. He reported for duty one week ago and had a week's supply of food at that time.

90 Millions Needed by U. S. to Barter Cotton, Wheat for Rubber, Tin

Washington, April 12—(AP)—Advocates of a proposal to barter United States cotton and wheat in world trade for rubber and tin estimated today that the transaction would require about $90,000,000 in funds from Congress.

At the same time, Senator Bankhead (Dem.-Alabama) said that in addition to the barter proposal, he would ask Congress to place more than 3,000,000 bales of cotton pledged against government loans to farmers in a special reserve for the War and Navy Departments.

"If cotton is a strategic war material for England and France, then it should be for this country," he said.

Senators estimated the United States government now has about $45 a bale invested in loans made to farmers on the cotton, so that use of 2,000,000 bales under the barter proposal would cost $90,000,000.

Both Bankhead and Senator Lucas (Dem-Alabama) said the barter plan would not solve the cotton surplus problem.

"It's merely another way to aid in the disposition of the surplus," Lucas said. "Every bale we sell relieves the surplus just that much."

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday that the State Department would begin negotiations within a few days on the barter program and that he hoped it would materialize. Presumably the negotiations would be with Great Britain and the Netherlands, the nations controlling most of the world rubber and tin production.

Asked if the United States would offer a similar barter system to Germany, Italy and Japan, Mr. Roosevelt replied he had not the faintest idea.

ITALY IS GIVEN ANOTHER CHANCE TO BE SINCERE

Must Prove Willingness to Observe Status Quo in Mediterranean

Chamberlain Will Announce Guarantees to Greece and Turkey

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 12—(CP Cable— —Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected to announce military guarantees to Greece and Turkey when he outlines British foreign policy in the light of the Italian conquest of Albania to a special meeting of the House of Commons tomorrow.

Experts of the foreign office are reported drafting the form of the guarantee which both Greece and Turkey are understood to be ready to accept. The exact form of the guarantee will not be known until it is passed by the cabinet tomorrow, a few hours before Mr. Chamberlain speaks in the House.

The Prime Minister also is expected to announce fresh assurances from Rome to withdraw Italian troops from Spain immediately after General Franco's "victory parade" in Madrid May 2.

Treaty Not Denounced

Mr. Chamberlain likely will condemn Italy's use of force against Albania but the Anglo-Italian treaty will not be denounced. It is becoming increasingly apparent that Italy will be given another chance to prove her willingness to observe the status quo in the Mediterranean.

This may produce a first class row in the House, with Labor and Liberal members demanding stronger action against Italy for her breach of the Anglo-Italian treaty.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary for War, saw the Prime Minister this afternoon. Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, Lord Chatfield, Minister for Coordination of Defence, and Sir Robert Vansittart, chief diplomatic adviser to the government, conferred at the foreign office.

The Chinese Ambassador also was called to the foreign office. Later Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, and Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, went to 10 Downing Street from the foreign office.

School Days To Begin at 2 Years

Nurseries Said to Have Advantages

Atlanta, Apr. 12 (AP) — Public school days soon may begin for youngsters at the age of two, instead of the currently accepted six.

Methods for such extension of the responsibility of public education are under consideration by the Association for Childhood Education in its 46th annual convention here.

Mrs. Frances Mayfarth of Washington, D.C., editor of Childhood Education, said United States Government Nursery Schools together with privately sponsored projects had proved advantage for beginning schooling early.

International Briefs

Windsor, England, April 12 (AP) —The King and Queen and Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret took part in air raid practice today.

Together with the Duke and Duchess of Kent they hurried to a bomb-proof shelter in a dungeon beneath one of the Windsor Castle towers when the mock raid warning was sounded.

The castle staff was on "wartime duty" throughout the day with each member assigned to an emergency post. The castle's anti-raid equipment includes a first aid station in the servants' quarters and a gas decontamination depot in the royal mews.

London, April 12—(CP)—The High Commissioners of Canada, South Africa and New Zealand and a representative of the Australian government conferred for an hour with Sir Thomas Inskip at the Dominions office. They were given a full report on international developments and were informed of the government's policy to be enunciated tomorrow.

Rome, April 12—(AP— Greece informed Italy of "full satisfaction" over Fascist guarantees of Grecian sea and land frontiers in a note to the Foreign Ministry today. The note spoke of a "new period of cordiality" in Italian-Greek relations.

The Greek Minister, Pietro Metaxas, called at Chigi Palace with a note replying to the Italian communication delivered in Athens Monday by the Italian Charge D'Affaires.

The Greek note, in the aftermath of the Italian conquest of Albania on Greece's northwest frontier, expressed confidence that the "traditional friendship" of Greece and Italy would continue.

EXPRESS CONCERN AT MOBILIZATION OF ITALY'S ARMY

Foreign Diplomats Wonder What is Behind the Move

1,200,000 CALLED

Rome, April 12—(AP)— Foreign diplomats expressed concern today over Premier Mussolini's undisclosed purpose in putting Italy on a virtual wartime basis by calling men to the colors by hundreds of thousands.

Competent foreign observers estimated the total under arms as high as 1,200,000—largest number since the Great War and exceeding even the Ethiopian war mobilization.

A government statement said the calling of reserves had brought the army's strength to "an imposing level" but the government offered no explanation.

Semi-official quarters said merely that the army was now "sufficiently strong to let the Italian people work tranquilly in the certainty of being powerfully defended."

The official communique said no more classes would be called up "save under exceptional circumstances."

Conservative Leader Seeks Information By Series of Questions

Toronto, Apr. 12 (CP)—Questions concerning insurance carried by the Liquor oCntrol Board of Ontario have been placed on the legislature order paper by Conservative Leader George Drew.

Col. Drew asks with what companies does the board place its insurance, how much with each company, through what agencies were the policies issued, and what premiums were paid each agency in the last fiscal year.

Evidently relating to a charge by Leopold Macaulay (Cons. York South) that gasoline tax rebates were retained by the government in order to help balance the budget, former premier George S. Henry asks:

What was the total amount of gasoline tax rebates in the fiscal year ended March 31?

Col. Drew is also asking what persons other than civil servants assisted in preparing Ontario's brief for the royal commission on federal-provincial relations, and how much was paid to each of them.

'SHOW OF FORCE' ARTICLE APPROVED BY U.S. PRESIDENT

Washington Post Editorial Believes Democracies Can Halt War

IMPLICATIONS TO U. S.

Article Warns U. S. of Results to U. S. by Another War

Washington, Apr 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt stamped with his hearty approval yesterday a newspaper editorial calling for a "preponderant show of force" by democratic nations to halt the European dictators and prevent war.

The editorial, appearing this morning in the Washington Post (Independent), said world war "can still be averted if the free nations are willing to show that they will take a stand before it is too late."

The president ordered the editorial inserted in the minutes of his press conference, saying it was very good, very clear and very honest. He said he wanted it inserted in the press conference minutes so posterity might see what his views had been.

Based On Remark.

The Post article was based on Mr. Roosevelt's remark, as he left Warm Springs, Ga., recently:

"I'll be back in the fall if we don't have a war."

It said this was no casual utterance. "Most Americans realize today that the sweep of events has now brought Europe to the very verge of war," it commented. "What is insufficiently realized is the tremendous implications of the impending catastrophe for every citizen of this country.

"In spite of the best-informed warnings to the contrary many still believe that another world war might leave the United States relatively undisturbed. In spite of the virtual certainty of American involvement there are many who would seek to achieve isolation by panicky legislation, or to seek shelter behind other paper guarantees of immunity."

President's Warning.

To these persons, the editorial said, the president had addressed his warning. His use of the word "we", said the editorial undoubtedly meant western civilization.

"A war affecting its foundations would immediately affect us vitally, whether or not the United States was at the outset physically involved," it added.

Speaking of the way to avert war, the editorial asserted:

"Pressure from the Berlin-Rome axis will not ease until it reaches the point of serious resistance. Then only can a different and honestly conciliatory attitude be expected from the dictators. Nothing less than the show of predonderant force will stop them, for force is the only language they understand. But, like less exalted bullies, force is to them a real deterrent."

Berlin, April 12 (AP)—Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff today characterized as "impertinence" President Roosevelt's "I'll be back in the fall if we don't have war" farewell to friends in Warm Springs, Ga., Sunday.

The newspaper said the President's remark was "coarse barking up the wrong tree and impertinence"

Founder of Basketball Given Honorary Degree

Montreal, Apr. 12 (CP)—Dr. Jas. Naismith, the farm boy who became the inventor of the game of basketball, held the honorary degree today of Doctor of Divinity from Montreal Presbyterian College where he was graduated in 1890.

Dr. Naismith, Professor Emeritus of Physical Education at University of Kansas, made his first formal visit last night to the college in a half century to receive the degree with Rev. O. W. Howard of Montreal Diocesan College and Rev. William C. MacMillan of Collingwood, Ont.

Noted for his work in physical education, Dr. Naismith invented basketball in 1891 at Springfield, Mass., where he spent a year after graduation. After his stay at Springfield, he took a medical degree at University of Colorado and then went to University of Kansas. He retired from active work there only a year ago.

In acknowledging the degree, Dr. Naismith said he had been guided through life by a desire to "leave the world a bit better than I found it".

Only 8 Above In S. Dakota

Chicago, Apr. 12 (AP)—Abnormally low temperatures prevailed over most of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains today. The coldest spots were Park Falls, Wis., Bemidji, Minn., and Aberdeen, S.D., each with 8 above zero. The mercury dropped to the low 20's in northern Ohio and a blizzard whipped that section, including Cleveland. New York City had a low of 38.

Windsor, Ont., Apr. 12 (CP)—Heavy snow flurries struck Windsor district today leaving 10 inches of snow on city streets and a promise of warmer weather tomorrow. Forty men and 112 trucks sanded streets. City Engineer R. J. Desmarais said he could not recall the last time sand was used on snowy streets so late in the season.

London, Apr. 12 (AP)—Londoners complained of the heat today —it was 73 at noon, 10 degrees above yesterday's figure. Parks and swimming pools were crowded. Many office workers ate box lunches outdoors rather than enter restaurants.

EASTERN EUROPE TO BE CONVINCED OF ARMED MIGHT

France Sends Most of Mediterranean Fleet to Unknown Destination

MILLION UNDER ARMS

By CHARLES FOLTZ
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Paris, April 12—(AP)— France today sent most of her Mediterranean fleet cruising to secret destinations and moved swiftly to convince eastern Europe of the power of British and French armed might.

The mission of the powerful fleet which slipped out of Toulon naval base last night was not announced, but it was generally believed the warships were operating under a joint French-British naval command.

It was assumed the French naval movements were in complete cooperation at least with British units concentrating at Great Britain's fortified Malta base, 60 miles south of Italy's Sicily and within cruising range of the Greek island of Corfu.

Movements Blanketed

The naval operations, like the continuous call to reservists from many classes to join France's land forces, were blanketed by the strict military secret laws.

There was no estimate of troops now serving or of those recently called to the colors, but the French

Prince Edward Island Member Says McCullagh Broadcasts Unfair

Charlottetown, April 12—(CP)— Those who "may advance the theory that......when you send men to parliament they immediately become corrupt, they are sowing seeds which will bear bitter fruit," Dougald MacKinnon (Fourth Queens) declared in the Prince Edward Island legislature last night.

Speaking in the budget debate in the all-Liberal legislature, he said:

"We have had broadcast throughout this land over the radio a series of lectures attacking the public men of this country, charging them with incapacity and imputing dishonest motives in the administration of the government by them.

"Those lectures were preceded by a well thought out campaign of advertising through the press by the sponsor and propagator of this trade. The object was to arouse the curiosity of the public concerning those broadcasts before they were delivered and they were as unfair as they were inconsistent.

"This country needs and welcomes into the public life men of vision and integrity and if Mr. McCullach (George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail, which first sponsored the Leadership League, a non-partisan organization) feels that he has anything constructive to offer toward the difficult task of government, I think he owes to the country which made it possible for him, under its protecting laws and out of its natural resources, to accumulate a large personal fortune, a small measure of service and sacrifice.

"And let him bear in mind that it was through such subtle and insidious propaganda that the present fanatical rulers of Germany and Italy won their way to power after they had destroyed all confidence of the people in their established forms of government.

"And I say to him or any one else who may advance the theory that under our present elective system if it is impossible to find men who are sincere or that when you send men to parliament they immediately become corrupt, that they are sowing seeds which will bear bitter fruit.

"For there is no surer way, especially in these times of stress and unrest, of destroying confidence in our present system of government and making it possible for Communism to establish its doctrines in the heart of the nation."

Wants Time to Exploit Balkan Resources, It is Said

Nazi Source Says Hitler to Do Nothing Now to Provoke Two Democracies

NEWSPAPERS SARCASTIC

Nazi Source Also Hints Hitler Convinced Britain and France May Challenge This Year

Berlin, April 12—(AP)— Chancellor Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter ridiculed Great Britain and France for "panic mongering out of weakness" today while an informed Nazi source represented the Fuehrer as determined to do nothing in the next few months to provoke the two countries to armed intervention.

Hitler's newspaper pictured the two democracies as using "brutality" in getting Greece to side with the allied powers during the Great War. It denounced Britain's action against Greece then as an "unparalleled extortion" and remarked, "it can hardly be doubted that England's new role of protector toward Greece emanated from the same instincts of assault."

The Beobachter laughed off Britain's and France's alleged threats of counter measures against the axis in the Mediterranean as "time-worn tricks" and said Britain by her "encirclement" policy was seeking to balance her lack of strength by driving other nations on the barricades for her.

Say Germany Trying to Delay Issue

The well-informed Nazi source represented Hitler as being convinced that Great Britain and France might decide this year is the best for challenging Germany and Italy.

The informant claimed highly placed Germans suddenly have become convinced that their problem now is one of preventing trouble from arising as long as possible.

A man who has good connections with the Fuehrer and with Fjeld Marshal Hermann Goering said that until recently the accepted theory was that the longer war could be postponed the more certainly would Britain and France catch up in armaments.

With Germany's economic penetration of the Balkans, however, he said, the situation was reversed with Germany now in a position to hold out indefinitely in war if she is given two years to exploit Balkan resources. However, there was apprehension, the informant claimed, that France and Britain might strike first.

Germans Report Cyprus Roused

A four-column streamer in Berliner Zeitung Am Mittag told Germans that Cyprus in the Eastern Mediterranean was in a state of violent indignation against British rule.

Yesterday the Voelkischer Beobachter related "phases of the fight against British oppression in Malta", British naval base between Sicily and Northern Africa.

If these two newspapers were indicative of what may follow in the German Press, then the anti-British propaganda which has been increasing in intensity daily will be directed at strategic centres of the British Empire.

120 British Ships Of All Types in The Mediterranean

London, April 12—(AP)—The admiralty today estimated there were "around 120" British warships of all types in the Mediterranean, 30 of these being minor small craft.

This armada includes four battleships, one aircraft carrier and six large cruisers, in addition to destroyers, submarines and other small vessels.

France's newly tightened censorship on army and navy moves kept secret the strength of her forces in the Mediterranean.

ITALY SETS UP FASCIST REGIME

Conquerors of Albania Take Over Country of King Zog

Tirana, Apr. 12 (AP)—The Italian conquerors of Albania called the constituent assembly into session today to set up a Fascist regime over the former domain of King Zog.

Italian military operations which started only five days ago with swift invasion of the small Adriatic kingdom were reported virtually ended after Fascist troops planted the Italian tricolor on the Albanian-Greek border at Biklishta. Continuing guerrilla resistance was expected however.

(The Albanian legation at Paris said "violent fighting" continued at Mati, Debra, Argirocastro and Elbassan in the mountainous hinterland of Albania.

(Dispatches reaching Belgrade, Yugoslavia, from Albania told of strong Albanian resistance north of Scutari and in the south along the Greek border.)

Columnists Should Not Stray Far From Truth

'Calumnists' Defined by Secretary Ickes

New York, Apr. 12 (AP)—Interior Secretary Ickes suggested last night the American Newspaper Guild "see to it that the columnists, who wield so much influence on public opinion, shall not stray too far from the path of truth which is the path of progress".

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Newspaper Guild of New York and for National Broadcast, Ickes discussed what he termed "columnists and calumnists".

A "calumnist", he said, was "an ex-reporter who wastes good white space to spread injurious gossip and disseminate prevarications and even unpunished libels.

"The 'calumnist's' stock in trade is falsification and vilification. He is journalism's public enemy No. 1 and if the American press is to improve itself it must get rid of him."

"Some columnists," he went on, "are fair and reputable and careful to keep within proper bounds; some are unfair and disreputable and recognize no restraints—not even the fear of a libel. It seems to me that a columnist should be entitled to the same rights and privileges as the editor of a newspaper, and no more."

CHILD IS CUT WHEN HIT BY A STONE

Nine-year-old Jackie Gray, residing at 16 Franklin Street, sustained a nasty gash on the head yesterday when he was struck by a stone, said to have been thrown by another teen-aged boy. An unidentified nurse, who was passing at the time, administered first aid and stopped the heavy flow of blood, which followed the injury. P.C. Taylor later investigated and was informed that two other boys, Alan Kiser aged ten and Charles Lloyd, 11, had been engaged in a children's altercation returning from school and young Kiser had thrown a stone directly at Lloyd but it unfortunately struck young Gray, who was walking along the opposite side of South Foster Ave. at the time. The wound was closed by the conveniently-passing nurse without serious results.

BELLEVILLE MEN INJURED AT KINGSTON

News was received from Kingston late yesterday afternoon that dward Baldree and Charles Peters, both of Belleville, received almost similar injuries when struck by a heavy piece of steel during the afternoon while they were unloading off a baggage car at the outer station of the Canadian National Railways.

Both men were removed to the Hotel Dieu Hospital where X-ray examinations revealed that Baldree had a fractured ankle and leg and arm wounds, and Peters an injured foot and fractured wrist.

CITY SPRING CLEANING DELAYED BY WEATHER

Public works officials making the simple notation of "snow" in the departmental weather register this morning added the comment that it will be some time yet before the department is able to tackle the first actual spring work in the city, judging by present weather conditions. Though normally in use long before this date, the city sweeper remains in its garage in the works building after its winter overhaul, and dust on streets is a condition which has not been bothersome since December last.

Employees are at present engaged in the construction of a new huge storage bin for the north end quarry in which work on first stone crushing is expected to be commenced within the next two or three weeks.

Trout Season Opens On April the 29th —If Winter Permits

local anglers who even now are feeling the urge to take rod and line and hike for the northern streams where the speckled trout lie in wait for their lures, will greet the announcement made yesterday by Deputy-Minister D. J. Taylor, Game and Fisheries Department, that they will have an extra week-end this year at their favorite sport. The season will open on Saturday, April 29th, instead of May 1st, as in former years.

The trout are expected to be more plentiful this year because of extensive re-stocking arrangements of the past several seasons.

War Time Pals Meet At Vimy Day Dinner

Not only did the presence of "Red" Newman, Tom Hamilton and Jack Ayre, ex-members of the famous "Dumbells", soldier actors that toured Canada and the U.S.A. in the years directly following the Armistice, result in a joyful reunion of many veterans with the popular soldier-actors, but it also brought together two war-time buddies, who have not seen each other for years.

When Highway Traffic Officer Sam Ervine, and "Red" Newman shook hands last night, there was more behind the sincere clasp than was apparent to the casual onlooker. For years ago, when the Fifty-First Canadian Battalion was in France, these two were inseparable pals. "Red" was the sergeant of the platoon to which the popular traffic officer belonged, and associations were formed there that have lasted down through the years.

Officer Ervine, himself an entertainer of no mean ability "played" with the famous Newman in army theatricals for some time while in France, and other parts of the war zone. They separated when the famous Dumbell Company formed, but have seen each other intermittently down through the years.

Last night, the re-union of the two buddies was celebrated in true soldier style. Newman and his friends were the guests of Officer Ervine and many old wartime experiences were recalled, and relived.

Anti-Aircraft School Slated for Pt. Petre

Arrangements were completed this week for the establishment of a summer training school for Anti-Aircraft batteries at Point Petre, by Lieut. Colonel C. S. Craig, officer commanding anti-aircraft training in Canada, according to a report received from Picton today.

A unit composed of some seventy-seven officers and men will arrive on Monday, May 29th, and will remain in training until August 30th.

Adequacy of the locale near Point Petre for this particular branch of military training was such last year that it is considered likely the location chosen will become a permanent training base for anti-aircraft batteries.

Negotiations for the purchase of the properties are now being made by the Federal Government, it is stated.

Entertainment of High Order Provided at Spring Festival

St. Michael's Parish Co-operates in Planning Affair

SPLENDID PROGRAM

Over one thousand attended the opening last evening of the annual Spring Festival of St. Michael's Parish when entertainment of a high order was arranged for the enjoyment of young and old. All societies of the parish co-operated in planning the three day event and the success of the opening last evening was most encouraging to all those who worked so zealously preparing for the event. The highlight of the program was the amateur contest of which Misses Barbara Donovan and Mona Hartley of Montreal, were joint winners and will compete in the "All-Winners contest on the last night of the Festival.

Splendid Supper

The Festival program opened at four-thirty when cafeteria supper was served by the ladies of the parish. All manner of delicacies were included in the menu and the small tables at which supper was served were very dainty with centrepieces of yellow daffodils. Following supper which was served until about seven o'clock, games were enjoyed by the visitors and at eight-fifteen the amateur contest opened.

Stage Presentation

Selections by Dan Fairman's Top-hatters were enthusiastically received and were followed by numbers by St. Michael's Junior Band. Those who have been following the progress of this group of tiny musicians are amazed at the strides made at each performance and those who heard them for the first time were astounded by the remarkable achievement of the little tots, who handled the big instruments with ease and played with outstanding harmony and volume. An Irish reel by gayly costumed junior students trained by Mrs. Johnstone was a delightful number and received great applause.

Amateur Contest

At the conclusion of this part of the program an interesting amateur contest brought before the audience talented performers from the entire district. The judges Messrs. Norman Edwards, Clifford Holmes and Bert Hanks had a difficult task in deciding the winners who proved to be Barbara Donovan and Mona Hartley, first; Robert Flurey, second; and Shirley Maracle, Deseronto, third.

Mr. Allan Meagher, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Festival, acted as master of ceremonies for the program and welcomed the large audience which filled the auditorium to capacity.

The splendid numbers of music and dancing provided keen competition and the judges in making their decision found the scoring very close among the winners. The various numbers included song by Shirley McCabe, tap dance by Bernice Cook, number by Jackie Marsh's Harmonica Rasslers, song by six year old Ronald Donovan, musical number by Radnor sisters of Ivanhoe, novelty tap dance by Anita Dorie of Deloro, piano accordion number by Miss' Pigeon, boxing contest by the Palmatier twins, tap dance by Barbara Donovan, song by Leo Boudreau, song by Robert Flurey, character song by Charles Cummings of Marmora, tap dance by Marion Adams and Doug. Palmer, tap dance by Shirley Maracle, Deseronto, tap dance by Mona Hartley.

Games and Dancing

After announcement of the winners, the crowd turned their attention to the games which continued until dancing with Dan Fairman's Top Hatter's began. The evening proved thoroughly enjoyable in every way and augurs well for the success of Wednesday's and Thursday's performances. St. Michael's Troop of Boy Scouts were in attendance last evening and looked very smart in their new uniforms. Supper will again be served this evening and a guest artists program will be given. Tomorrow night the "All Winners" amateur contest will be featured.

Door Prize

Much interest centred around the drawing for the five dollar door prize which took place at eleven o'clock, the lucky winner being Norman Barriage.

Police Blotter

While backing his automobile out from the curb along Front Street, yesterday, a motor car driven by Gordon Wood collided with another parked automobile alongside. Considerable fender damage resulted. The owner of the parked vehicle could not be found at the time, but Mr. Wood informed P.C. Taylor of the accident and gave his name and address. The constable placed a police sticker on the windshield of the parked vehicle informing the owner of the incident in writing and giving Mr. Wood's address.

Lewis Little, of the Albert College, yesterday reported the theft of a suit of clothes, which had been stolen from his locker in the school. The suit was three piece, a double-breasted blue suit.

Local police have been quite active during the past three days, having apprehended seven persons on charges of breaking, entering and theft. "We have been fortunate in clearing up several of the more important robberies, which have taken place in Belleville of a recent date," revealed Chief Kidd this morning.

The general influx of transients passing through the city this spring continued last night when 19 weary knights of the road sought shelter in the warm and inviting cell block at the police station.

STIFF WIND NEEDED TO CLEAR BAY OF ICE

One stiff breeze will clear the Bay of Quinte of its present burden of rapidly deteriorating ice, it was observed by waterfront men this morning. All that remains of the formerly solid two-foot thick ice is a heavy mass of mush that reaches about half way across the bay, a mass so soft that even small stones thrown into it readily penetrate its full thickness.

GERALD TYE AND G. ASSELSTINE HELD FOR THEFT

Pair in Company of Two Women Arrested at Cobourg

REMANDED IN CUSTODY

Following a provincial - wide search, at the request of Belleville police authorities, Gordon Asselstine 29, and Gerald Tye, 37, both of this city, were arrested in Cobourg last night on charges of breaking, entering and theft in connection with the recent robberies at the West Dundas St. Supertest service station. Warrants for the arrest of Asselstine and Tye had been issued some time ago by Chief Kidd. Accompanying the two men in Tye's car, when they were arrested, were Olive Asselstine, sister of Gordon and Jemina Martin, both of this city. The women were held on nominal charges of vagrancy by local police.

Belleville police learned that Tye and Assestine had left Grimsby yesterday in the former's automobile and were headed easterly. The information was relayed to Cobourg, where police of that town gave chase when the reported car entered the town and after a short, but hectic chase through the town, police succeeded in halting the fleeing vehicle.

A club bag filled with loose packages of cigarettes, over 150 in all, a quantity of tobacco, cured hams and other goods of wearing apparell, all new, were found in the men's possession when they were apprehended.

Chief Kidd and Plainclothes Constable Fred Izard went to Cobourg last night and returned the prisoners to Belleville where they appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, this morning and were remanded to custody.

Oil Company Screens Travelogue Picture For Club Members

On Monday evening at the Engineer's Hall, Pine Street, the Belleville Enginemen's Educational Club held their regular meeting with Mr. T. H. P. Crozier as Chairman. The Hall was filled to capacity, the highlight of the evening being a sound picture entitled "The Inside Story of Lubrication" describing a trip across Central Africa shown through the courtesy of the Imperial Oil Company and under the direction of Mr. E. Hawker, Service Engineer Railroad Division, and his two able assistants, Mr. A. M. Hamilton and Mr. Harvey Dillane as operators. The members were then favoured with a short address on lubrication by Mr. E. Hawker and then another sound picture entitled "Designed for Power." Among those in attendance were Mr. A. D. MacLean, resident Manager of Imperial Oil Company, Mr. J. A. Murphy, Mr. R. J. Linden, Mr. A. Simpson, all of Imperial Oil Company. Mr. A. Beardshaw, Supt. of Motive Power and Car Equipment., Mr. W. K. Rogers, Assistant Superintendent Belleville Division, Mr. A. H. Jones, Locomotive Foreman, Mr. A. B. Saunders, Division Master Mechanic and Mr. A. R. Pringle, barrister Belleville. The meeting proved very interesting as well as instructive, more especially to railroad men where lubrication coupled with speed are essential to safety. Mr. Hawker spoke briefly and thanked those present for their attention also expressing the wish to make a return visit at some future date. Several present expressed their thanks and appreciation to the representatives of the oil company on behalf of the Club.

Late Planting Season Handicaps Owners Of Market Gardens

Of some benefit to general farming in the district, but a definite handicap to produce growers who have long been delayed in their work this spring, the present weather is described by local seed houses and agricultural officials.

Frost has left the upper soil of the majority of farms in the area for some time, allowing the present surface moisture to penetrate and provide splendid germination for spring planting, and the further moisture from the brief showers and snowfalls has added constantly to this moisture. But in the case of market gardeners the delay has been full of disappointment.

"We are selling stocks now that we usually sell in March", stated Charles Bishop of the local store this morning. "It is generally believed by the majority of farmers that the season so far is nearly a month late, and it will be some time yet before they are able to get on the land. Many of them do not expect to get started until some time in May, which has been one of the latest dates in some time.

"However, even with the late start, farmers are not kicking too much, because there will be still plenty of time for growth, and conditions when we do start will or should be excellent," stated William Staunton, Sidney grower.

District War Veterans Relive Life in France and Flanders As 'Vimy Night' Celebrated

Newman and Hamilton, Troupers of Other Days, Provide Program

FALLEN REMEMBERED

Rev. W.J. Walker Tells Men 'Angels of Mons' Might March Again

The rollicking songs and hilarious comedy of "Red" Newman and Tom Hamilton, against the background of tuneful piano accompaniment by Jack Ayre famous members of the equally famous "Dumbells" returned soldier theatrical troupe of years ago, brought back the lighter side of the usually grim remembrances of Vimy Ridge, famous battle of 22 years ago when Canadian troops emblazoned a glowing page in the book of British history.

The famous troupers of two decades ago, relived the scenes of life in France and Flanders to a large attendance of district war veterans in the City Hall auditorium last night, at the annual Vimy Banquet sponsored by the Army and Navy Veterans of Canada, Belleville, Branch No. 201.

Newman's song "O' it's a lovely war", one that was echoed around the world during the years following the Armistice, was sung last night as it was sung at its first performance. Veterans stood and cheered themselves hoarse as the famous figure in mud-spattered khaki sand-bagged legs, gas-mask and rifle, appeared on the stage with the opening words "Up to yer ears in water."

"Red" was called and recalled, and during his several appearances during the evening sang such well-known numbers as the "Sergeant-Major on Parade", "Stony Broke in No-Man's Land" and "The Stoker" and other popular war-time tunes.

Equally effective were the offerings of Tom Bamilton, Scottish comedian whose renditions of several humorous songs were received with thunderous applause. Hamilton's patter, and tap-dancing, a broad Scottish accent, that brought out to the full his quaint humor had his listeners in paroxysms of mirth. Both artists were called and recalled and generously responded with encores.

Typical Veterans' Banquet

It was a typical veterans' banquet. The gay colored berets of Canada's famous fighting divisions mingled with those of the Imperial forces, with the blue and white of the Royal Navy adding a touch of further color. The old songs were sung 'Tipperary' 'There's a long long trail,' "Mademoiselle from Armentieres", "Apres la Guerre Fini", and other rollicking tunes of the war-days were sung by lusty veteran voices. The Belleville Municipal Band was never heard to better advantage as under the baton of Lieut. Fred Jobson, the old tunes were brought to life in a musical atmosphere that left nothing to be desired.

Nor were those who fell forgotten Following the sumptuous repast, and the toast to "Our Fallen Comrades" responded to by the Rev. W. J. Walker, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, lights in the auditorium were suddenly lowered. Veterans stood at attention with bowed heads. Lights from three candles that stood on a table with two vacant chairs "reserved" flickered over the pale colors of stately Easter lilies lying on the green grass of a grave over which was reflected the shadow of a white cross bearing the letters "R. I. P."

Then the haunting notes of "Last Post" played by Trumpeter Sergeant E. Finden of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) rang out in the auditorium , followed by the lively tones of "Reveille". Lights flashed on, and soldier memory flashed back to the present. Telegrams of regret at their inability to be present, and conveying best wishes were read by Chairman, President J. T. Clarke of the Army and Navy Veterans, from the Rev. A. L. Geen and Colonel W. N. Ponton. Mayor Jamieson Bone, R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P. and Charles A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., were absent through pressure of business.

'To King And Empire'

"We want peace, but there will be no peace until Franco's widow leaving the deathbed of Stalin, learns of the death of Mussolini on her way to Hitler's funeral" declared A. H. Jones, C.N.R. Veteran proposing the toast to the King and Empire.

"We veterans are not passing out, don't think that for one minute," he continued, "for we are here to tell the younger generations how it feels to be in the company of men, who have fought for their King and Empire, men who thought of others rather than of themselves in the Empire's hour of need."

"We hope there will be no war, but if there is, the veterans stand ready to inculcate into the new generations that spirit of comradeship that carried them through the last great struggle."

'Toast to The Fallen'

The memory of the great Vimy victory and of the impressive Easter festival were symonymous, in that while we revere the memory of those who died for us, we rejoice in those that are risen and are living" the Rev. W. J. Walker stated in proposing the toast to the Fallen.

Relating the story of the "Angels of Mons" the speaker stated that "if we are thrown into war, the British Empire would not be fighting alone. Those invisible comrades, who to us threw the torch from failing hands will again march side by side with us. The allied forces would be augmented with those ghostly comrades in their battle against the totalitarian states if war comes."

"We are passing through fateful days. The tyrants of Europe are ready to unleash the dogs of war and cry havoc. "Take up the quarrel with the foe", and not a loyal British subject will hesitate if war should come," Mr. Walker declared "For", quoting the immortal words of the late Col. McRae, "If ye break faith with us who die, we shall not sleep."

Representing Mayor Jamieson Bone and the local members of parliament Ex-Mayor George Tice extended an official welcome to the visitors and guests.

Prior to the banquet, the veterans marched to the City Cenotaph on Station Stree to the inspiring music of the Belleville Kilties Band. Under the direction of Sergeant-Major Sam Johnson, a brief memorial service was held, and a wreath deposited by the Rev. W. J. Walker.

LARGER SCHOOL AREAS URGED

Larger Administration Units Needed After Grade 6 Says McArthur

Toronto, April 11—(CP)— Dr. Duncan McArthur, Ontario Deputy Minister of Education, urged today on the Trustees' and Ratepayers' Department of the Ontario Education Association the need for larger units of rural school administration, particularly for pupils past grade six, but said:

"This is a democratic province. We're not going to have Hitlers in our education system."

The Ontario Department of Education stood ready to co-operate in the setting up of large school areas, but would wait the invitation to do so. There would be no compulsion.

Value of Rural Schools

No scheme of rural co-operation would succeed in Ontario, said Dr. McArthur, unless the groundwork for it was laid in the rural schools. The great need of agriculture in Ontario was to learn how to co-operate and its failure to do so was proving costly.

No better ground for co-operation could be found than in the combination of two, three or four school sections, or even all the school sections in a township, to set up a school for the area to take the grades past grade six and the first two years high school work.

No Change of Grade Six

"My suggestion is to leave the small school as it is up to grade six. The children are too small to be transported. But let us bring together the older boys and girls, including the first two years of high school."

Central schools could provide the training needed by rural youth at a minimum of cost. Central schools would attract better teachers—give a male teacher a job worth doing. Such schools would be better for the pupils' health.

"This type of central school would make a contribution to rural life not possible in the small rural school at present," he said. "We invite your co-operation and wait your investigation. We're not concerned whether it is a township board or a smaller unit."

Drift of Rural Youth to Cities

Dr. McArthur said he felt that the next few years must see action in rural education to prevent the tragedy of the drift of rural youth to the cities where often they join the ranks of the aimless unemployed. Nothing was more important than stopping this drift to the cities. Proper rural education could do it.

"Today our education system encourages rural boys and girls to leave the country. We need a reorientation of the whole system of rural education."

The deputy minister underwent an hour's barrage of questions concerning administration problems peculiar to local schools.

Outlay On School Books.

A woman delegate asked if the department wouldn't do something about the regulation requiring her school section to spend $40 a year for books for general reading for the pupils.

"Forty dollars a year for books," she said. "The schoolroom is packed with them. There'll be no room for the pupils soon if we're compelled to keep on spending it."

"No expenditure you can make is more likely to be productive of good results," said Dr. McArthur. The children should be encouraged to educate themselves from books. There had been too much spoon feeding. A revised edition of a book of standard plans for rural schools would have library space included in the plans.

It was hoped to make arrangements with the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission for special rates for rural schools, said Dr. McArthur.

Complaint of 'Too Many Lights'

A delegate complained that after his section had installed lights, the school inspector said they had too many lights.

"He said all the Hydro was concerned with was selling Hydro," said the delegate. "Who is the authority, the inspector or the Hydro."

Dr. McArthur asked for particulars of the case.

The report of Secretary M. A Campbell recommended an effort to increase permanency in the teaching profession "which will lead to community teachers, experienced, well-qualified and leaders.

"The time should cease when a teacher is dismissed for a petty grievance and when the average salary of a teacher in a rural school with eight or nine classes with many inconveniences receives $700 or $800 and the teacher in a graded school with one class and all the social and economic conveniences receives $1,400."

MACHINERY HAS STRAIGHTENED UP THIS SHAPE

Millet, the French artist, son of a farmer and himself a farm laborer, has in his universally known pictures of—The Gleaners; The Man with the Hoe; etc., left a very graphic record of farming methods and their influence on farm workers of a century ago.

Edwin Markham; the American poet; viewing The Man with the Hoe; interprets it to us with dramatic force in his poem of the same name when he says,

Who loosened and let down this brutal jaw;
Whose the hand that slanted back this brow;
Whose breath blew out the light within this brain.

Ringing out the challenge, he asks—"Is this the thing the Lord; God made and gave dominion over land and sea"; and calls on "Masters; Lords and Rulers of all lands to straighten up this shape".

But each step in this great emancipation has come by the introduction of some new labor-saving machine. Thus by liberating man from back-breaking, brain-deadening toil, modern machinery has done more than all the masters, lords and rulers of all lands to straighten up this shape.

For ninety years now Massey-Harris has played a conspicuous part in designing and making such labor-saving machines and in the development of power and power equipment for farm operations.

GLORIES OF PEACE EXTOLLED

His Holiness Pope Pius XII in his first public utterance on the question of international relations pointed on Easter Day the way back to peace through religion for a world which lives under the threat and fear of war. He spoke of pacts solemnly sanctioned and plighted word losing "their security and value which are indispensable bases of reciprocal confidence and without which ardently desired disarmament, material and moral, becomes with each passing day less possible of realization."

His statement that peace is a good so great that nothing may be more welcome to the ear, nothing more worthy to be desired nothing better may, in short, be obtained, will surely find an echo in every heart.

He spoke of the masses of the unemployed who can fall an easy prey to deceptive mirages insidiously produced by shrews and promulgators of destructive theories.

The Pope referred to the peace of conscience, something to be procured if one has it not and to be guarded and cultivated if one has it. He said that justice demands that legitimately constituted authority be respected and obeyed, that laws be wisely made for the common good, that sacred rights of human liberty and dignity be recognized and guarded and that these goods and those riches which God has strewn in the world for the advantage of His sons be conveniently distributed. This latter reference is to a matter which has been before the nations of the world.

The Pontiff spoke with deep feeling as he said "If men will turn to test the sweetness of this love and will rest in it, the radiant sun of peace will finally rise in the world. Reasoning calm will supplant provocative anger, confident serenity (will supplant) dangerous incitement of the feelings.

CHILDREN CONSCRIPTED

German children from ten to eighteen must join Hitler Youth. That is a Hitler order.

But nothing unusual should be thought of this, because German Nazi tactics should be commonly enough known today.

German hope is that these young will provide the coming bulwarks of the Nazi state against influence of any other political creed.

Germany is dangerous but if the world and Germany could wait until the now young grew up she would be many times more dangerous as the teaching of Naziism would by that time have permeated the souls of the rising population. It is probable there are adults who do not believe in Naziism but dare not openly oppose it in Germany.

Hitler like Mussolini has sowed seed in fertile soil, the minds of the young. The new move will add two more millions to the eight millions of the Hitler Youth Organization.. Il Duce led the way in this but Hitler has gone far beyond him in thoroughness.

Germany's position and the growing power of the democracies have seemingly forced the hand of Hitler into action to achieve before the time when he would have sought to open the German Nazi campaign to dominate Central Europe. Long before the little Hitlerites are able to lend effective co-operation to their government it is to be hoped that something will turn Germany from the armed course she has chosen.

WINDSHIELD AT WILHELMSHAVEN

The bullet-proof glass shield which was in front of Adolf Hitler when he spoke at Wilhelmshaven a week ago Saturday called for an explanation by German authorities who hastened to say that it was used to prevent a cold wind striking his chest and that the shield did not surround him on all sides but in front.

Many in lands outside Germany may have their doubts of the purpose of the bullet-proof glass, especially as it was not back of him. Some have suggested it was a precaution against a possible missile.

Adolf Hitler is known to preserve 'his distance'. This is apparently a natural trait in the man for he lives in a sort of isolation as compared with other public men. That isolation, observers say also lends an air of distinction to a man whom the people know not too well. This reserve of the Fuehrer's may be a factor in the maintenance of his hold on the people of Germany.

The glass shield gave the world a chance to talk and guess.

"OVERHEAD FORM THE NEWLY DECORATED CITY HALL TOWER the sonorous notes of an electric clock pealed forth the hour. From the confines of the covered, well-heated market came the hum of crowds of shoppers. Down the street the imposing tower of the new four-doored Fire Station reared itself against the blue of the sky."

x

The above paragraph from an article in this GFJ recently under the heading "A City of Contentment, Something to Think About" was not the rumbling of a brain storm induced by April 1 aberration but some thoughts of a newshawk induced by the stirring of that progressive spirit which puts all real newspaper men several steps ahead of the procession — thinking of the things that might be, could be, and perhaps should be, in a really progressive centre like Belleville.

x

Old Timers shake their heads when progressive measures are mentioned and gasp something about taxes and the wild thoughts of youth, and the boys that never seem to grow up. They point with pride to the antiquity of the City Hall and the old Town Clock which has stood ninety years, more or less, in the tower.

x

However, is it not better to dream dreams, even if they do not all come true.

x

The newspaper feller who visualized Belleville as "A City of Contentment" had a vision of a Main street free of parked cars, a heavenly dream, but feasible because he found that ample parking spaces drew motorists from the streets and left plenty of room for shoppers to visit both sides of the street in safety.

x

Then the newshawk saw the Belleville policemen of the future in neat uniforms and hats that did not look like the British Grenadiers outfit in winter.

x

Harder to believe is the picture he gave of the City Council of the future, the members of which fraternize like a service club, not a cross word or a fight in a carload. That he failed to see the City Manager of the future must be blamed on astigmatism, or the fact that the City Manager was too busy to give him an audience.

x

There was no smoke from homes or factories and the many industrial buildings were models of beauty and general attractiveness.

x

Then there were not one beach only but many and beautiful beaches where thousands enjoyed the bathing and other water sports.

The picture presented of the fire department of the future hastening to a blaze was marred a bit by the screaming of the siren, a pest which gives many nervous people the jitters today. Surely in the fullness of time the siren on fire apparatus will be eliminated

In "A City of Contentment" there will be no floods for the Moira, has been harnessed and made to behave, so that the flood waters are held back and reserved for the hot days of the summer when instead of ragged rocks, garbage and stench there will be a robust flow of water between the beautiful esplanades on both sides of the Moira.

x

Climaxing a beautiful dream with a vision of happy homes on which the burden of taxes rests lightly because of a young crusader Mayor of the era of high taxes on real property who fought the dragon almost single handed and aroused the entire nation to the imposition. Now the dreaming newshawk saw homes arising on every side because they were not menaced with confiscatory taxes.

And so, while the past fifty years has not witnessed civic improvements on a large and comprehensive scale there is no reason to doubt that the next fifty years will witness a steady march of modern ideas expressed in civic improvements — already this spirit of progress is manifest among Belleville merchants, revealed in new and handsome store fronts and modernized interiors. When the wish is father of the thought folks look forward with longing and when anticipation becomes realization wonder why they put up with awkward things so long. However, even "A City of Contentment" without all the improvements visualized would be a decided gain. A city, as a nation, without vision, must perish.

TALLEST TREES

It is beyond question that California now has the tallest trees. There the tallest known standing tree is 346 feet high. This tree is known as the "Founders Tree," a redwood. Its girth at the ground is 47 feet and its diameter at breast height (4½ feet from the ground) is 15 feet one inch.

In Australia the tallest trees are found in Victoria. The tallest standing tree in 1938 was a mountain ash 301 feet six inches high, with a diameter of five feet nine inches six feet from the ground. As severe fires swept through the area in which this tree was growing, in January, 1939, it is not yet known if the tree is still standing.

Victoria certainly once had taller trees than California. One authentic record for a Mountain Ash gave the measurement of 375 feet in height with a six foot diameter taken six feet from the ground. The tree was felled in 1880 and contained 100,000 cubic feet of timber. Another authentic measurement for a Victorian Mountain Ash is 347 feet.—Australian Press Bureau.

MARS APPROACHES

Speaking of the prospect of war—Mars himself is rushing at the earth at a furious pace, and will approach very close on July 23.

Pretty close, that is. Very close only in the astronomical sense. On July 23 he will come within 36,030,000 miles of the earth. Considering that he is now 176,000,000 miles away you might call that near approach in July 'pretty close' as those things go, out there in inter-stellar space.

Note the date. And don't forget to look under the bed for Martians.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

STRANGEST WAGER

Interest has been aroused by a prosecution at Newport, Monmouthshire, when the parents of a youth were sentenced for confining him to his room for two years.

An even longer confinement came to light in the middle of last century, after a wager between Lord Cecil and an American named Walter Hastings. They had been arguing over the effect of solitary confinement on the human mind, Hastings inclining to the view that it was not such a terrible punishment as many people supposed. Lord Cecil, however, refused to agree with him, and jokingly offered £10,000 to any man who would submit to voluntary confinement for a period of ten years.

Hastings immediately took him at his word, and allowed himself to be imprisoned in a small room at Lord Cecil's home on May 2, 1860. He was supplied with candles, books, and writing materials and fed at regular intervals by servants whom he was not allowed to see.

Hastings kept to his bargain, emerging from his improvised cell exactly ten years later but altho' only thirty-five years old he looked like a man of seventy. He duly collected his £10,000 from Lord Cecil and returned to America, where he died four years later. — Manchester Guardian.

EARLY SEEDING

When it comes to being in the vanguard in respect to farming, Southwestern Ontario takes the prize. This is once more proven by the fact that some farmers in Kent County have already commenced the sowing of oats. Mr. John Sales, of Raleigh Township, as an experiment, sowed five acres in January, while Mr. Walter Russell, of the same township, has 23 acres in seed.—Windsor Star.

THE SOLDIER'S PAY

Here is a point which is always a vexed question among returned soldiers.

While the men were fighting in the actual battles for $1.10 per day, other men were making from $10 to $30 or more per day manufacturing munitions.

In one plant moulders went on strike twice during the war. They did not go back to work until they were paid $18 per day, which is pretty high even in wartime.

But while the moulders were doing that, the soldiers were slogging away for their same old $1.10 per day. And, if any soldier tried to go on strike he was executed for treason.

When the legislators are talking about war profits, they might do something about equalizing the pay of the fighting men with that of the lads who stay at home and make munitions.

Here is a list of some of the munitions Canada manufactured and sent to Great Britain or the Allied Forces in France and elsewhere during the Great War:

Shells	65,343,647
Fuses	29,638,126
Fuse parts	16,174,073
Cartridge cases ...	48,627,673
Percussion primers	35,386,488
Shell forgings	6,412,115
Explosives; chemicals (lbs.)	111,297,107
Metals; compounds (lbs.)	107,282,336
Lumber (feet)	53,327,107
Exploder containers	13,285,000

That's an impressive showing. — W. S. Clark in Windsor Star.

PLAYING HOOKEY

Two Hamilton district girls 15 and 16 years old, played hookey from Waterdown high school the other day, hitch-hiked to Windsor and ultimately landed in the hands of the police. All of which distresses us less than the fact that the truants, according to their own story, left the Hamilton area "to visit friends in Jersey City." Grown men and women participating in the aforementioned ask-me-another program may indulge in considerable blind flying, but shouldn't we expect better of Canadian high school students?

Windsor is some 200 miles west—bearing slightly south—of Hamilton, whereas Jersey City is about 350 miles east—also bearing slightly south—of which they started. Yet, no doubt, our Waterdown damsels will end up all right, wherever it is they're going. So maybe it doesn't really matter after all. —R. M. Harrison in Windsor Star.

CZECH EXHIBITION

Word has come from overseas that the German "protectors" of Czecho-Slovakia are willing to have the local Czecho-Slovak Chamber of Commerce go ahead with its pavilion at the World's Fair, provided that no anti-Nazi propaganda be conducted or allowed on the premises. The German government is even willing to omit the swastika emblem—perhaps more than willing, since that trade mark is not likely to do much business in these parts.

This scheme is cleverer than most of those which have been concocted in Berlin. We hope our Czech fellow-townsmen will not be deceived by it. Better an uncompleted building than one which can be at best only a reminder of violence and treachery, at worst a deception. Unfinished, the Czech pavilion will stand as a memorial to a courageous people and a brave adventure in democracy.—N. Y. Times.

Insulin to Increase Strength and Weight

I have spoken before of the tests made by Harvard research physicians on the runners competing in the Boston Marathon. They found that the blood of the runners who were the leaders at the finish, or who finished in the best physical condition, contained a large amount of sugar, whereas the blood of those who were last in finishing or who finished in poor condition contained only a small amount of sugar.

In the race the following year, these research men had some of these poor finishers with low blood sugar take some sugar during their training and also during the race. Without exception, all these runners taking this extra sugar finished near the top and in much better physical condition.

For years it has been known that when too much sugar was in the blood, fat would be formed from this sugar and diabetes might readily follow. It would seem that there is the other side of the picture, that is cases where the blood does not seem to hold enough sugar to give the necessary energy and these individuals are thin and always tired or tire very easily.

Dr. S. Dorst, Cincinnati, in American Journal of Medical Sciences, Philadelphia, reports his observation of sixty-two patients whose blood did not hold sufficient sugar, with the result that they were weak and under-nourished.

In order to help the blood to hold and use more sugar, they were treated with a small dose of insulin (five units before breakfast and ten before lunch and dinner). A number of these patients showed great improvement, an increase in the sense of well-being, gain in weight and increased appetite. The insulin raised the blood's ability to hold and use sugar.

While Dr. Dorst is unable to explain just why insulin raises the 'sugar curve' in the blood, he suggests that it may be that the insulin has the power of breaking down and using some of the sugar stored in the liver. That this may explain the action of insulin is brought out by Dr. W. Bruhl, Berlin, whose experiments tend to prove that the functional (working ability) of the liver can now be made known by giving insuling and noting the blood sugar curve.

For these very thin individuals who eat plenty of food including sugar and starches, the use of insulin may prove of great help in increasing weight and strength.

TEN CENT WORD

Everybody talks economy and almost everybody insists on using a ten-dollar verb like "implement" where a good democratic five-cent verb like "apply" or "enforce", or "carry out" would do. Nations are all the time implementing or being called upon to implement treaties and pledges. Governments are urged to implement their domestic laws. To implement a law is to make it effective. To implement a treaty is to keep one's word. It is not many weeks now before small boys will be calling upon their fathers to implement that promise about the circus.—N.Y. Times.

ESPERANTO THRIVES

It is a little over 50 years since a Polish eye doctor devised a new and easily-learned language he called Esperanto, which, he hoped, would be taught in every country so that one day it would become an auxiliary universal language enabling people in every country to talk or write to each other. Progress has not been made to the extent anticipated by the inventor or those who took it up, although at the present time there are about a million people who are Esperantists.

There seems, however, to be a quickening of interest. At a convention in Edinburgh recently a high school teacher from Aberdeen reported that in his school voluntary classes were formed and over one hundred boys are learning the language rapidly. Although the classes were only started last year the boys were already carrying on correspondence with other Esperantists in France, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Bulgaria, Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia, Yugo-Slavia. It was also revealed that Esperanto is being added to the accomplishments of British Boy Scouts and a national shield is being competed for.

It is certainly a remarkable and interesting thing that schoolboys with only about a year's study should be able to correspond with boys in nine other countries. Ten countries and ten languages but all able to write and speak the same tongue. Obviously valuable and interesting friendships are being formed, enabling these lads to understand the viewpoints of each other. If Esperanto were taught in every school throughout the world what a useful thing it would be. Not only would people feel more disposed to travel to lands where they had friends of other nationalities but would get to know each other and the countries — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

CHAMBERLAIN AT 70

The Prime Minister is 70, and everyone, irrespective of party or of agreement or disagreement with his policy, will combine congratulations with deep sympathy for a man for whom the anniversary must inevitably be darkened by the weight of responsibility he has to carry.

The physical element in politics is often forgotten, though a book might be written on the part played by tired men's decisions on great affairs or critical moments in history. Mr. Chamberlain's physical endurance was demonstrated spectacularly at the time of his flights to Germany last September, but the engagements he fulfils on almost any day in any week are a notable testimony to a physique which he no doubt owes primarily to Nature, but secondarily to a studied self-discipline.

Neither of his two immediate lieutenants, Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare, one of them four and the other eleven years younger, is his equal in stamina.—London Spectator.

BARBAROUS TREATMENT

We read that the House of Representatives in Lansing has passed a bill re-legalizing the docking of horses' tails.

The measure if finally enacted will permit a barbarous treatment of dumb and defenceless animals which was supposed to be banned forever.

And the fact that under the provisions of the bill "docking is to be permitted for show purposes only" does not make it a bit less objectionable.

The Michigan Humane Society is protesting and it should have general support.—Detroit Free Press.

EASTERN EUROPE

press said yesterday's cabinet meeting was "very satisfied" with the country's strength.

Previous estimates had indicated France had more than 1,000,000 men under arms.

The well-informed newspaper, L'Ordre, said "everything is perfected, including war stocks of arms and equipment of all sorts." That statement was echoed by the entire Paris press, which also carried estimates that Italy now had 2,000,000 men in arms.

(Foreign observers in Rome said they believed Italy had summoned perhaps as many as 1,200,000 men to service).

France Gives Guarantee

On the diplomatic front, where France was acting in the same secrecy as in the field of military preparations, Premier Edouard Daladier himself was said to have offered Rumania, France's guarantee that Russia, her ally, would not try to seize Bessarabia, a Rumanian province at one time Russian.

He sought to persuade Rumania to accept Russian support in men as well as arms in event of war.

France's particular province was to stifle Rumania's fear of Russia as an ally, so that Moscow might be drawn solidly into the anti-aggression bloc in eastern Europe.

Officials said French guarantees would be given "automatically" to all states in southern Europe whose independence is guaranteed by Britain—notably Greece, Turkey and Rumania.

"Britain and France march as one power," was the official view.

Efforts Useless Belief

Some French observers, however, were critical of the exchanges reported continuing between London and Rome, in an effort to swing Premier Mussolini away from the Rome-Berlin axis as "useless".

Italy's strengthening of her war machine, reports of Italian troop concentrations at Rhodes near Greek-Turkish waters, further disquieting reports of building of fortifications in Spanish Morocco along the frontiers of French Morocco, and the continued stay of Italian legionnaires in Spain were factors causing the French to consider any further efforts to "appease" Italy with skepticism.

His wife and children have already returned to America.

AT THE BELLE

"SAY IT IN FRENCH"

"WINGS OF THE NAVY"

Paramount has at last found the perfect vehicle for its newest star, Olympe Bradna, in the gay comedy, "Say It In French" which comes next to the Belle Theatre. And, to make good better, Ray Milland forms an ideal screen partner for the pert and vivacious actress.

"Say It In French" combines sophisticated farce with merry romance as it tells what happens when a handsome young American playboy, Milland, comes home from a trip abroad with a French bride, Miss Bradna, only to find that he must immediately announce his engagement to a wealthy debutante or allow his father to go bankrupt. Miss Bradna, always the practical Parisienne convinces him to become engaged while she, in order to avoid separation, takes a job as maid in his family's home.

From this moment on the romance plunges forward at a dizzy pace. The debutante, played with madcap abandon by lovely Irene Hervey, learns of the ruse, and instead of being angry, joins in the game, trying to get her grandfather, upon whom everything depends, to help out the young man's family. Meanwhile, Milland tries to live the life of a respectable engaged man under the same roof as his pretty bride. Events reach a hilarious climax when the butler finds him in the "maid's" room at daybreak, while his mother soon learns that her "perfect servant" is expecting a visit from the stork!

The stars are supported by a fine cast, including Mary Carlisle, in a more dramatic role than we are accustomed to see her in, Janet Beecher and Holmes Herbert.

As a special treat, Miss Bradna sings a brand new song, "April in My Heart", which was written especially for her and promises to be one of the hit tunes of the season.

"Wings of the Navy"

Produced with the unstinted cooperation of the United States Navy, "Wings of the Navy," is the companion feature attraction which effectively dramatizes the thrilling story of naval aviation, with a cast headed by George Brent, Olivia de Haviland, John Payne and Frank McHugh.

The most successful in the past of all the Hollywood studios in making fine screen material of the lives of the members of the nation's defense forces, the Warner studio confidently expects "Wings of the Navy" to be acclaimed as the best of all its service pictures.

The background of the new picture lends itself naturally to the depiction of impressive and thrilling scenes, and the studio, with the navy's aid, has taken full advantage of the opportunities presented.

About 600 planes, including every type used by the navy, are shown at various times in the course of the story, and there are several shots in which scores of planes take off or land in succession or are seen aloft simultaneously in breath-taking vistas of mass flying. There are also many exciting shots of dazzling manoeuvres by individual pilots and several bits of action—including three crashes—which are bound to electrify the beholder.

Aside from the thrilling and engrossing flying background, the picture is marked by a human and moving story of brotherly affection and a charming romantic motif which for a time, however, threatens to shatter the bonds between the two brothers, played by Brent and Payne, for they both love the same girl, played by Olivia de Haviland.

AT THE McCARTHY

"STAGECOACH"

With Claire Trevor and John Wayne playing the top roles, Walter Wanger's new frontier drama, "Stagecoach" which comes next to the McCarthy Theatre unfolds a gripping story of pioneer courage—of the brilliant heritage that has descended to young Americans from men who fought and hewed a nation out of a wilderness. It is a saga of brave women who went with them to bring comfort and love to lonely outposts. It was filmed before a backdrop that took sun, wind and rain thousands of years to build and color—Monument Valley, 180 miles from the nearest Arizona railroad.

Louise Platt, George Bancroft, John Carradine, Andy Devine, Thomas Mitchell, Tim Holt, Donald Meek, and Berton Churchill, featured in support of the stars, portray the strange group of passengers thrown together with the coach at it proceeds from Tonto, Arizona, to Lordsburg, New Mexico. John Wayne portrays the role of Kid Ringo, who has been driven to outlawry by perjurers and is determined to kill them. Claire Trevor impersonates Dallas, a woman of easy virtue who has been forced out of town by the self-righteous citizenry. Among the others a Virginia-born expectant mother, a mysterious gambler, a dipsomaniac doctor, a blustering bank absconder, a timid whisky drummer.

While the pounding hoofs carry them closer and closer to shrieking war cries and blood-hungry tomahawks, these incongruous individuals are absorbed with the purposes and hates that have propelled them into the hazardous journey. Each knew that Geronimo was on the war path. Each knew this meant torture or death if the coach was attacked—yet they went. They travel across a vast panorama of primitive splendor in a solitary stagecoach which careens and rocks behind six galloping horses, with each mile bringing them closer to a waiting band of murderous Apaches.

"Stagecoach" was directed by John Ford, who also directed "Hurricane" and Victor McLaglen in "The Informer" two great screen productions. Due to the tremendous suspense developed in "Stagecoach" we recommend that you see it from the start, which begins after the presentation of an all technicolor Merrie Melody cartoon and an excellent all star comedy entitled "Projection Room."

"Topper Takes a Trip"

Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke and Alen Mowbray head the comedy cast of Hal Roach's hilarious comedy-feature "Topper Take A Trip" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre and we urge all who wish to see the funniest picture ever made—not to let anything else stand in their way—but to see "Topper Takes A Trip."

A SOLUTION

Belleville Men's Chorus Reorganized

The Belleville Men's Chorus has again re-organized after being inactive for two years. The chorus is under the management of Mr. Harry Moorman, general manager; Mr. S. R. Burrows, Secretary-Treasurer; Mr. Alec Gordon, accompanist and Mr. Ross Hunter, musical director.

The Belleville Men's Chorus brought distinction to Belleville for three years in promoting beautiful music and giving the music loving public an opportunity of hearing the best in outside artists. They have been rehearsing for the past two months and are contemplating giving several sacred concerts after regular Sunday evening services in some of the different churches.

This coming Sunday evening April 16th they are giving their first sacred concert in the Tabernacle United Church at 8.30 p.m. The guest speaker with the chorus on this occasion is Professor Gilmour of Queen's University, Kingston. It is to be hoped that the Belleville people will appreciate the efforts of this organization and will give them every support possible.

DEANNA DURBIN ROMANCE DENIED

Deanna Durbin, Canadian-born, golden-voiced screen star, is pictured here dancing with Assistant Director Vaughn Paul at the Victor Hugo cafe in Hollywood. Reports circulated that Miss Durbin and Paul might elope were emphatically denied by the screen star's mother, Mrs. Ada Durbin. Although the star's mother asserted that "Nothing could be more silly," Hollywood gossip persisted that a romance exists between the two.

Bridal Showers of Many Kinds

Showers given in honor of the about-to-be married girl may be just "sprinkles" . . . attractive and useful trifles from the five-and-ten . . or they may be deluges of importance and fairly expensive gifts for the new home. The kind of shower we choose depends on many circumstances, mainly on the home-plans of the couple and on the budgets of the guests.

There are several newcomers to the list of showers, keyed to the modern world of equipment and to differing types of entertaining. The other day I went to a Gadget Shower, very amusing, and, I must confess, distinctly envy-arousing, for I yearned to have every one of the garden gadgets with the happy clevery-designed devices, even the destiny of being used in the garden of the rose-covered cottage of dreams.

High in popularity too is the buffet accessories shower, accessories in silver, modern pewter, brass, aluminum, wood, china, glass and chromium. This kind of shower offers a wide price range, a quality that should be kept in mind in planning a shower: Some friends may then give an important gift; friends with limited budgets may with no embarrassment give trifles.

Lucky the bride who has an electric accessories shower given for her. If the number of guests is to be a large one, it might be wise to assign several groups, each to join financial forces to give one important item.

A shower comes at the moment when a bride-to-be is beginning to be recipe-minded, and she will welcome a recipe-shower. On the market are excellently-planned recipe boxes and recipes printed or typed on cards for the boxes. Then each guest gathers together and types several of her (or her mother's or her friends' favorite recipes. A practical shower, and an inexpensive one.

Another inexpensive shower . . . wise, too . . . . is a Pantry-Shelf Showers, jars and tins of "favorite brands".

Another low-budget shower is a Paper Shower, with gifts of shelf-edgings and shelf-papers, paper doilies, lamp shades, decorative wrapping papers, a "paper trousseau", consisting of letter-papers of several sizes, and cards. A Bridge Shower too (all necessary items for bridge table equipment) is an inexpensive shower. Amusing too, is a five-and-ten cent shower, or a five-ten and twenty-five cents nothing over shower.

Kitchen showers, practical glassware, and china showers, bathroom accessories showers, need especially careful consideration nowadays, when there is the question of ensemble, pattern and color. Linen showers never, of course, lose their popularity.

There doesn't live the bride-elect I think, who is not enchanted to have a lingerie shower, a stocking shower, a dressing-table accessories shower, a "beauty accessories" shower.

And if none of these suggestions appeal to you, there's always the good old stand-by . . . the "miscellaneous" shower!

Men, Women and Hats

Will men never begin to understand women?

Take this matter of hats. You've heard a good many complaints, during these last months, about women's hats. The most recent one is voiced by M. Andre Simon, of London, the great European epicure. M. Simon doesn't like the present fashions in hats. He says:

"If women all over the world paid half as much attention to what they put on their tables as they do to what they put on their heads, the world would be a better place."

He pictures women as dividing their time between their milliners and their mirrors, and he thinks they would be better occupied if they spent these hours preparing roasts and souffles for men to eat.

No doubt M. Simon knows all about rare, delicious foods, but wise as he may be, he has still a thing or two to learn about women.

It doesn't seem to have occurred to him or to any other man why women have been balancing pert little saucers on their foreheads, posing half-moons above their impossibly innocent faces; fascinatingly draping themselves in wimples.

But the reason is simple enough: The poor things hadn't been getting enough attention. Husbands, fiances, men in general, had for several years been giving far too much time to business. Then, no sooner did they escape from the office and the pursuit of money than they drove cars or played golf or watched baseball. Meanwhile, the women they were married to, or hoped to be married to, might take endless trouble to array themselves becomingly. Not a word of praise from their unnoticing men that the women didn't drag out!

In the days of demure, sensible conservative millinery did any husband ever say voluntarily to his wife, in warm admiring tones: "My dear, what a charming new hat you are wearing! And how beautifully it goes with your dress, which by the way must be new too. I love to see you come out in something new and fresh and smart."

Not he.

It seemed to women that for all the notice they received they might as well wear the oldest hat in their closets. They might as well, indeed, be invisible. So you see what happened. All of a sudden, they blossomed out in headgear that men had to look at, and did. The blind male creatures sat up and took notice. They commented, and perhaps they criticized, just as M. Simon is doing now. But that disturbed nobody. The result was achieved. Men looked at the familiar faces of the women they loved as if they saw them for the first time.

"You're too good-looking to wear that silly sort of hat," they would remark, scowling, to their wives. "I'd like to see you in something that would show how pretty you are. And how about coming out to dance with me tonight, and having a bit of supper?"

And the wives of course smiled to themselves behind their wimples and kept their secret. For themselves, they might not particularly fancy a crazy little tuft of a so-called hat, attached to one side of the head, with a cerise veil flying from it. But if it had the effect of making one visible to one's menfolk, it justified itself.

No more "mannish" clothes for a while, they said to themselves. No more sensible, comfortable "sport models". No more neutral colors and close-fitting lines.

And if the cleverest man in the world don't understand what is going on, that's perhaps so much the better.

Have men ever understood what was going on?

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Older Child Has Better Chance When Fighting Measles

At this time of the year measles is found in many communities throughout the land. At its most infectious stage before the rash appears and before we are aware of what the trouble is, this is an illness that should not be held too lightly.

There are two types of measles: the common variety and the German measles. Ordinary measles constitutes the more important type because it is a much more serious type of infection.

Distinctly a disease of childhood, it can be pretty serious because of complications which may follow. Its highest mortality rate is with children between the ages of two and four. Everything should be done to keep your child from contracting the disease, for the older he is, the greater is his stamina and strength in fighting the poison.

Measles is widespread and may occur at any time of the year but early spring usually sees it at its height civilized races seem to stand it better than other. I know that the Indians, when they take it, are very sick, possible because it is a comparatively new disease to them, and they haven't had a chance to build up a resistance to it.

This is another of the infectious diseases that the Quintuplets have never had. Every time there is an epidemic, we keep our fingers crossed, for it is so infectious that it might invade the nursery in spite of all our precautions. If one of the little girls took it, the others might follow suit. I say this because when one gets sick, the other four nearly always follow her example. If we had the five of them down at once with measles—or any other infectious disease, for that matter we certainly would have our hands full. In the meantime we are trying to make big, strong, healthy girls of them so if these diseases do strike, they will be in the best possible condition to combat them.

The usual story of a child developing measles starts when he is exposed to the contagion. From ten to fourteen days later, he begins to show the symptoms. He develops what seems to be an ordinary head cold; he has a fever, a persistently running nose and a slight cough. In a couple of days, the fever drops. If your doctor examines him at this stage, he will find the first definite symptoms — a peculiar rash on the inside of the cheeks and on the soft palate. It consists of a few bluish, reddened areas about the size of peas. They are called Koplik's spots, after the name of the man who first identified them with measles.

These spots always indicate measles for they do not appear with any other disease. In about two days after these spots have been noted, the first signs of a rash will make its appearance. This rash appears first on the sides of the face, then on the chin. Later it spreads down onto the chest. At first it consists of many small, round, slightly raised areas varying in colors from pink to bright red.

In a couple of days this rash changes color; the little round spots become irregular blotches of pink, lightly raised tissue. After it has spread to the chest from the face and neck, it will spread until it covers the whole body.

"Cone crown" sailor in rough straw is widely banded in gay ribbon, and has streamer ribbons at back. It is designed by Sally Victor for this season's smartly tailored suit costume.

Shirred jersey is new in flattering pastels, such as the blue violet chosen by Sally Victor for this hat. Tilted brim accents the profile, and flowing veil is a lovely blending color, perfect with dark suit costumes.

"Little" Suits, Suit Frocks, Basic Wardrobe for Spring

"Little soft suits", soft "suit frocks" and dozens of styles in costume suits achieve new smartness as the basic costume around which may be built a complete Spring wardrobe. Following the "little girl" silhouette, even the immaculate tailleurs have that tiny-waisted basque look which distinguishes this year's silhouette.

Wardrobe suits, with fitted jacket suit and topcoat, have become Spring perennials, and the smart woman would not think of being without one. But this year's 3-piece suits are new and different, for they combine fabrics and colors that make them daring in their use of plaids with plains, checks with plaids, and rugged looking stripes, or brilliant sparkling tweeds. Topcoat suits in tailored styles, casual tuxedo front suits worn over cardigans, fitted reefer suits and new swing-back sports suits, all appear in the bright pastels and rich hues that make this the most colorful season ever seen.

New Tricks in Jackets

The smart woman may choose a new longer-jacket tailleur in neatly striped navy and white or a gay young bolero jacket in a "little suit" with frilly blouse. She will also need in her Spring wardrobe a slim boxy jacket in amusingly colorful plaid or stripes worn over a contrasting cardigan suit, or a topcoat suit in casual styling made of a brightly nubbed tweed, perhaps over a trim suit of beige or plain color. If she goes to the country, or likes motoring, she will want one of the rugged sports suits made with a brilliant striped or plaid swagger coat, worn over a tweed shetland suit in warm or neutral colors. Or she may prefer a new rippled-back swagger coat that is roomy and easy to slip on and off.

Important "little girl" suits, little "soft suits" and new Basque suits will be the smart woman's choice for dr 7 daytime occasions.

Blouses "Dress Up" The Suit

Everywhere this Spring, we see the daintily starched frills of new blouses, perkily protruding from the tops of trim little suits of navy or black. Embroideries and lace give a feminine look!

'High Shades' Accent Spring Accessories

High exotic shades give to this year's gloves, handbags and jewelry, new color emphasis contrasting with navy or black costumes, blending beautifully with the gay new range of rosy tans, blues, and other lively tones in costume colors. Fuchsia and Cyclamen pink, amusing violet and blue shades, and lovely warm tans make a rainbow of color in the smart woman's accessory wardrobe.

"Shortie" gloves in gay shades go with huge sleek bags in exactly matching hues. Longer gloves in more subtle tones are seen with afternoon costumes, sometimes matching or blending with soft flower colors of neckwear and veil.

"World's Fair" Jewelry

Streamlined handbags replace the soft pouches of last Winter. Sleekly fitting gloves are without side seams, and as soft as the finest leathers can make them. Modern jewelry, brilliant with semi precious stones, is seen again. And with all of this modernistic trend, the most "frou-frou" of neckwear stands out at ultra feminine necklines.

BIRTHDAY PARTY HELD AT HAROLD

At the home of Lewis Wilson, Harold, Ont., a birthday party in honour of Mrs. Garnet Meiklejohn of Edmonton, and Mr. Arthur Wilson of Halloway was held. Mrs. Meiklejohn was presented with a silver tea service and a cup and saucer were presented to Mr. Wilson; about 30 relatives were present at the dinner.

Her first visit here in 26 years Mrs. Meiklejohn left Saturday for her home in Edmonton after six weeks renewing acquaintances.

Dear Mabel:

It is a very great joy to us your relatives, to have you again in our midst.

Some years have passed by and you will see many changes physically, but our hearts are still filled with warm regard toward one another, and it is to extend to you some of this regard that we have gathered here today.

We learn that you are celebrating another cycle of your life while among us and it is our wish that you may yet be granted many more years, and possibly another opportunity to be with us again.

It is in our hearts today to
Do noble things, not dream them all day long,
And so make life, death and that vast forever,
One grand sweet song.

In token of this we ask you to accept these gifts in remembrance of your birthday and visit with us.

Today's Menu

By BETSY NEWMAN

Soybean Souffle Buttered Cabbage
Apple and Celery Salad
Fluffy Layer Cake Coffee

I do not see why you cannot substitute plain navy beans for the soybeans in the souffle recipe, if you prefer. But we should all get used to using the latter. Experts tell us that soybeans contain many valuable food substances, and are economical besides. The recipe is taken from a department of agriculture bulletin.

Soybean Souffle—Three cups soybean pulp, three eggs, one tablespoon chopped onion, two tablespoons chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste are required. Beat yolks of eggs and add them to the other ingredients. Then fold this mixture into the well-beaten egg whites, and pour into a greased baking dish. Bake in moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for about 30 minutes, or until set, and serve immediately.

Fluffy Layer Cake— Ingredients are one-half cup shortening, one and one-half cups sifted cake flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup granulated sugar, two eggs, one-half cup bottled milk or one-fourth cup evaporated milk and one-fourth cup water, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract. Let shortening stand at room temperature until rather soft. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Put shortening, sifted dry ingredients and sugar in mixer bowl beat at low speed for three minutes. Add eggs, unbeaten, and one tablespoon of the milk, and beat on low speed for two minutes. Combine vanilla extract and rest of the milk, add to other mixture and beat one minute with the beater still at low speed. Turn into two greased eight-inch layer-cake pans and bake in a moderately hot oven of 375 degrees F. for 25 to 30 minutes or until done. These directions are for an electric mixer.

Good Manners Oil Wheels Of Life

JUDY GARLAND.

Singing star is both mannerly and fastidious

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOUNG girls should be taught the social graces. Good manners oil the wheels of life. Rudeness, quickness of speech and surliness not only make a girl unattractive, but they make her a wall flower. Amiability is the greatest of all beauty assets, whether one is 14, 40 or twice 40.

Now that make-up is doing a fade-away, the teen age lassies should relinquish the rouge pads. They can get a nice coloring by rubbing the cheeks with ice once a day, getting plenty of outdoor life, sleeping at least eight hours every night. They should not be denied a soft, delicate powder. If they must use a lipstick, let the choice be directed toward a natural tone.

Fastidiousness of dress should begin early. Cleanliness is the big thing. If a girl washes her face casually, the pores will become dark tipped, acne may result. Hands must be washed frequently, nail eaves kept scrupulously clean. Germs and germesses lurk under those rosy nail points.

Overweight and excessive thinness call for a physical examination. One may be due to some glandular disturbance, the other to undernourishment or too many social activities. Mamas must be ever watchful, start the child along the right beauty route.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

The best cure for jadded spirits is a new hat. A snappy model is black milan straw with a trimming of birds fashioned out of white lace on wire frames.

Taking hold of the mode is this "little girl" idea. A soft, youthful pretty print noted at Palm Beach is white handkerchief lawn with multicolored floral print in blue and deep pink. Ribbon in three shades of blue runs through the beading at the square neckline and forms a bow at either side.

We must mention one of the nicest maid's uniforms we have seen in many a day. It is of maize cotton, with bands of brown and white checked cotton.

One of the best numbers at a recent shoe show was a black patent open-back step-in shoe with pin hole perfections and an intricately scalloped front treatment.

No getting along without a jacket and dress ensemble. A charming outfit is in triple sheer in bright navy blue. The square neck of the dress is outlined with tiny white pique daisies while the short swinging jacket is bordered with daisies in navy blue.

Don't check that impulse to get a check suit or frock, for checks are "tops". A swell dinner dress with a basque bodice and a very full skirt is of tiny black and light gray checked taffeta. A white pique turn-down collar adds charm.

Stews and Casseroles Fit for King Husband

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

..HERE ARE stews and casseroles to set before a king—King Husband, to be exact. The dishes given here were tried out on a group of men and one and all declared for second helpings, as well as for the recipes so that they could have the dish at home.

First is a casserole of fish, prepared Italian style. For this you will require one-fourth pound (one cup) mushrooms, sliced, also one-third cup diced celery, one medium onion, finely chopped, four tablespoons butter, three tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, one and one-fourth teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, two teaspoons sugar, two cups flaked, cooked haddock or cod, and three cups canned tomatoes. Saute mushrooms, celery and onion in butter until tender. Combine with tapioca and other ingredients in the order given. Turn into greased casserole dish and bake in 425 degrees F. oven for 25 minutes, stirring twice during first ten minutes of baking. Place unbaked biscuits on top of fish mixture after it has baked ten minutes, return to oven and bake 12 to 15 minutes longer or until biscuits are browned. This will serve eight.

Ham Casserole

Casserole of Ham and Cabbage is a good dish, nourishing and inexpensive. Ingredients include four cups coarsely-shredded cabbage, three tablespoons of quick-cooking tapioca, one-half teaspoon salt, one eighth teaspoon pepper, one-eighth teaspoon paprika, two cups milk, two tablespoons floor, eight ounces boiled ham, chopped, and one-half cup fine bread crumbs, buttered. Cook cabbage in boiling, salted water two minutes drain. Combine tapioca, salt, pepper, paprika and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly-boiling water and cook eight to ten minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Add butter. Place layer of tapioca in greased baking dish, then layer of cabbage and ham, repeat layers, finishing with tapioca. Sprinkle with crumbs. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees F. for 30 minutes. This amount will serve four to six.

Curried Lamb

Curried Lamb with Dumplings—now there's a dish that is likely to become a firm family favorite. It calls for one pound of lamb cut in pieces, one-half cup sliced onions, tablespoon butter, four cups water, one cup diced carrots, one and one-fourth teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, three-fourths teaspoon curry powder, two and one-half tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, one cup canned peas and dumpling mixture. Brown meat and onion in butter; add water cover and simmer about one and one-half hours or until nearly done. Add carrots and seasonings and continue cooking 15 minutes or until carrots are tender then add tapioca and peas and bring to a brisk boil, stirring constantly. Drop dumpling fixture from teaspoon in boiling stew, cover tightly and cook without removing lid, five to seven minutes, according to size of dumplings. Serves six to eight, therefore a most economical dish.

Clendening Salutes High School For Refusing Guinea Pig Status

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

I SALUTE the class of 1938 of the University High School of the Ohio State University. They have produced a year book which departs from the ordinary stereotyped class year book, in that instead of photographs of smug groups of fraternities and sororities, they have made a serious attempt to evaluate themselves and their education.

It is called "Were We Guinea Pigs?" It was written in answer to a sneer they often heard during their high school course, "You are the guinea pigs of progressive theories of education."

They describe their background, what kind of people their parents are—conservative (57 1-2 per cent), liberal (22 1-2 per cent), between conservative and liberal (12 1-2 per cent), and radical (7 1-2 per cent). Politicians might take notice; I believe that this is a very fair average of American opinion. The incomes of the parents were mostly from $4,000 to $6,000 a year. Thirty-five per cent of the class did not know what their parents' incomes were.

School Experience

Then they go on to describe their school experience in learning to use language, and in expression through art, with mathematics in their daily life, with putting their minds in order, with health and sports, with governing themselves. It's certainly a well-rounded experience.

They think they have profited by it and they don't want to be guinea pigs.

Well, thank God, for that, say I.

No, my dears, you happen to have assumed species character of a different order—you are Homo; I don't subscribe entirely to the sapiens part. Homo is pretty illogical, and certainly not docile and obedient and experimentable like guinea pigs.

Control Humans

Every once in a while some biologist enthusiast blossoms forth with the idea that Utopia could be created if only we could control men and women as we do domestic animals. We could select their parentage and breed them so that we could eliminate all the hereditary disease taints, and make a strong, intellectual, well-disciplined race, some destined to forge the anchors, some to spin the gossamer.

We would inoculate them against all the infectious diseases early in life, without any protest from minority groups. And then we would train them for the work each had to do for the state.

It all sounds fine, but then we wouldn't be Homos at all. No let's not be guinea pigs. Guinea pigs have no hot, tempestuous fires sweeping across their placid lives. They never drafted a bill of rights never protested the arrogance of authority. No guinea pig ever wrote an "Ode on a Grecian Urn", or longed to "sail beyond the sunset and the stars". This curious compound clay, man, did all that.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. W.—"Will you kindly print in your column a list of foods containing starch? Are sweet potatoes and cooked wheat cereals starch-containing foods?"

Answer—"Starch" is a general term for a certain class of food ingredients chemically made up of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. In scientific language the starches and sugars are called carbohydrates. The two other food ingredients are fats and proteins, the proteins alone containing nitrogen. Very few foods are pure starch, fat or protein. But certain groups are predominantly made up of starch, or more strictly speaking, carbohydrates. So sweet potatoes and cooked wheat cereals would definitely be starch-containing foods.

D. E. F.—"Can anything be done for a boy who is pigeon-toed? Are there any specially built shoes for this?"

Answer—Yes; there are special shoes and orthopedic exercises are helpful.

NOTES IN THE DIARY OF A FASHION MODEL

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

HOME AGAIN, and it is pretty nice to be back. I left my bag at the depot and went straight to the office. I wanted to speak to Madame and ask her to back me up, for I told Consuelo that I had received a hurry-up call and had to return north immediately. I don't want her to think that I deliberately dashed away without waiting to see her people, or that I didn't want to remain in the house after they came. I told Madame about it and she was so sweet and understanding. She said that she had already mentioned as much to Consuelo, and told her that she felt so unkind taking me away. I called Consuelo and found her well if a trifle tired, after a tremendous season. She is going to Florida in a few days. The show is closing during Holy Week, so that will give her two week-ends and a week in Palm Beach with her people. Then she closes the house and comes north with them.

Has New Ideas

I was so happy to see the store again and to get calls in my own little office. Had a long conference with our chemist and found that he has worked out some splendid new ideas. Then had a long confab with our advertising agency and with our publicity director. Everything is going beautifully and I'm sure that all my plans will work out nicely. The shop is filled with glorious clothes, so colorful and dainty, yet so wearable. I'm going to spend Saturday shopping because I want to look nice this spring.

Pretty house gown

Navy Plus

I'll be having conferences and there will be so many previews at the Fair, which means scads of new clothes. I'll go in mostly for navy blue with plentiful touches of colour. Then I'll be able to switch around with frocks and accessories any way. And if I go to California, everything I have will be useful. Now that I am a sort of executive, anyway, someone with a well-defined position in the organization I just have to dress the part.

After a busy day at the office, there's nothing like coming home to a nice bath, with one's favourite bath oil and dusting powder, then slipping into a comfy, pretty house gown. Here's my favorite, with its touch of spring. The printed crepe is purple with a daisy pattern in chartreuse. There are purple grosgrain ribbon bows at neck and waist to give a pert effect. A zipper from neck to hem makes for a perfect line.

Wool for Summer

By ALICE ALDEN

Spring's thin wools, porous and tissue-fine are to continue this summer. Perhaps this is why such a fashion-wise person as Claire Trevor is already wearing woollen ensembles. Wool takes beautifully to the dye vat, emerging in lovely shades— chartreuse, the fuchsia range, all the pinks and blues. The frock shown here is of fine lavender wool, and the silk crepe jacket is in lavender, blue and green on a white background. Fabric flowers to match the solid frock are on the lapel, with roses in the same tones as the print trimming the stove-pipe hat.

Quilted Smartness

By ALICE ALDEN

The wise shopper, when out for vacation or cruise clothes, chooses things that will look smart on her sojourn, yet be serviceable at home. Here is one of the best bets of the season, from Lord and Taylor. The neat tweed suit is checked in tan, red and white, and has a jacket in the new, longer length. It is worn under a grand coat in natural color camel hair, quilted all over. Shown at a recent luncheon revue at the Ritz-Carlton in New York City, it brought lots of applause from the guests.

WORDS OF THE WISE

Man is made for reflection; hence all his dignity and value. His dignity consists in the right direction of his mind, and the exercise of his intellect in the study of himself, his Author, and his end. But what is the mental occupation of the world at large? Never this; but diversion, wealth, fame, power; without regard to the essential duties of intellectual man.—Pascal.

The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel.—
—(Shakespeare)

Brevity may be the soul of wit, but it is very far from being the soul of truth.

Can't Keep Tot From Radio

Mother is Advised to Send Complaints Against Bad Programs to Broadcaster

By Garry C. Myers, Ph.D.

A MOTHER writes:

"Dear Dr. Myers: I am writing you about a problem that is beyond me! It is about the everlasting, unending radio programs that fill the air from five on through seven o'clock in our part of the country.

"My husband and I are so fed up with these programs and all the advertising that goes with them, but not so our son! This only child is just eight years old, and until this year we were fairly successful in keeping the radio turned off. He was a sensitive baby and even now during illness has very bad dream sensations. These he cannot describe, nor do I urge him to . . .

"Dr. Myers, what am I going to do about these programs? Do you think any good comes from them?

Son Loves Them

"My son seems to love them and all his friends listen to them. I am an active member and officer in our P.T.A. here, and we are trying to do something about children's radio programs."

My reply in part: The only good I can see in such programs as you name is the financial gain to those who sponsor them. I should class such programs as Enemy Number One to innocent and defenseless childhood, the greatest curse that has ever hit the home. And ours is the only nation in the world where this enemy is tolerated.

What should distress us is that parents who know better will aid and abet this curse by letting their children turn the dial to these dastardly destroyers of mental health; nor do they raise their voices against these programs to the broadcaster on behalf of other children whose parents also fail to supervise the dial.

Have No Control

Of course, most parents just admit that they can't control their children enough to control the dial. When their children, now between about six and 14, the chief victims of this public nuisance, were much younger, their parents did not train them in the unambiguous meaning of NO. These parents thought they should not—had they not been told not to restrain their dear little ones lest they might ruin their personality or drive them to insanity or delinquency? Lead astray by the false prophets of no restraint, these parents feel helpless now as their children dial about what they please.

For these parents there is just one hope—to prevail on the broadcaster to keep bad programs from the air. But did you ever talk to a broadcaster about this? You should Then you will learn that very, very few parents ever write protests to him. They just fuss and fume over the bridgeetable or at the P.T.A. and club, and do nothing.

Here is a practical suggestion for parents who really care: Procure a pack of post cards. Every time you hear or think of a bad program write your protest to the station.

Perking Up Favorite Dishes

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

DON'T let yourself, your family or your guests down by serving flat, unflavored food. Pick up and perk up old favorites and evolve new dishes with the aid of zippy ingredients. There's mustard, for example, good old tangy mustard. Too many of us are prone to think of mustard only in terms of a condiment, whereas fine cooks regard it highly as an important cooking ingredient. To demonstrate its value, here are two variations of popular dishes that should find a welcome and frequent place on your menus.

Oven Tomatoes serve to lend new interest to the tomato. Required are six medium tomatoes, one and one-half teaspoons wet yellow mustard, three teaspoons minced onion, three fourths teaspoon granulated sugar, three-fourths teaspoon salt, buttered bread crumbs and one and one-half teaspoons Worcestershire sauce. Remove stem end and cut each tomato in half, crosswise. Spread the cut side of each half with wet mustard. Top each with one-half teaspoon onion, sprinkle with Worcestershire sauce, sugar and salt. Top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderately hot oven of 375 degrees F. Serves six.

Hamburger Variation

There are hamburgers and hamburgers, good, bad and indifferent. Well, here is a variation on that meaty theme that is something! Just try it and see if the family doesn't give you a vote of thanks. Toasted Deviled Hamburgers call for one pound chuck steak (ground), one-third cup chili sauce, two teaspoons wet yellow mustard, one and one-half teaspoons bottled horseradish, teaspoon minced onion, one and one-half teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, teaspoon salt, a speck of pepper and eight slices white bread. Combine all the ingredients except the bread. Trim crusts from bread, cut slices in halves or thirds and arrange on broiler rack about one and one-half to two inches below the heat. Toast on one side. Spread the untoasted side of each slice with the hamburger mixture. Return to broiler and broil for eight minutes. Serves eight.

Serve a delicate fruit mousse after a hearty dish like deviled hamburgers. Banana Apricot Mousse requires three-fourths cup apricot pulp, one cup mashed bananas (two to three ripe bananas), three tablespoons lemon juice, one-third cup confectioners' sugar, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one cup whipping cream. Press stewed or canned apricots through a sieve and add to mashed banana. Add lemon juice, apricot juice, sugar and salt; mix well. Fold in whipped cream. Freeze in automatic refrigerator until firm.

Notes in Diary Of a Fashion Model

Grand Casual Number

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THE APARTMENT looks so nice and fresh. I told Consuelo that as much as I love her house in Palm Beach, I love this place better. The terraces have been landscaped and planted and now, after a few seasons, really look like something. We are going to have some corn and tomatoes out of our own terrace garden, if nature and the gardening powers- that-be are kind.

My room has been done over and I am making a few changes, too. The room is very big and very long, so I thought that I would have a closet built out at either side of the window, making an alcove which I will have lighted, and in which my dressing table will be placed before the window. I suppose I am getting interested in architecture since I spend so much time with Bill. Directly he enters any place, he starts to do it over in his mind. Well, that's just what I am doing, only this time, since the place is my own room, I can give way to the impulse.

Doing it Herself

It is nice that I am earning so much more, for I am able to carry through such an improvement by myself. Consuelo, the darling, wanted me to let her take care of it, but I told her that she had done enough, that it was about time that I took care of things. Consuelo's show is doing well, one of the few shows that are making money.

It seems that everyone seems to be holding off until the Fair opens. The hotels report fewer transients than ever before, but they aren't worrying much as bookings from the start of the Fair until Labor Day are tremendous. This goes for the luxury hotels as well as for the smaller places, but this is such a big city, with such enormous facilities, that I'm sure that every visitor will be taken care of comfortably.

No Week-End Worry

The girls in the store were worried about their week-ends, so Madame had a notice posted on the bulletin board to tell the staff that Saturday closings this year would go on as usual. Madame feels that the week-ends belong to the Fair and that people will want to go out there rather than say in the city and shop. Besides she feels that the girls will be busier than ever during the week, and so will need their full week-end more than ever in order to be ready for the rush during the week. Good business, I call it, as well as a good heart.

Coats are moving well despite all the talk about suits. Here is a grand casual number, nice for the country and for sports wear. It is a collarless model done in a bold plaided wool in black, green and yellow with flecks. It has buttons all the way down and two little change pockets with flaps are slashed into the waistline.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY"
by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

There came a morning after Matresser's return from Paris when his London telephone bell rang in vain, when his servants in reply to persistent questions could only repeat that his lordship had left town for the country. Mighty events were still shaping themselves, all Europe was still in convulsions, but the danger point had passed and Matresser and his long gray car, with the little brown dog curled up by his side, was racing homeward through the early morning mists.

All that man could do he had done. His personal commitments he had brought to a triumphant finish. Matresser was a free lance, and he took leave of no one. He stole out of Berkeley Square at a little before nine in the morning. At half-past eleven he passed through the wide-flung gates of the Great House and received his first shock. There in a corner of the Park, amply protected by every description of improvised shelter, stood the aluminum airplane in which he had made his two famous cruises across Europe. He stopped for a moment, staring at it.

"How long has the plane been there?" he asked the lodgekeeper.

"About ten days, your lordship," the man replied. "The same pilot who took you off brought her ladyship back and they have been out on several flights. The pilot has engaged a mechanic from Norwich. We understood that he was waiting for your lordship's return."

Matresser nodded and drove slowly through the inner gates and round the great circular sweep to the front doors. Henry Yates, his hair more disheveled than ever and his face one broad grin, was standing there to greet him. Matresser descended from the car, took his hands and wrung them.

"All well, Henry?" Matresser inquired.

"Her ladyship has been very anxious to see you, sir," Yates replied. "She is in her boudoir now."

Matresser nodded. "I will come at once," he said.

Magda approved of her surroundings. She followed her master down the hall, keeping an inch or two from his heels.

"Can't help it, Yates," Matresser observed, stooping to pat the dog's head. "She was given to me by a keeper at the shooting lodge and she means to stick."

They passed on to the small reception room where the Countess of Matresser was awaiting her son. She was seated in her usual high-backed, tapestry-covered chair, her eyes as wonderful as ever, always watching. Nevertheless, he received a shock as he drew near to her.

"At last, my dear Ronald," she sighed. "I cannot tell you how welcome you are. Why did you not warn me that I might wake some morning and find myself famous?"

"How did I know?" he asked. "What have you done?"

"It is not I, dear," she answered. "It's you."

"You have been reading those newspapers," he remarked.

"After all, I am your mother."

He waved the subject away, his eyes fixed on her wasted features.

"I want to talk about you," he said. "This Norfolk winter has been too much for you."

She smiled. "You find me changed?" she asked anxiously.

"You are a little thinner," he answered, "but your eyes are as beautiful as ever and your voice is quite steady."

"How I wanted to see you and to confess, dear Ronald," she said. "Now that we are here alone, you shall know the truth. Lately I have felt so tired at times and I have wanted to be at my best when you came back that I have taken one or another of these fashionable medicines of the moment everyone is talking about. If I lived in France or if I were no the Countess of Matresser, they would be called drugs. Always before your arrival home, I used to send to that Doctor Lacon, whom I wish I had never met, because I hated that you should find me looking old.... This time I have learned my lesson. I have taken nothing. You see me as I am—a very tired old lady."

CHAPTER XXXVI

Matresser recovered quickly from his first shock.

"Lacon, after all, has a large clientele," he acknowledged. "I am sure that the drugs he would recommend might be dangerous only if you took too strong a dose or stopped taking them too suddenly."

"Do you know why I stopped using them?" she asked.

"I hope because you felt well enough to do without them."

"Not at all. It is because of that terrible Scotland Yard man who came here. I felt so ill on that Monday when the storm came that I asked Elisabeth to go into Norwich and get me a syringe. The only one I had was broken. They made her sign for it and when a broken one was found near that poor fellow Fergus, the detective began to make inquiries and he actually discovered that Elisabeth had bought one of exactly the same make at the chemist's in Norwich. I had made her promise not to tell anyone, so she refused to answer any questions and in the end she went away. Why are you looking so strange, Ronald?"

He recovered himself with an effort. The old smile parted his lips as he leaned over.

"What an absurd coincidence!" he murmured. "Shows how much circumstantial evidence is worth at times, doesn't it? I hope the fellow was not offensive. But he had to ask questions."

"So he told me," Lady Matresser acknowledged. "I could not bear the thought of her getting into trouble so I sent for him, showed him my entire stock of drugs, and the syringe which Elisabeth had purchased, still intact. Listen!"

She was leaning forward. Matresser, too, after that first start was listening in breathless silence.

A few yards away, though almost completely out of sight, was the black-and-white grand piano from which marvelous music was flowing.

"It is Schumann's 'Papillons'," he whispered reverently. "Is it Elisabeth? Is it she who is playing?"

Lady Matresser smiled.

"There is only one person," she said, "who has ever made music like that in this house."

The melody waned. Matresser almost fancied that he could see those exquisite white fingers moving down the keyboard more and more slowly. The last note came so faintly that they leaned forward to catch it. There was the sound of the soft closing of the piano, the rustle of movement. Then suddenly it was Elisabeth, glowing and triumphant, who appeared. She came up the few yards of space toward them, her right hand extended towards Lady Matresser but her left hand outstretched toward him in a frank gesture of surrender. He drew her into his arms. Elisabeth, wholly in his embrace, laughed happily.

"I searched for you in London," he said.

"I did hope that it should be here you would find me," she answered, her hand resting caressingly on Lady Matresser's shoulder.

"You dear child!"

Ann and Pilot Number 17 arrived in the lounge before lunch, both a little out of breath. They had been playing squash until the news of Matresser's arrival reached them. The young man was a little shy but he came straight up to the master of the house.

"I have to tender my resignation, sir, he announced. "With your gracious permission. I have accepted the post of pilot for life to Lady Ann. Subject to your approval, my uncle has already telegraphed his consent."

"A trifle sudden, isn't it?" Matresser queried.

"Are you not also a trifle sudden, my dear brother, in the way you helped turn the world upside down?" Ann rejoined.

"It will be the first of many such alliances, I hope," the young man said. "Our family has always been of the opinion that it we Germans who are the kin of your people and not the French. My uncle who has, sir, the most profound esteem for you, is exceedingly happy. He wishes the engagement announced at once, again with your gracious consent. My wife must naturally take a very high place at Court, sir," the pilot continued with some reluctance, "but it is not of such things that we think nowadays. It is towards the reorganization of German social life that we shall devote our energies. In that task I know I shall receive invaluable help from your sister."

Matresser laid his hand kindly upon the young man's shoulder.

"If you bring Ann through life," he said, "as smoothly and courageously as you brought me across Europe she will be very happy. I give my consent gladly."

A great many callers streamed into the Great House during the next half hour. Among others, the little doctor drove up from the village and Colonel Rowans, from the Dower House, walked across the Park. They all demanded the latest news of the great events stirring the world.

"I'll tell you all I know," Matresser assented. "The necessity for news censorship is passing every hour. All government offices are working night and day. Hellstern's abdication was received without a single protest and the public invitation to Count Helm to take over the government — with the title of King of Germany instead of President—was unanimous. The new German monarchy is to be a strictly limited one, in accordance with the statutes which have been officially accepted and which are now being prepared. There is great rejoicing throughout Germany and an immense amount of goodwill toward everyone."

"What about Italy?" Colonel Rowans asked.

"In Italy things seem to have gone almost as smoothly, although, at the last moment, Leader Matorni is reported to have hesitated. Prince Victor Emmanuel, however, at the head of the guards, personally entered the Chamber, announced his father's abdication, and was pronounced King by an overwhelming majority. The absolute powers which had been assumed by Matorni are cut out from the Italian Constitution and King Victor Emmanuel will reign, subject to the will of the people."

"And Austria?" the doctor asked breathlessly.

"In Austria they do not seem to bother about how they are governed so long as it is by a Hapsburg. The Archduke Johann is to be crowned tomorrow in the presence of both Houses."

"And all this time not a word about France?" Ann remarked.

"We have been through a very critical time with France," Matresser confessed gravely. "Somerby left London for the Quai d'Orsay within a few hours of the international peace meeting and should have arrived at Paris in plenty of time for the French Cabinet Council the following afternoon. But you read in the newspapers what became of him. The plane crashed. He was underneath the wreckage—killed on the spot—and it was impossible for even Downing Street to know what had become of him for many hours. The consequence was that France could not be invited to the final settlement and was treated with apparent disrespect."

"That is why you were hurried away from Tring House and sent to France at a moment's notice?" Elisabeth asked.

Matresser nodded.

"Someone intimate with the whole situation had to go," he explained. "It was not an easy job but in the end they had to listen to common sense. Besides, a certain amount of good came out of the delay. The Royalist party in France was taken completely by surprise and had not time to even hold a meeting."

"And just what is the attitude of the present French government?" Bemrose, who had just arrived, inquired.

"Beatific!" Matresser replied. "They are in the seventh heaven of delight. The phrase 'perfidious Albion' has been expunged (for the nonce, at least) from their vocabulary. They have peace guarantees offered by Germany, England, Austria and Italy. In addition, four 'observers' selected by American authorities have been appointed already, one for the embassy of each country, and will take up their duties at once."

"What will be the observers' positions exactly?" Bemrose asked.

"They form a Court of Arbitration if any dispute should arise," Matresser explained. "The United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's is entrusted with the deciding vote."

"The world has never known so great an upheaval," Bemrose declared. "I am, like everybody else, dumbfounded. Germany, Italy and Austria have all three changed their forms of government without a shot being fired or a life lost. France remains calm and, more extraordinary still, seems satisfied."

Matresser lit a cigarette, as he announced:

"I myself am no politician, but it seems to me that you might look at it this way: Germany has been granted her great desire; her colonies have been restored to her. It is Great Britain who has to pay the price, but when you consider this matter thoroughly I believe that everyone in the Empire will agree that no price could be too great which guarantees peace. France has an international guarantee of her frontiers which is what she has been craving all the time. Austria has been hungering for her Hapsburg. She has him and, within a month, negotiations will have commenced with regard to her eastern frontiers. Italy, which was rapidly becoming an enslaved country, ruled by a tyrant, gets back her liberty of speech, freedom of the press, and liberty of political action.

"Come to think it over," Matresser concluded with a little grimace, "the only country where a certain amount of trouble may be expected is our own. Still, someone has to pay. There is a blazing press against us. The Cabinet will probably have to resign and the government go to the country. The peace coup, however, will have been accomplished. The deed is signed and the action of the government ratified. In my opinion, the election cry of 'Fifty Years of Peace' with which the new National Party will appeal to the country will make their position invulnerable."

"The Services—naval and military—won't think so!" Colonel Rowans grunted.

Matresser smiled. "There is more narrow thinking among the Services than in any other patriotic body of Englishmen in the world," he declared. "Every day which passes, however, will help to place this whole problem in a better perspective. It involves a great sacrifice on England's part, but I think the people will decide, as our government did, that it was worth while.

"I should not be surprised," the master of the house continued with a twinkle in his eyes, "if this drawing more closely together of our various countries should not result in a great many international alliances. And so I am now going to ask you to drink two toasts."

They stood around with expectant faces. One felt that the pilot's fingers were itching to grasp a goblet instead of the frail stem of his cocktail glass.

"I shall ask you first to drink the health of my sister Lady Ann Matresser and His Serene Highness Prince Maurice von Reisensach, and as soon as Burrows has refilled your glasses, I shall be honored if you will drink also to myself and my alliance with Baroness Elisabeth Stamler."

There was unbounded enthusiasm in the little circle around the Countess of Matresser's chair. Her son, with his arm resting lightly upon Elisabeth's shoulder, stood on one side and Ann and her fiance, hand in hand, upon the other....

Thus did this joyous company echo and re-echo the spirits of peace, good will, and high hopes that were thrilling the whole world on that very day and at that very hour.

GOOD PROGRESS MADE IN HOUSE

Bill Passed to Supervise Trading in Futures on Grain Exchange

Ottawa, April 12—(CP)—Efforts of the Social Credit Party in the House of Commons to convert Finance Minister Dunning and the government to a policy of interest-free money continue to hold up a formal resolution to authorize this year's borrowing necessities, and will be resumed in the House today.

Yesterday this debate presented a barrier to progress most of the afternoon after the Social Crediters had been in conflict with House rules on several occasions. Good progress was achieved otherwise.

Four bills were passed including the measure to set up control and supervision of trading in futures on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. The House also approved a large portion of estimates for the Department of Pensions and National Health.

Introduction of a bill by Justice Minister Lapointe to amend the criminal code saw realization of the efforts of J. S. Woodsworth, C. C. F. leader, to obtain legislation preventing employers interfering with free association of their employees in trade unions.

Mr. Lapointe introduced the annual bill amending the criminal code to meet requests of various Provincial Attorneys General, and also containing a clause to meet the objects of the private bill introduced by Mr. Woodsworth to prevent employers interfering with activities of trades unions by intimidation or threats.

'Millions of Tourists Diverted From Ontario'—Trussler

17 Miles of Unpaved Highway Blamed for Loss of Visitors and Dollars

Toronto, April 12—(CP)—Because of 17 miles of unpaved highway between Arkona and Parkhill, millions of tourists and their dollars are being diverted out of Ontario by way of Niagara Falls and Fort Erie, A. C. Trussler of Sarnia, told No. 7 Highway Association Executive at a meeting here today. Mr. Trussler is secretary of the organization.

The erection of the Blue Water Bridge has brought a new stream of traffic and potential tourists to Ontario, Mr. Trussler pointed out, but he said, due to the broken highway links, it flows south again and out of the province instead of going east over 465 miles of paved roads in the direction of Ottawa. He said that the organization would soon go before the Ontario government and ask the neglected 17 miles of road to Parkhill be paved.

400,000 Men in U. S. 'Initial Protection Force' in Event of War

New York, April 12—(CP)—United States War Department plans in the event of war call for mobilization of "an initial protective force" of about 400,000 men, consisting of the regular army and the national guard.

Outlining the departments plans here yesterday, Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, said only such forces as can be fed, sheltered and equipped will be mobilized immediately.

21 DAY TERM IMPOSED ON DRIVER

London, Ont., April 12—(CP)—Penalties for driving while intoxicated took a jump in court yesterday when Magistrate Donald Menzies sent Michael Martin 58-year-old Thorndale farmer to jail for 21 days and barred him for driving a car for six months. Police then impounded Martin's car for three months.

This was the heaviest penalty for the offence given in city court in months. Previously Magistrate Menzies had been giving terms of 10 days in jail in most cases.

One reason the court took a serious view on Martin's case was because his automobile sideswiped a street car, knocked down a tree, smashed two poles and then crashed into a third pole before it stopped.

"It was fortunate the tree and poles were not pedestrians," remarked Joseph Jeffery, Crown Counsel.

BABE DROWNS IN BUCKET

Thessalon, Ont., April 11 (CP)—Kenneth, 11-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ansley of nearby Wharncliffe, was drowned yesterday in a bucket of water at his home. Mrs. Ansley left the room as the child crawled about the floor. When she returned, the baby had made his way to an adjoining room and was head first in the bucket.

BACHELOR TAX

In the Ohio Legislature there is a married lady, Mrs. Anna F. O'Neil, who wants to slap a $100 per annum tax on unmarried men 30 years of age, and $100 per annum thereafter until a maximum of $1,000 a year is reached. After 40 apparently the hunted beast is to be given his modicum of liberty for $1000 a year. If he can afford it, he may consider his freedom worth the price.—Stratford Beacon Herald.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma is still housecleening and about half the furniture in the house is somewhere it's not suppose to be and after supper pop called out to ma from the living room, Pawleen, where are you, where's my aireal wire?

Your what? ma said. And she came in the living room saying, I hope you're not looking for that tangled heep of unsightly old abandoned wire that's been cluttering up that closit for almost a year, although it would be just like you to make a scene about it the moment I throw it away after not having shown the faintest sign of ownership for it for months and months.

Yee gods my aireal wire, I was just getting ready to fix the radio so we'd have some kind of decent reception in this house. If this is what is known as housecleening I'll take a little honest dust, pop said.

Wich just then I had a fierce suspicion and I ran up to my room and my suspicion was right, and I ran down again saying, Hay ma, did you do anything to my pile of old funnies that was in my closit, it's gone, where are they, ma?

If you're alluding to that trampled shaos of newspapers its where it ought to be for land sakes, thrown out, ma said, and I said, Well aw G, ma, that's a heck of a note, I was saving those till I had time to forget them so I could read them all over again, jimminy crickits ma, why cant you just clean things that need it?

Now that's enough not another word, isn't it enough to have my nerves frayed to the very ends by an indiscribeable day of housecleening without having to listen to a hysterical outburst about a lot of old junk? ma said, and pop said, I suppose that's another reference to my good aireal wire, there's only one thing for me to do to a house in this condition, and that is to flea it and take refuge in the shadowy phantoms of other peoples troubles.

Meaning the movies, and he took me over to the Little Grand just in time for the first show.

This is a street scene in Milan, Italy, following the surrender of Madrid, Spanish capital, to the forces of insurgent General Franco. Italians marked the victory with parades and celebrations, ornamenting the scene with banners bearing legends in line with "Viva Madrid." "Viva Il Duce!" as another victory for fascism went into the pages of history.

Shortly after the conquest of the tiny kingdom, Ciano arrived to work out details for establishment of the new regime to supersede that of defeated King Zog.

It was a matinee in aid of the George V pension fund for actors and actresses.

CRAWFORD GETS DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Apr. 11 (AP)—Joan Crawford yesterday was granted a divorce by Superior Judge Benjamin Scheinman from Franchot Tone. Her appearance in court was unexpected. Hearing on her complaint originally was set for April 18, after she was refused a "divorce by deposition". The screen star charged mental cruelty.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

Kansas City, Mo.: Don Reffner, St. Louis Brown's infielder who signed his contract Sunday, may be shifted to shortstop this year, Manager Fred Haney indicated today, since he believes recruit Johnny Berardino is doing so well at second base, Heffner's regular post last season. For mound duty against the Cubs this afternoon, Buck Newsom and Johnny Marcum are Haney's selections to try to even the series.

Kansas City: Chicago Cubs wind up their cross-country baseball trek today against St. Louis Browns, with southpaw Larry French pitching. They head for home after the game, are idle Thursday, and resume their city series with Chicago White Sox Friday.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, April 13

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

JUDGING by the lunar transits, this may be a day of suddenly precipitated events of far-reaching importance in shaping the life. While these incidents may seem devastating and distintegrating on the surface, it is likely that surprising and gratifying denouements may ultimately result if they are handled properly. Both new business ventures and purely private affairs may be involved. Romance or adventure seem inescapable. But move with shrewdness and restraint.

Those whose birthday it is may "expect the unexpected" this year. The year is beset with factors bringing upheaval and surprises in all departments of life. Happy fulfilments and gratifications are possible if poise, sound judgment and wise counsel prevail. Romance, adventure and new experiences are inevitable.

A child born on this day may have surprising talent in literary, cultural or social directions. It may be overzealous, adventurous or audacious, but should reach distinguished heights in public acclaim.

RESIDENCE DATE NOW NOVEMBER 1 C. A. H. A. RULES

Increase Number of Players Eligible for Hockey Playdowns

CHANGE SYSTEM

C. A. H. A. Will Revert to Referee and Assistant Next Year

Winnipeg, April 12 (CP)— Little contentious business remained before the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association as delegates aimed to conclude the 25th annual meeting today.

Most important resolution outstanding probably was that submitted by the executive suggesting the C.A.H.A. refuse to conform to the International Ice Hockey Association's demand it cease relationships with the Amateur Hockey Association of United States.

The Canadian body recognizes only the A.H.A. of U.S. while the International organization, Ligue Internationale De Hockey Sur Glace, recognizes only the Amateur Athletic Union of United States as governing hockey in that country.

The resolution stated the "C.A.H.A. cannot in honor repudiate an agreement which it has made" with the A.H.A. of U.S.

If the custom of re-electing officers for a second term is followed President W. G. Hardy of Edmonton and his entire slate will be returned. They were elected to their present offices last year.

Residence Rule Changed

Most important business of the second meeting day yesterday was approval of the principle of a legal contract binding amateur players to their clubs with a tentative proposal a professional club seeking services of an amateur player be required to pay the club $500. The proposal was referred to the executive for further investigation and will be submitted again at the next annual meeting.

Final date for complying with residence rules was changed from Oct. 15 to Nov. 1 preceding the playing season.

Several rule changes were approved, including decision to increase the number of players permissible from 12 to 15 on a team elegible for Allan Cup or Memorial Cup playdowns and from 12 to 13 on all other teams. The system of a referee and linesman was abandoned after one year's trial and the C.A.H.A. decided to revert to the former system of a referee and assistant referee.

Overtime in playoff games will be limited to 10 minutes instead of 30 minutes unless the President orders otherwise.

EXPRESS CONCERN

Some diplomats said flatly they regarded the call to the colors as an indication Mussolini did not expect to stop at the conquest of Albania but drive forward at once in collaboration with Chancellor Hitler, his axis partner, to achieve something else.

Drive May Be Eastward

Most of these diplomats thought the drive, if undertaken, would be eastward but some felt Mussolini might renew his demands on France for African concessions.

The entire Fascist press disavowed any Italian intention of driving farther into the Balkans but hinted that if any Balkan states joined the British-French plan of "encirclement"—as Fascists call it — they might expect an Italian drive.

Warnings to Greece were particularly strong. Newspapers admonished Athens against letting the British navy establish a base on the island of Corfu, at the neck of the Adriatic, or anywhere else.

The warnings followed formal Italian assurances to Greece yesterday that her integrity would be respected.

All able-bodied men born in 1901, 1912, 1917 and 1918 as well as many specialists of other ages were in active service. Some air raid defence specialists were 60 years of age and over.

More than 200 navy vessels were at Italian ports or participating in the Albanian operation. The press asserted certain powers might find before long that the Mediterranean was no longer safe if they offended Italy.

R.C.M.P. TO GUARD

botage forces but directly with the war scare.

No General Orders

It was indicated that no general orders have been sent out from headquarters here to place any special guards on public buildings but that the various district commands of the force might take such precautions on their own initiative if it was thought necessary.

There has been no report made to Ottawa yet in connection with a recent theft of dynamite in the Toronto area and R.C.M.P. officials were inclined to ridicule suggestions that the thefts might be part of a dynamite plot to damage some Ontario public buildings.

The Regina Leader Post in a newspage story yesterday said that armed Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers were placed on duty at Regina public buildings and utilities Monday night and that the officers were still on duty yesterday. Two Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers were on guard at the legislative buildings when staffs arrived yesterday, the paper said.

It added:

"Police action was part of an emergency precaution measure instituted all across Canada. Fear of sabotage arising out of the international crisis and general unrest prompted the action.

Officers Concentrated

"Officers are being concentrated in Saskatoon from the northern (R.C.M.P.) detachments. Precautionary measures will likely be extended to railway property, rights of way, important railway bridges and traffic bridges...."

Precautions were taken to guard the Manitoba legislative buildings Monday night because of fears sabotage was planned, the Winnipeg Free Press said in a newspage story.

The paper added:

"Official advises from Ottawa of a reported plot by Irish Republican army sabotage forces to blow up public buildings in Canada, resulted in precautions being taken .... to prevent explosives being secreted into the Manitoba legislative buildings.

Secret Broadcast

"The warning from the federal authorities, presumably sent to all parts of the Dominion, followed five days after publication....of a despatch from Dublin telling of a secret broadcast of instructions to carry out operations ordered in Canada in 10 days.

"At that time last Wednesday Commissioner S. T. Wood, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Ottawa, said he knew nothing of a reported secret radio broadcast....

Every indication that the R. C. M. P. now are taking seriously the threat came Monday night when government authorities ordered a careful search of the Manitoba legislative building. ....It was stated that connections with the suspected plot are seen in two recent attempts to rob federal powder magazines in Toronto."

Denied Knowledge

(Attorney General W. J. Major denied any knowledge of the report.)

A 24-hour guard is maintained by Provincial Police on Ontario's legislative buildings at Toronto and has been for years, it was said in the Ontario Attorney-General's Department.

"Provincial Police working in three shifts maintain a constant patrol of the buildings," it was stated. "There has been no recent increase in the guard."

Hon. Gordon Conant, Ontario Attorney General said: "There has been no communication whatsoever from Ottawa indicating possible attempts at sabotage of the Ontario parliament buildings or other public structures."

Chief Inspector Al Boyd of the Provincial Police Criminal Investigation Department said no word of any possible plot had reached him. Inspector Boyd said he had no reason to think recent theft of dynamite in the Toronto area was connected with any terrorist plot.

Vaduz, Liechtenstein, April 12 — (AP)—The Swiss government has checked, temporarily at least, Nazi propaganda aimed at union of this 65-square-mile sovereign principality with greater Germany.

Liechtenstein, with a population of 12,000 and set between Switzerland and the German Tyrol, was alive with rumors at the end of March that she soon would fall under Chancellor Hitler's rule.

Switzerland, which represents the tiny state's foreign interests, promptly stepped in to remove some of the causes making fertile ground for Nazi propaganda. Neutral quarters believe the Nazis halted their propaganda for the present rather than risk a break with Switzerland.

Old Kentucky
CIGARETTES

Bombay, India, April 12—(AP)—Hjalmar Schacht, former President of the German Reichsbank who is here on a "vacation", was accused by the Bombay Chronicle today of attempting to "exploit India's economy."

The Times of India said Dr. Schacht was here "to buy up the immediate as well as the future stocks" of Indian cotton growers. The paper warned Indian merchants to "remember the bitter experience of the Balkan States which tried similar block trading with Germany" by which they were unable to get their money out of the Reich."

Larissa, Greece, April 12—(AP)—Queen Geraldine of Albania was reported today to have passed the crisis of her dangerous illness caused by her flight before Italian invaders two days after the birth of her son.

Specific information was withheld at the hospital to which she was removed from a private villa yesterday when her condition became serious. Some reports said she was suffering from puerperal Fever. The week-old Prince, Skander, was said to be in good health.

Liverpool, England, April 12—(CP-Havas)—Police searched tonight for Irish terrorists suspected of planting a bomb which exploded in a public telephone booth.

The blast occurred just as theatres were emptying, but there were no casualties. At least 100 windows were shattered.

Los Angeles, April 12—(AP)—Los Angeles County aircraft factories today pushed construction on 830 planes under orders from Great Britain, France and the Netherlands totalling almost $60,000,000.

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 12—(AP)—Bulgaria, wooed by Great Britain and France to enlist in the anti-aggression chain in southeastern Europe, today took steps to stamp out the German-supported Nazi party for plotting to change the form of government. The party, known as Ratnizi and said to have 100,000 members, was ordered dissolved last night by the Ministery of the Interior. It was announced that State employees belonging to Ratnizi would be dismissed. The government rejected appeals for the liberation of Professor Assen Kantarjieffwn the party "Fuehrer" who was in police custody.

Berlin, April 12—(CP—Havas)—The Voelkischer Beobachter and other Nazi newspapers today expressed "sorrow," for the British dominions and colonies because of their alleged "poor organization" and the "misery" of their inhabitants. The articles blamed the London government for this asserted situation.

At the same time newspapers declared that Great Britain's drive for an anti-aggression bloc had collapsed. "The panic sowed in the world by Great Britain is proof of its weakness," said the Voelkischer Beobachter.

The Voelkischer Beobachter said Britain was strong only in appearance but actually was badly organized.

Paris, April 12 — (AP) — The French government decided today to make a formal statement of its position in the international tangle. The cabinet approved a frank declaration which Premier Daladier will issue tomorrow.

Sources close to the government, however, underscored it as "exceptionally important" and emphasized it would be made the same day as Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement to the House of Commons on British policy.

ITALY IS GIVEN

The new guarantee, which Mr. Chamberlain was expected to read to the House of Commons tomorrow was reported to state in broad terms that any act of aggression in the Eastern Mediterranean, and particularly against Greece and Turkey, would be considered by Britain as an "unfriendly act."

The Turkish Ambassador, Tevfik Rustu Aras, called at the foreign office this morning and was reported to have left word that his government was ready to accept any guarantee Britain was willing to give.

It was understood, though not officially confirmed, that the Greeks also had expressed their willingness to accept a British guarantee.

Promise to Greece

Some diplomatic circles believed the promise to Greece might be more specific than to Turkey and that all Countries bordering the Mediterranean would be partially covered by a statement that Britain "cannot remain indifferent" to any attempt to change the status quo there.

Mr. Chamberlain was expected to condemn Italy's invasion of Albania, but it appeared definite that the Anglo-Italian pact of last year would not be denounced as a result of the driving out of King Zog.

Conversations were proceeding with Greek officials in the hope of making any guarantee to that country the basis of a wider Balkan security arrangement. Under the Balkan pact, all countries in the Balkans except Bulgaria—Yugoslavia, Rumania, Turkey and Greece —are bound to defend each other against aggression from another Balkan country. It was thought that this pact might be enlarged to include attacks from any source so that if Britain were called upon to support Greece all other Balkan powers would be obliged to follow.

Britain to Determine

The loophole in the projected Greece-Turkish guarantee was expected to be that Britain will reserve the right to determine when the independence of Greece is threatened. In the British pledge to Poland the Poles decide that question.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was roundly criticized by the Liberal and Labor press today for adopting his "another chance" policy toward Premier Mussolini of Italy in an effort to pursue his appeasement policy in the Mediterranean.

The News Chronicle (Liberal) said the unity of the country which Mr. Chamberlain secured by the pledge to Poland "would be immediately forfeited and the hopes of peace through strength destroyed if any action he took now appeared to be a reversion to the bankrupt and discredited policy of one-sided appeasement."

'Credulous Futilities' Attacked

The Manchester Guardian (Liberal) said "it seems impossible that any member of the government should now return to the credulous futilities of last year" and counselled Mr. Chamberlain to drop his policy of "believe and make believe."

The Daily Herald (Labor) declared "it must be said now that whatever the government may be prepared to believe, British public opinion, and certainly Labor opinion, is not prepared to place any reliance on Mussolini's word."

The Prime Minister was reliably reported to have given Premier Mussolini of Italy "another chance" to keep the status quo in the Mediterranean after Mussolini was said to have promised his legionnaires would begin leaving Spain early in May.

Mussolini's Assurances

Mr. Chamberlain was reported to have accepted Mussolini's assurances that Italy would go no farther than Albania in the Balkans and she would keep her pledges concerning Spain.

This decision was believed to indicate the Prime Minister's declaration of a guarantee for the independence of Greece and Turkey — might be somewhat altered.

Some sources said they expected his declaration of an outright protection for these two countries would be changed to some new form of Mediterranean pact in which Italy would be included.

Many predicted any plan to reestablish Britain's already strained pact of friendship with Italy, presumably in the hope of prying her away eventually from her axis partner in Berlin, would bring an avalanche of unfavorable criticism in parliament.

Europe Armed Camp

The Prime Minister's reported decision was made as the entire European continent resembled an armed camp. Troops lined frontiers and officially nearly every country declared itself ready "for an eventuality."

Great Britain's Mediterranean fleet remained at Malta, near the Italian island of Sicily and the Greek island of Corfu.

France's Mediterranean fleet steamed out of the Toulon naval base under secret orders, and was believed operating under a joint command with the British units.

Each of four leading powers — France, Italy, Russia and Spain — were believed to have 1,000,000 or more men under arms. Germany continued to hold in readiness the large forces at her disposal when she marched into Czecho-Slovakia last month.

Millions Mobilized

During the past 24 hours, mobilization, which already had reached an alarming stage, showed a marked increase.

Italy called two entire classes to the colors, bringing her armed forces to an estimated 1,200,000.

France adopted secret measures which were said by some sources to have strengthened her fighting forces to between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 men.

Yugoslavia called up several classes of reserves in the districts bordering Yugoslav-Albanian frontier.

Poland called up an undisclosed number of army reservists of six classes of 1912-1917, adding to her already reinforced army which had been guarding the Polish-German border since Chancellor Hitler's seizure of Memel March 22. Her standing army and available reserves were estimated at 1,000,000 men.

The Netherlands government, following a call of border reserves yesterday, was reported to be preparing to expand compulsory military service from 11 to 18 months.

Greece to Call up 10 More Classes

Greece, which already had called up some reserves, was reported to have prepared a decree to call up 10 more classes if necessary and to proclaim a state of emergency.

Hungary and Rumania continued to hold in readiness the large forces under arms at the time of the final partition of Czecho-Slovakia.

Britain, the only major power in Europe without conscription, pushed ahead her recruiting campaign for this army and the voluntary national service.

Figures in the latter category showed applications at present totalled 127,415, of which 9,438 had been enrolled in the last four days.

Proposal

By Virginia S. Southworth

At the moment when the bell rang, Doris was bending toward her mirror for the last finishing touches. The next minute her hand was in his.

"Always glad to see you. David, old dear."

"You look prettier than ever tonight. Shall we go? He glanced at his watch. "We might as well be there when the curtain goes up."

She had a momentary impulse to tell him that she wanted to look prettier. But would that be wise? As he held her cape his hands lightly touched her shoulders, all the feelings he aroused in her started thumping and pounding against her heart, her head, her whole being. She ached to clasp them but didn't dare, for everything held her in check; her pride, bringing up, and her age. Twenty-nine tomorrow—Lord! She drew the cape about her as if she were incasing herself in armor. Couldn't he see or feel a little of what she felt!

At the theatre the play ended with the vamp winning the hero away from the other woman and as they went out David remarked::

"Why did the other woman let him get away?"

"She couldn't very well tell him how much she wanted him when he hadn't asked her, could she?"

"She might have had him with a little more effort," David retorted.

Effort—what—how! She looked up at him and never had she felt so much before in her life. It was utterly disturbing. Two other faces appeared before her — Bob's and Joe's. They had loved her but she had had nothing to give, and now when she had so much—nothing!

They entered the house.

"It was sweet of you to go with me tonight, Doris."

"I enjoyed it, thanks." Hurriedly, she bade him good-night and left him standing at the door, while she walked toward the chair by the fire and dropped into it. The valve in the radiator sputtered so she got up and gave it a turn. What a relief it would be if she could shut off her pent-up steam by a simple twist! There was a step behind her—David's. She turned quickly.

"Doris, forgive me for startling you. I must have lost my cigarette case. May I look around?"

Perfunctorily he looked in the creases of the couch, now under the couch, down on his knees. She could have touched his fair head, bent so searchingly toward the floor. His head turned and he was looking beseechingly at her. Was it at her? Yes, he was saying quick, mad things to her.

"Darling, look at me. I love you. Don't you care a little? Tell me! Tell me! I want you terribly!" He bowed his head on her lap and seized her hands. A strange stillness, as of a dream, hung over the room. Alternatingly waves of fever and cold swept over her. She was shaking. Impulsively she withdrew her hands from his clinging ones and gripped her head, then she laughed, rocking back and forth, while swift tears rolled down her cheeks, and still she laughed and laughed and couldn't stop. He heard only her laughter, which humiliated him and cut him to the quick. How he misunderstood her! What blunderers men are! He staggered to his feet, clutched his hat and the door banged behind him.

All at once she realised she was sitting up in her bed with the wind blowing from the open window upon her hot face. A dream! She fell back on her pillow, exhausted.

Doris felt collected and determined after her dream, which remained with her as a symbol when David called the next evening.

"I can't go to the theatre tonight. I must talk to you instead. I am miserable. I—I," she stammered although it was all very deliberate, which he didn't know, it was far from easy, and taking hold of his hand, she led him in by the fire. He could feel her trembling as he gently put his arm about her.

"I hate to see you this way. What is on your mind? What is the matter?"

"Everything, everything! I've got to tell. I've pocketed my pride. Please, please understand! I had the most ghastly dream last night about you and me. I can't stand it any longer. I can't, I can't."

"What is it, dear?" His arm tightened about her. He had never seen her so thoroughly human, miserable, so appealing and beautiful before.

"David, I love you and I want you more than anything else in the world," she sobbed.

Almost reverently) he took her hand and pressed it to his lips, murmuring, as he took her in his arms::

"I never dreamt you cared like this, I—" A muffled sound from a black shoulder interrupted.

"What must you think of me for proposing to you this way?"

"I am afraid we'll have to put the trousers on you and the skirts on me."

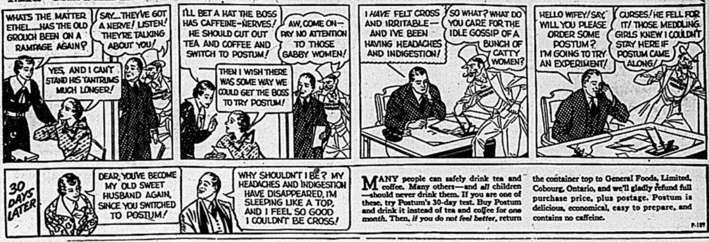
MR. CAFFEINE-NERVES learns who's boss



WHAT'S THE MATTER ETHEL.....HAS THE OLD GROUCH BEEN ON A RAMPAGE AGAIN?
SAY...THEY'VE GOT A NERVE! LISTEN! THEY'RE TALKING ABOUT YOU!
YES, AND I CAN'T STAND HIS TANTRUMS MUCH LONGER!
I'LL BET A HAT THE BOSS HAS CAFFEINE-NERVES! HE SHOULD CUT OUT TEA AND COFFEE AND SWITCH TO POSTUM!
AW, COME ON—PAY NO ATTENTION TO THOSE GABBY WOMEN!
THEN I WISH THERE WAS SOME WAY WE COULD GET THE BOSS TO TRY POSTUM!
I HAVE FELT CROSS AND IRRITABLE—AND I'VE BEEN HAVING HEADACHES AND INDIGESTION!
SO WHAT? WHAT DO YOU CARE FOR THE IDLE GOSSIP OF A BUNCH OF CATTY WOMEN?
HELLO WIFEY! SAY, WILL YOU PLEASE ORDER SOME POSTUM? I'M GOING TO TRY AN EXPERIMENT!
CURSES! HE FELL FOR IT! THOSE MEDDLING GIRLS KNEW I COULDN'T STAY HERE IF POSTUM CAME ALONG!
30 DAYS LATER
DEAR, YOU'VE BECOME MY OLD SWEET HUSBAND AGAIN, SINCE YOU SWITCHED TO POSTUM!
WHY SHOULDN'T I BE? MY HEADACHES AND INDIGESTION HAVE DISAPPEARED, I'M SLEEPING LIKE A TOP, AND I FEEL SO GOOD I COULDN'T BE CROSS!

MANY people can safely drink tea and coffee. Many others—and all children—should never drink them. If you are one of these, try Postum's 30-day test. Then, if you do not feel better, return the container top to General Foods, Limited, Cobourg, Ontario, and we'll gladly refund full purchase price, plus postage. Postum is delicious, economical, easy to prepare, and contains no caffeine.

WALL ST CLOSE

New York, April 12—(AP)—The stock market scored a further comeback today from its war scare decline and many shares climbed 1 to 4 points.

The rally played out after midday, however, and gains were pared a bit before the final hour. Most of the business was done in the first two hours. Transactions were about 1,000,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 12 (CP)—Stocks swung into an advance on Toronto Exchange today. Encouraged by an improved tone in London and New York, prices firmed. The lull in war alarms started some action among the bargain hunters and the bidding for medium-price gold and base metal stocks was brisk. After the first hour trading slowed down and turnover was only 266,000 shares by noon. More than half the total had been handled in the first hour.

All the senior golds advanced fractions. Nickel, Noranda and CQSaKrv-r'

Steel issues led industrial section, trailed by the senior oils, utilities and paper issues. Western oils showed gains of 5 to 10 cents for Home Oil, Calgary-Edmonton, Okalta and Anglo-Canadian.

Slightly Easier Prices for Produce

Toronto, April 12—Slightly easier prices appeared in butter, eggs to the wholesale trade on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

While fresh receipts continued light and offerings generally were not heavy, demand was slow in the butter market and an easier undertone developed. Ontario creamery solids moved quietly at 22 1-4c for No. 1 grades, and 21 1-2c for 38 score. Prints were unchanged at 23 1-2c to 24c for top grades, and 22 3-4c to 23 1-4c for 38 score.

Traders displayed little interest in the egg market, and the light arrivals of receipts were sufficient to fill demand, which was fair for grade A large. The graded section closed fractionally lower, but other divisions remained at previous levels. Graded shipments ended the day at 20c for grade A large, 19c for medium, 18c for pullets, and 17c for B and C grades.

Montreal, April 12 (CP)—Offerings held steady on yesterday's markets.

No Change in Plans For Royal Visit Says Authority

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 12—(CP Cable) — There has been no change in plans for the visit of the King and Queen to Canada and the United States, it was learned on the highest authority today.

This source branded reports the trip might be cancelled in view of the gravity of the international situation as "unfounded speculation." The question of cancellation or postponement, it was said, had not been discussed and the original arrangement to sail in H.M.S. Repulse May 6 remained unaltered.

The sudden return of the King yesterday from Windsor started a rumor that the advisability of the North American visit was under consideration. It was also suggested that the Repulse might be required for other duty and that the liner Empress of Britain had been selected for the Royal transatlantic voyage if it were decided to proceed with the visit.

No Bearing on Tour

It is now learned that His Majesty's return to London had no direct bearing on the Canadian tour, but was to receive a first hand report from Prime Minister Chamberlain on the international situation.

The Empress of Britain is now on a world cruise and at present is anchored off Cape Town, South Africa. It was pointed out the liner is not due back at Southampton until May 25 and even if the remainder of the tour were cancelled immediately it would require at least six weeks in drydock to overhaul the ship for the Royal party.

Meanwhile Lloyd's underwriters were reluctant publicly to quote an insurance rate against possible cancellation of the trip. One firm, however, quoted a premium rate of 25 to 30 guineas per cent compared with 20 to 25 guineas per cent 10 days ago.

NEW RELIEF DEAL URGED BY MAYORS TO LIFT BURDEN

Federal Government is Asked to Help Municipalities

YOUTH TRAINING

Ottawa, Apr. 12 (CP)—A new deal in relief costs to free the municipalities of their share of responsibility for material aid for unemployed was urged upon the Dominion government today by spokesmen for the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

A delegation of nineteen representing the federation placed their case for recognition of unemployment as a national responsibility before the cabinet committee on relief, composed of Labor Minister Rogers, Mines Minister Crerar and Transport Minister Howe.

Youth training, the lot of the single unemployed, extension of the housing act and use of the facilities of the Bank of Canada in public financing were also discussed with the cabinet in a closed meeting.

Cabinet To Be Informed.

Mr. Rogers informed the delegates the relief committee would report on the conference to the whole cabinet. A statement of the cabinet's response to the delegation's several resolutions would be given to the federation tomorrow.

Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa, federation chairman, offered the cabinet the full co-operation of the Mayors in dealing with the unemployment problem. He suggested a committee of these elected representatives of the people be called into consultation by both the Federal and Provincial governments.

Controller F. J. Conboy of Toronto presented the Federation's suggestion that study should be made of the desirability of appointing a national placement committee which would devote its efforts to opening up opportunities of employment in manufacturing and the primary industries. Development of aviation was cited particularly as an opportunity for immediate expansion.

6 Resolutions

The delegation presented six resolutions for discussion with the cabinet committee, the resolutions having been given final approval by the Federation convention earlier today on the report of their resolutions committee.

The Federation's relief resolution was based on a contention there had been "no appreciable abatement in unemployment" and that unemployment relief in one form or another "may continue indefinitely to be a problem of greater or less magnitude."

"The cost of unemployment relief bears too heavily on the restricted income of the municipalities and is forcing many of them to increase their funded debt out of all reasonable proportion to financial safety, to forego many social services and necessary civic improvements badly needed," its resolution said.

Stabilization of Relief

"It is urgently expedient that the administration of relief be placed on a more stabilized basis than at present exists," it added, holding that "unemployment in our time is primarily a by-product of the economic state of the nation and as such is rightly a national responsibility."

The federation asked that no additional services be imposed on municipalities or school boards without commensurate new taxation sources to finance them.

It asked that municipal corporations be exempted from using excise stamps on cheques and that the federal government be asked to assume 50 per cent of the cost of Federal-Provincial-Municipal relief works.

Housing Act.

Amendment of the National Housing Act was advocated to permit lending institutions to make loans for remodelling or repairing houses, provided borrowers owned a substantial and valid equity in the House.

As it now stands the act permitted long-term loans only to persons building new houses but the federation felt many municipalities contained old houses in semi-dilapidated condition, owners of which would welcome an opportunity for remodelling by a loan repayable over ten years or more

The delegation also proposed that the Bank of Canada be given power and responsibility of "assisting, wherever necessary, federal, provincial and municipal governments in financing at a minimum expense to the taxpayers all essential, public projects and social services.

LARGER SCHOOL ADMINISTRATION UNIT IN PROSPECT

Supervisor A. J. B. Gray Tells Educational Association

S. S. SYSTEM ATTACKED

Toronto, April 12—(CP)— A school administration unit larger than the new township school unit is in prospect for Ontario, according to A. J. B. Gray, supervisor of the Provincial Department of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Gray made the forecast of administration-unit extension before the annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association here last night. The question is a live topic in rural sections of the province and was discussed before the association by prominent educationists.

Charges Are Denied

The Department supervisor denied charges by Trustee W. J. Stanley, Denfield, that the Department is denying rural residents the right to ballot on the question in setting up township units to replace the school-section system. He said that in most every case in which the change had been made a ballot was submitted to residents.

J. W. Noseworthy, York Township, supported the new system. He termed the school-section system "antiquated Americansm" that had been initiated in the United States more than a century ago and largely had been discarded in , recent years. It was not democratic or British.

A. B. Lucas, assistant inspector of schools in London, supported the move but Trustee Stanley said the greatest argument against it was that "every rural organization studying in had voted against it." He expressed the belief that the trend toward state control of education limited the democratic freedom of the rural people.

Rural Pupils And Farms

In two addresses before the convention Hon. P. M. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture, urged that rural pupils be encouraged to remain on the farm. He regretted the trend of population from rural to urban areas "because if we are going to save the nation we must preserve in its highest form the culture of our rural civilization."

Msgr. J. W. Englert of Hamilton, President of the Separate School Trustees' section, told the meeting the new system of education is developing a race of people that will take life too easily, lacking resourcefulness and application due to training. He said he was "afraid when the time comes they will sit down, fold their hands and never look for a job themselves."

Claims Year Good For Maple Syrup

55 West Bridge Street
Belleville, April 10, 1939

Editor, The Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sir—

I read in your paper last Saturday that the people selling Maple Syrup on the market said the run of sap was very light this year.

I was talking to a farmer in Prince Edward County today who was boiling sap and told him what I read. He says it is a good year and I saw one bucket running over which he said he had emptied in the morning. Says there will be lots of syrup.

Yours truly
F. A. Cory

THE BENNETT MEMORY

Calgarians are familiar with the manner in which the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett is wont to go to shopping for personal gifts for friends—particularly for very young friends.

A promise of a gift, sometimes made in an apparently off-hand manner, is frequently followed some time later by a present mailed from some distant destination where Mr. Bennett is pursuing his manifold activities.

Only recently a Calgary boy received a signed photo of the former Premier in his full state regalia, a photo which had been promised when Mr. Bennett met the boy years previously. A member of a local newspaper staff was the surprised recipient of a fine pair of gloves purchased personally by the former Premier on the Strand in London.—Calgary Albertan.

Flood of Birthday Congratulations Wearies Local Lady

Weary of an impish game of tag that was being played with her throughout the day by telephone, a popular resident today had decided that after this she will not reveal her date of birthday to even her closest friend.

Yesterday afternoon she was surprised to hear her name mentioned and happy returns of the day broadcast over a Toronto broadcasting station.

Long before the usual hour of awakening this morning she was summoned from sleep to answer cordial wishes for good health on this, her birthday by a friend.

Shortly afterward more calls were received, and to each she acknowledged with growing weariness their expressions of happiness on the occasion. During the later part of the day calls increased. And by noon many more calls than she believed she had friends had been answered.

"I didn't know I had so many friends," she stated, at last becoming conscious of the game.

MUST DEVELOP OUR RESOURCES

Canada May be Due for Wide Awakening Says Conant

Oshawa, Ont., Apr. 12 (CP)—Canada may be "due for a rude and tragic awakening" by relying on pacts and covenants and the fact it is 3,000 miles from the scene of possible hostilities, Hon. G. D. Conant, Attorney-General of Ontario, said here last night.

Addressing the Oshawa branch of the Canadian Legion, Mr. Conant said if the Dominion's defences "are not developed to the limit of our man power and our resources, then the result may be disastrous." If disaster should occur a "serious indictment will rest upon those in authority in Canada and responsible for our defences."

Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, had shown that he "appreciates the situation and is courageous to meet it" and Aurelien Belanger, Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Prescott, had urged the federal authorities to prepare. "Surely if these two public men can rise above prejudices usually associated with their race all our public men should meet this issue squarely and effectively," said Mr. Conant.

"As I have said, however, a serious indictment will rest upon them if they do not do so and history will record that we lost our national existence and our liberties because of those in responsible positions who failed to meet terrible realities."

PLOT FOILED TO KILL CHANCELLOR

Netherlands Unable to Substantiate London Paper Story

The Hague, April 12. — (CP-Havas)—Netherlands police authorities today said they could not in any way substantiate a British newspaper report that two men involved in a plot to assassinate Chancellor Hitler had recently escaped to Holland from Germany.

They said no legal permission to enter the Netherlands had been given any refugees recently and that police had not been informed of such a plot through authoritative channels.

The British newspaper dispatch said the reported plot had been hatched by a number of Czechs who planned to kill the Chancellor while he spoke at the launching of the battleship Admiral Von Tirpitz at Wilhelmshaven. The plot was said to have been foiled by the German Secret police March 31, a day before the launching.

It was believed Mrs. Donald and her daughters, Mary, 21, Dorothy, 18, and Alice, 15, were not seriously injured.

Mayor Bone Believes Relief Should be Sole Concern of Gov't

Ottawa, April 12.—(CP)—Discussing the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities request for the Dominion to assume unemployment relief costs, Mayor Jamieson one of Belleville, said today there are 1,000,000 persons in Canada now receiving unemployment relief and another 1,000,000 "nearly on relief".

Mayor Bone believed relief should be the sole concern of the central government seeing the distress was so widespread.

Though much had been said about unemployment, there had been no concrete suggestion as to how the Dominion Government could overcome unemployment, said Mayor J. L. Moran of Sioux Lookout.

Mayor Bone opposed the resolution proposed by the Union of Nova Scotia municipalities asking exemption from the Excise Stamp tax on cheques of municipal corporations. The cost was considerable in large centres such as Ottawa and Montreal, said Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa.

"If the Dominion government will take care of the cost of unemployment relief, we'll take care of the stamps on the cheques," interjected Mayor J. A. Bilodeau of Shawinigan Falls, Quebec.

VICTOR OFFERED ALBANIAN CROWN

National Assembly Adopts Four - Point Program for Country

Tirana, April 12—(AP)— The Albanian national assembly today offered the crown of this Adriatic kingdom to King Victor Emmanuel of Italy for "a personal union" of the two nations.

The assembly, convoked to set up a new regime under the Italian military occupation of Albania, adopted a four-point program providing for a new organization of the country.

The points were:

1. The former regime of King Zog has fallen and its constitution is abrogated.
2. The new government is to be named by the assembly.
3. Albania and Italy are to be "associated more intimately."
4. The crown is offered to Victor Emmanuel "for His Majesty and for his loyal descendants."

WANTS TIME

The Berliner Zeitung Am Mittag headline was based on a Beirut, Lebanon, dispatch of the German News Agency which said inhabitants of Cyprus were increasing demands for return to Greek sovereignty.

The report stressed the "tactlessness" of the Governor who, it said, conducted a raid on the Archbishop's palace during the Easter holidays.

Attacks British Rule

Berliner Zeitung Am Mittag commented editorially that Britain, throughout decades, had denied the native population its rights. The newspaper stressed the importance of Cyprus as a continuation of the Gibraltar-Malta line.

The article ended with this: "The Greek folkdom on Cyprus is not willing to renounce its right to self-determination."

Regarding Malta, Voelkscher Beobachter said yesterday that "the National Party will continue the fight of Malta's inhabitants for religious, cultural and civic rights with unflinching determination and in the firm faith in final victory for its cause."

Berlin, April 12—(AP)— Robert Ley, leader of the Nazi Labor front, declared today that "if England wants a new war against Germany she will no longer find the old world order nor the torn Germany of 1914."

Ley, who visited England and had an audience with King George February 7, asserted that "England leads the League of German haters". He listed various German complaints against Great Britain, including loss of the Reich's Colonial Empire, the terms of the Versailles Treaty and the wartime British blockade against Germany.

He complained about the "dubious methods" with which Britain gathered her Empire and said Britain was "a newly rich Parvenu who would like to play world policeman".

"England hates us because she fears us," he added. "She hates us because we see through her."

The statement was made in a message to German workers.

Body-Check That Dislocated Jackson's Shoulder May be Break That Decides Series

Boston Bruins Step Out in Front with 3-1 Victory

BRODA CARELESS

First Goal of Game Was Simply a Gift to Bobby Bauer

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 12 (CP)—Hockey history may record the body-check that dislocated Harvey Jackson's shoulder as the break that turned the tide of the 1939 Stanley Cup series.

Soon after Jackson was injured last night, Boston Bruins began popping in the goals that brought them a 3-1 victory over Jackson's Toronto team-mates and a two-to-one lead in the Stanley Cup finals. The Maple Leafs were a shaken club when they took the ice for the third period, after learning the extent of the injury that Jackson received late in the second.

In the second minute of the last period, Bobby Bauer planted a gift goal behind Turk Broda to give the Bruins a 1-0 lead. Roy Conacher bagged another seven minutes later and Jack Crawford made the score 3-0 seven minutes before the game ended.

Badly Disorganized

The Leafs looked badly disorganized on all three scores. Gus Marker got a goal for them less than a minute from the finish on a pretty play with Doc Romnes, but they had regained poise too late.

Up to the turning point, the teams had battled from end to end in quick rushes, with smart defensive work that didn't dull the action in the least. Jackson, one of the game's stars, was heading down the left side in a typical rush when old Eddie Shore shook him with a terrific body-check. Jackson left the ice in pain as Marker picked up the puck and whipped it into goalie Frank Brimsek's pads.

That was the last dangerous Leaf rush for a long while. Bingo Kampman of the Leafs and Conacher and Shore of the Bruins drew the game's first three penalties almost immediately, but the demoralized Leafs couldn't make their power-play work despite the one-man advantage.

A Cheap Goal

Shore had just returned in the third when Bauer took the puck from his pivot man, Milt Schmidt, and struggled along the right boards. Nick Metz seemed ready to check him when Bauer wheeled around and was left with a clear path to the goal. Instead of going in, Bauer whacked a quick shot from the side that caught Broda off guard and bounced into the net from his right knee.

Perhaps the penalty to Jackson didn't turn the tide at all. Down one game in the best-of-seven round, the Leafs still can make a roaring comeback as they did to win the second match. In the interests of accurate reporting, it must be said that Manager Connie Smythe of the Toronto team said the Bruins deserved to win on their earlier play.

"They had an edge over us tonight," Smythe said. "If there was a break in the game, Boston deserved it."

There was no question, though, that upon Jackson's going the Leafs lost spirit. And when they ended up with a defeat, they faced the prospect of trying to come from behind in the best-of-seven series minus a player who gradually has been regaining his peak against the Bruins.

"That's the third left wingman we must do without," Smythe said. "George Parsons is out with an eye injury and Buzz Boll with a bad knee. Some of our younger players will practise today and we'll decide then who will take Jackson's place."

The Leaf manager gave no indication of who would replace Jackson, but it was believed Red Heron would get the call. He finished the season on the Leafs' International-American League farm club at Syracuse.

In the seven minutes between the Bauer goal and Conacher's, Broda held up the Leafs when Bruin forwards sped away frequently from fruitless Toronto attacks. Then the Toronto goalie left his cage to try to break up a Conacher-Bill Cowley play, and Conacher merely pushed the rebound of his shot into the open net.

Together Cowley and Conacher made the play that Crawford converted into the third score on a breakaway from the ganging Leafs. Conacher brought Broda to the ice and Crawford flipped the rubber home. Conacher and Crawford are Toronto natives.

Romnes, who scored the winning goal when Toronto evened the series at Boston Sunday, made a picture play for the Leaf goal this time. He cut through the defence and pulled Brimsek aside, then laid the disc on Marker's stick.

Jackson probably will be the only absentee when the teams resume action tomorrow night at Maple Leaf Gardens. The fifth game will be played at Boston Sunday.

ROAMERS GIVEN ADVICE ON HOW TO STOP TAYLOR

Only Way Say Experts Is to Jail Him Before Game Time

PREDICTIONS MADE

Edmonton Coach Figures Team Will be Better in Second Game

By Sydney Gruson, Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Toronto, April 12 (CP)—If the board of strategy behind Edmonton Roamers, undoubtedly a capable crew, would not mind a little advice, it is offered here free and without any strings. The way to beat Oshawa Generals is to stop Billy (The Kid) Taylor.

The board probably got the same idea Monday night after watching Taylor and company drub Roamers 9-4 in the first game of the Memorial Cup finals, and the advice likely would be useless and unwanted without a word on how to stop Taylor. The only method, it seems, is to jail him before each game.

Verdun Maple Leafs, whom Oshawa licked in the eastern final, had probably more success than anyone in accomplishing the trick legally. In the first game of their series at Montreal, Leafs stuck a man on Taylor's tail and kept him there throughout the game. They won 2-1 but once on the big ice of Maple Leaf Gardens, Taylor simply was too clever and fast.

Try to Stop Taylor

As coach Lefty Grove of Roamers sees it, however, it is the only thing to try and that's likely what he'll do tonight when Roamers go out to get even in the second game of the best-of-five series for the junior Canadian championship. The betting men are willing to wager 6-5 his men can't do it.

"Taylor is a marvel, simply a marvel," Grove said today. "About the only way I can see to stop him is to stick a man on him and keep him there, then hope for the best.

"As for the series, it will be a tough one yet. I'm not going to say we'll win but the team will be a lot better than in the first game. They weren't used to climate or to playing in such a hot rink. They'll be better acclimatized tonight."

All was well in the Oshawa camp and the optimism pervading before the first game had increased to open confidence in the Generals' ability to bring the cup back east. St. Boniface Seals won it for the West last season, beating Generals in the final.

Atlanta, Ga.: If young Freddie Hutchinson and Paul Trout do their jobs well today, they're almost sure to stick with Detroit Tigers. The two pitchers were picked to work against Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association in the Tigers' last game in the South.

Chattanooga, Tenn.: Southpaw Bob Weiland appeared today to be Manager Ray Blades' choice to hurl for St. Louis Cardinals in the season's opener against the Pirates at Pittsburgh next Tuesday. If Weiland has success, Blades may use two other lefthanders, Clyde Shoun and Tom Sunkel, in that series.

WINS TOURNEY BY TOSS OF A COIN

Traves of Kingston and Livingstone of Picton Draw

After eight hours of continuous competition the Eastern Ontario checker championship was decided by the toss of a coin at the Y.M.C.A. shortly before daybreak today. Jack Traves, Kingston and J. Livingstone, Picton, had advanced to the final series of the two day tournament and after each had won one and played four tie games, the contestants mutually agreed to toss a coin for the honors and the S. R. Colliver trophy. Jack Traves, of Kingston, won the toss. Traves was co-holder of the championship along with A. W. Flindall, Trenton, in 1938 also.

Traves defeated A. W. Flindall in the semi-finals of the tournament, which opened on Easter Monday, while Mr. Livingstone eliminated C. P. Goodman of Port Hope in the same round. Mr. Livingstone won two and tied one in the semi-finals, while Traves and Flindall drew in four games before Traves finally won. Dr. Annis, well known Lindsay checker expert, was a spectator at the Eastern Ontario checker championships played at the Belleville Y.M.C.A. Players from Port Hope to Kingston and intermediate points competed in the two day tournament.

Junior Hockey Team Along With Sons of Kiwanians Are Entertained by the Club

Members of Hockey Team Presented With Smart Windbreakers

JOE SHORTT SPEAKER

Surprise Pulled When 'Toots' Holway Given Gladstone Bag

Two fold honors were bestowed by Belleville Kiwanians last evening when the service club exemplified to the fullest measure the ideals of service to the community as the local Kiwanis Club honored the Belleville Junior Hockey Club, in conjunction with the club's annual 'father and son' banquet at the New Queens Hotel. The spirit of good fellowship and understanding, as the father-Kiwanians once again became boys and shared the enthusiasm of sonny, was truly exemplified and most fittingly brought to a climax with the message left by J. E. Shortt, secretary of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. as the guest speaker of the evening and who brought forcibly home the ideals of sportmanship and true manhood, that endow Canadian heritage.

In opening Mr. Shortt related to the sons and guests the splendid work of the local Kiwanis Club in their efforts to provide good clean recreation for the youth of Belleville. "The Kiwanis Club functions and co-operates with the "Y" in making possible our various Ki-Y enterprises, they've supplied and equipped two splendid play-grounds, they sponsor the V.O.N. and other civic ventures that make our city one of which to be proud," stated Mr. Shortt.

Spoke to Dads

In speaking to the fathers, Mr. Shortt reminded his adult listeners of their youth. "Boys are made of only the stuff that make men. We must learn and share their enthusiasm, desires, trials and perplexities as the power and capacity of our youth is in dads' hands.

"There are no penalties in true sportsmanship nor for playing the game for the game's sake," the speaker stated in directing his conclusion to the members of the Junior Hockey Club as he concluded his inspiring discourse with Edgar A. Guest's poem, which he quoted as follows:

"Tis not the goal that makes you great,
'Tis not the medal you may win,
'Tis not the cup or silver plate,
To tell the struggle you've been in,
That shall account your real worth.
For cheats sometimes the prizes claim;
The proof of merit on this earth
Is in the way you play the game,

Superior skill is not enough,
For many a brilliant mind is weak,
And, when the fight grows hard and rough,
For victory will play the sneak.
And it is better far to quit
An honest loser in the fight,
Than as the victor come from it
By lowering your sense of right."

Kiwanian George Griffin introduced the guest speaker by relating his splendid work in connection with the Belleville Y.M.C.A., while Kiwanian P. C. MacLaurin moved a vote of thanks, which was extended through President R. A. Flynn, who capably filled the chairman's position in his customary and inimitable manner.

Presentation Made

Proudly parading before the assembly wearing new two-tone green and cream colored windbreakers, the members of the Belleville "Hi-Speeds," Eastern Ontario champions in the junior ranks of the O.H.A. were presented to the club and guests by team president and Kiwanian Bill Cook after Kiwanian Ed Logan had extended the congratulations of the club to Belleville's up-and-coming junior hockey team. The windbreakers were presented to the players by the management of the team.

President Bill Cook introduced each individual player and related as to their season's efforts along the ice lanes. "I am proud to say every member of our junior team is a product of our own Ki-Y hockey groups. In the O.H.A. this year the boys played 21 games, winning 15, losing five and tying one," related Mr. Cook. On behalf of the team Captain Ross Clare then took the floor and extended to Coach 'Toots' Holway the appreciation of the team and executive, presenting the popular coach with a handsome Gladstone bag for his efforts as coach. Taken completely by surprise, Coach Holway showed emotions in response.

Fitting Program

A splendid program fitting to the occasion was presented and included an entertaining period of magic and sleight-of-hand performance by Kiwanian Clair Newman of Picton, whose tricks and magic proved most mystifying and highly entertaining, especially to the youthful ones. Solos by Harold Williamson and additional sleight-of-hand tricks by Kiwanian Len Fozzard, culminated by a cornet duet by Fred Jobson and Frank Howard rounded out a highly entertaining evening's program. Kiwanian Jack McIntosh kept the evening far from one of dullness as song leader, while Leo Riggs ably accompanied at the piano.

During the evening draws for special favours, given the sons of proud fathers were conducted by Kiwanian Bruce Lattimer with the following boys winning prizes: Bob McFarlane, Murray McIntosh, Ernie Finkle, Bert Stiver, Bruce Cronk and Harry Lummis. The long-to-be remembered occasion was all-to-soon brought to an end as Chairman-President R. A. Flynn called for the National Anthem.

Robbed of Chance To Crash Majors by Off-Season Accident

(By William H. Dumsday Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 12 (CP)—Skating stride for stride with the cream of Canada's junior crop at Maple Leaf Gardens tonight will be one of hockey's mighty mites—A little fellow robbed of his chance to crash the big time by an off-season accident 13 years ago.

Once a brilliant player, Ike Morrison, Western official in the Dominion junior finals between Oshawa Generals and Roamers, is now rated one of the most competent referees on the prairies. He turned in a fine performance with Montreal's Billy Bell in the first game of the best-of-five series as the Generals won 9-4 here last Monday night.

Morrison attracted attention of professional scouts when he starred with Regina Patricias in their drive to the Canadian junior crown in 1925. Ken Doraty, who later gained fame with Toronto Maple Leafs in the National League, and Johnny Gottselig, great left winger of Chicago Black Hawks, were members of the same club.

Little Ike's work gained him a job in the moneyed ranks the following season with Edmonton Eskimos and he earned the left wing berth on the prairie league's mythical all-star team. He seemed headed for a chance under the big tent but that summer fate dealt him an unkind blow.

Hip Is Crushed

Working as a railway switchman, Morrison, then only 20, was trapped between two box cars during shunting operations and his right hip was severely crushed. Although he tried gamely to stay in the game the injury proved too much of a handicap and he gradually slipped out of the limelight.

Playing at times against doctor's orders, Morrison lined up with Regina Capitols, and when the team was sold to Portland, he moved to the Pacific Coast with the Rosebuds. Hoping he would finally shake the handicap of his injury, Ike shifted to Niagara Falls to play with the Cataracts in the old International League and made his last pro stand with Kitchener Flying Dutchmen in the Canadian League.

Finally he was forced to the sidelines and after a successful operation on his hip, he returned to hockey but as a coach. He had fair success with amateur clubs and then turned to refereeing. Fearless and fast, Morrison has earned a fine reputation as a hockey arbiter and may yet receive his chance in the majors, even though not as a player.

Paragould, Ark.: Gerald Walker, after weeks of poor playing on offence and defence, is rapidly hitting his stride in the Chicago White Sox outfield. He got four hits yesterday and appears ready for a good start in the season's opener next week.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

If you happen to run across one or more of our younger generation spryly strutting along the main stem bedecked in new two-tone windbreakers, don't get the idea a belated Easter parade is on, because such is not the case. It will only be the members of the Belleville "Hi-Speeds" proudly displaying their new green and cream windbreakers given to them by the management of the team in conjunction with the annual father and son banquet tendered the club by the Kiwanis Club at the New Queens last night. The two-tone leather windbreakers carried suitably inscribed monogramed crests. President Bill Cook spoke briefly on behalf of the players, who individually were introduced to the Kiwanis Club. J. E. (Joe) Shortt, genial secretary of the Y.M.C.A. was the speaker of the evening and delivered an inspiring talk on sportmanship. Perhaps the most surprised person attending the banquet was Coach "Toots" Holway when Captain Ross Clare rose to present him with Gladstone bag. Seldom taken by surprise on the ice, "Toots" was practically at a loss for words and showed his appreciation in reply.

Can a man beat a horse in a running race? There is no doubt a man can beat a race horse up to the 100 yard dash, that is from a standing start, but Robt. Bower, 45 of Edmonton is attempting to prove a man can outrun a horse in a six-day race. The race started at the Edmonton Exhibition Park track yesterday, Bower running against My Prince, a race horse from a riding school in that city. The horse is being ridden by a jockey. The rules of the contest provide either competitor may stop at any time for a rest. The daily racing will commence at 8.00 a.m. and conclude at 6.00 p.m. daily. The competitor completing the most number of laps over the six-day stretch will be declared winner. Why, nobody knows, but Bower claims he ran 100 miles in 17 hours and two minutes in 1934.

The Cleveland Indians have reached an agreement regarding the lights at the Municipal Stadium but President Alva Bradley says there have been no arrangements with the New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers for playing under them. If those two clubs are not agreeable, the seven night games will be distributed among the five other teams.

So popular is ice hockey in England, that there is a proposal to introduce roller-skate hockey over there so enthusiasts may chase the rubber in the summer as well as winter. Roller-skating hockey, with a rubber ball as the puck, was played in Belleville years ago, we have been informed. The game never appealed to the patrons, however.

The Department of Game and Fisheries, for the Province of Ontario, gladdened the hearts of all disciples of Isaak Walton when the department heads announced today that an additional two days would be added to the brown and speckled trout season. The trout season will open on Saturday, April 29th, instead of the conventional May 1st, as in former years. This will give the trout addicts an extra week end of trying to lure the elusive trout into their angling baskets. The extensive restocking of Ontario waters of recent years was given as the reason for the welcomed advanced date.

Toronto always likes to assume the leadership in all phases of provincial sport, especially when it comes to the matter of the introduction of new-fangled ideas. Yesterday a news dispatch from the Queen City stated six-man football would be introduced into 69 secondary schools around Toronto. The dispatch also goes on to relate how six-man football was introduced by the O.R.F.U. last season, but here in Belleville we happen to know that George Laughlin, athletic director at the Belleville Collegiate, pioneered six-man football into this province. George introduced the game about three years ago and two years ago a league was played among teams from the B.C.I., a full twelve months before the idea was brought forth by either Toronto or the provincial football moguls. They'll do it every time.

Confining all their scoring to the third period the Boston Bruins stepped into a commanding lead over the Toronto Maple Leafs with a clean-cut 3-1 victory to give the Bruins a two-one advantage in the Stanley Cup series. The loss was costly to the Leafs in more ways than one, they not only lost the game, but also the services of Busher Jackson, who sustained a dislocated shoulder. Skipper Art Ross still thinks he has the greatest hockey team of all times in the Bruins, which may or may not be true, but one thing is certain however, this man Eddie Shore will go down in the records as one of the game's greatest. Crowding the 40 mark, Shore led the Bruins last night both offensively and defensively and in between times took time off to put Jackson out of business with a clean hard check. It looks like the Bruins all the way.

Did You Know That they are still playing hockey in the intermediate "B" ranks of the O. H. A.? ..... Last night Acton eliminated Owen Sound in the semi-finals.... The wise guys say Edmonton Roamers are far from a defeated club and don't sell 'em short tonight versus Oshawa....The Royals and Bearcats open the Allan Cup series at Montreal on Friday.... When the Yanks lost 13 to 3 to the Dodgers yesterday, George Selkirk, Canada's gift to the world's ball champs, helped himself to a single, double and triple, driving in two runs, which is no mean afternoon's baseball chore....And so the annual Bay of Quinte squabble in Napanee.

I HAVE lots of pals with bicycles, most of them have C.C.M.'s and they never seem to give them any trouble. Of course, I want a C.C.M., too, so I can ride and hike with my pals.

Just any bicycle won't do—I want a real C.C.M. for these reasons:

C.C.M. is made with the easy-to-pedal C.C.M. Triplex hanger, to which the main sprocket, cranks and pedals are attached.

C.C.M. is equipped with the C.C.M. "37" Coaster brake which is more powerful in its smooth, braking action and more positive in its forward clutch drive than any of its predecessors.

C.C.M. is fitted with C.C.M. extra strong, ball-bearing front hub.

C.C.M. is chromium plated over C.C.M. 20-year nickel. This gives a lasting, brilliant finish to all bright metal parts.

C.C.M. is beautifully finished with several coats of C.C.M. rich maroon and blue baked-on enamel to give a long life.

C.C.M. Bicycles are made in one of the largest and most modern bicycle plants in the world. For 40 years, the manufacture of C.C.M. bicycles has been held to high standards of accuracy.

When you buy a bicycle, buy a C.C.M. and you will enjoy many years of easy-running, trouble-free cycling.

C.C.M. Joycycles and Bike-Wagons are made in the same factory as C.C.M. bicycles, with the same degree of accuracy and from equally high quality materials.

Your C.C.M. dealer can offer you a complete choice of all C.C.M. products.

ORDERS BORDERS GUARDED

Premier Hendrik Colijn, of Holland, has ordered the Netherlands' borders closely guarded during the present European crisis. The premier announced that Holland intends to maintain her neutrality "under all circumstances."

IN TIME FOR CRISIS

Dr. Ivo Andritsch, new Yugoslavian minister to Berlin arrived in the German capital just in time for the crisis that followed Italy's occupation of Albania and the resultant threat to Jugoslavia.

ANTI-NAZI ASPIRANT

Heinrich Jurges, former secretary to Minister of Propaganda Goebbels of Germany, revealed to the Argentine government an alleged Nazi plot to seize the Argentine territory of Patagonia. Jurges, who quit the Nazi movement four years ago, has been living in the Argentine republic and has dedicated his activities to Anti-Nazi espionage.

SPRING IN ONTARIO

Ignoring the fact that Easter has come and gone and that by all the laws of nature he should have done the same thing, Old King Winter returned to Ontario on April 10 to leave a heavy blanket of wet snow as a reminder that he had not yet lost his battle with spring. This scene was taken in Toronto as transportation was slowed to a walk by the sticky, but pretty, mantle of white.

SETS NEW AIR SPEED MARK FOR REICH

Captain Hans Dieterle of the German Army Air Corps is shown in the cockpit of the Heinkel pursuit plane in which he recently flew over a measured two-mile course at the rate of 466.65 miles an hour. German authorities claim this mark is a new world's record. The Heinkel is one of the crack military planes, of which Germany is said to have thousands.

Sir Sidney P. Waterlow

Premier Metaxas

Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected to offer Greece unconditional protection against any acts of aggression by the Fascist powers, following Italy's seizure of Albania and the reported massing of Italian troops on the Greek border. Sir Sidney Philip Waterlow, British ambassador to Greece has held conversations with Premier Metaxas regarding the present situation, but details of these conversations were not divulged. Following these conversations a communique was issued by Premier Metaxas telling the Greek people that the safety of Greece was ensured. Should Italian troops be hurled against Greece, members of the Greek army, and the ships of the Greek navy, LEFT, could offer little resistance to Il Duce's crack regiments and powerful navy.

NEPHEW OF DER FUEHRER TO LECTURE IN U. S.

Visiting United States are Mr. and Mrs. Hitler, but not the German chancellor. William Patrick Hitler and Mrs. Aloise Hitler are seen here as they arrived in New York from Europe for a visit. Mrs. Hitler is the wife of Adolf Hitler's half-brother, while Mr. Hitler is her son and a nephew of the reichsfuehrer. They live in London.

A TIME-HONORED CUSTOM REVERSED

Usually the gentleman stoops to retrieve milady's fallen handkerchief, but in the ABOVE picture we have Mrs. Winston Churchill about to pick up the fallen 'kerchief of Mr. Churchill, who dropped it as he arrived at the French embassy in London to attend a reception given for the King and Queen by President and Mme. Lebrun of France.

"TOONERVILLE TROLLEY"

A special committee of the City Council will open negotiations with the London Street Railway for the removal of the street cars and street car tracks. There will be no tears shed by Londoners if the cars disappear. The Toonerville Trolley cars are a disgrace to the city. Some of these days they will fall to pieces like the deacon's one hoss shay. The London Street Railway itself would undoubtedly welcome a change. The problem is financing. Buses cost money.

The committee has been asked to keep in mind the possibility of a trolley bus system. This system is in use in many English cities and in many places in the United States. It is worth serious study. —London Free Press.

HEALTHY CITY

Hamilton, as all know, has one of the cleanest bills of health on the continent. It is through the co-operation of the public with our efficient Health Department that such gratifying results have been obtained, and it is by a continuance of such co-operation that the splendid record will be maintained and improved. Not only has the severity of epidemics which, in former times, decimated whole communities been greatly reduced, but some of the most devastating diseases have been practically wiped out.—Hamilton Spectator.

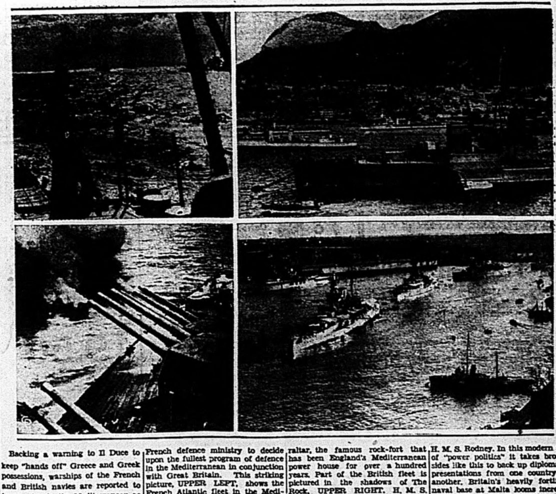
BEST SPEECH

If there were a Pulitzer prize for the year's best figure of speech—and it wouldn't be a bad idea —we would start off 1939 by nominating one achieved by Virgil Jordan, the economist:

"Western civilization has slipped back about 500 years in the past quarter of a century, as a result of fighting a war that nobody could win, any more than anybody could win the San Francisco earthquake."

So far as modern wars are concerned, between forces of comparatively equal strength, that description is final.—Portland Oregonian.

Britain and France Back Up Warning With Display of Naval Might



Backing a warning to Il Duce to keep "hands off" Greece and Greek possessions, warships of the French and British navies are reported to be massing in the Mediterranean as a mute hint to Italy that further acts of aggression may lead to war. Italy's seizure of Albania caused the French defence ministry to decide upon the fullest program of defence in the Mediterranean in conjunction with Great Britain. This striking picture, UPPER LEFT, shows the French Atlantic fleet in the Mediterranean during recent manoeuvres. England's warnings to Italy to stop further aggression is backed up by her powerful navy and by Gibraltar, the famous rock-fort that has been England's Mediterranean power house for over a hundred years. Part of the British fleet is pictured in the shadows of The Rock, UPPER RIGHT. H. M. S. Sheffield is in the foreground. This tremendous broadside, LOWER LEFT, is being fired from the three triple turrets of 16-inch guns aboard H. M. S. Rodney. In this modern age of "power politics" it takes broadsides like this to back up diplomatic presentations from one country to another. Britain's heavily fortified naval base at Malta looms increasingly important as the British warships gather in the Malta harbor, LOWER RIGHT, to be held in readiness for any eventuality.

Polish Officials May Send Families Home

Defence Alliance With Gt. Britain Praised by Press

Poland Apparently Ignoring German Pressure to Keep Country Out of Anti-Aggression Bloc

WILL MEET THREATS

Polish Officials Willing to Meet Attempts at Conciliation in a Friendly Way

Warsaw, April 13—(AP)— The Polish foreign office was reported today to have instructed officials of the Polish embassy and consular offices in Germany to send their families home.

The report was heard as Poland apparently ignored German pressure to keep her out of the "anti-aggression" bloc of Great Britain and France. The entire Warsaw press published editorials supporting Poland's recently announced defence alliance with Britain.

Officials took no public notice of a Nazi newspaper campaign which informed quarters here said was intended to "intimidate" Poland and prevent her from signing the pact.

But the pro-government newspaper, Kurjer Poranny, declared that "regarding 'encirclement,' Poland has much more to say than Germany, because German troops are concentrated all along the Polish frontier, from Slovakia to Memel."

Threats Will Be Met

While declaring it was "Polish in nature" always to meet attempts at conciliation in a friendly way, "threats will always be met here by increased resistance."

As a reply to continued propaganda in German and Polish languages from the German Ostbund, an organization devoted to the interests of Germans in Eastern Europe and especially in Poland, the Polish western union, which performs a similar function for Poles

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Melting snows and spring floods! The melting of snow alone does not cause serious floods. Snow itself does not readily absorb the sun's heat; snow melts more by virtue of the sun heating foreign substances on the snow. Neither do warm rains falling on cold snow produce rapid run-off. It has been calculated that to melt five inches of compact snow would require 14.4 inches of rain at 42 degrees temperature while the sun's heat only melts the snow at the rate of .05 inch per day with the air temperature 32 degrees. Snow soaks up a large amount of water and in this manner tends to prevent floods; but if the temperature is above freezing day and night, warm rains with melting snow cause rapid run-off and floods may result.

Ont. Mayors Ask Right To Levy Amusement Tax up to 20 Per Cent.

Ottawa, April 13—(CP)—A meeting of Ontario Mayors decided Wednesday to ask the Ontario government to give them the right to levy within the municipalities an amusement tax up to 20 per cent of the cost of admission. The proceeds would be used for general revenue with the intention of relieving the burden of real estate taxation.

CONSTABLES' BILL TOO SWEEPING IS MEMBERS' REPORT

Act Will be Modified in Committee After Given Second Reading

DEBATE RESUMED

Toronto, April 13—(CP)—Statutory guarantee of the right of workers to join a union of their own choice would be provided in Ontario under the terms of the "freedom of trade union association act", introduced in the Ontario legislature yesterday by David Croll (Lib. Windsor-Walkerville), former Labor Minister.

The bill would make it unlawful for an employer to seek to prevent workers from joining a union. If "intimidation or threat" was used to prevent an employee from so doing, an individual employer would become liable to a $100 fine or 30 days in jail. A corporate employer would be liable to a fine of $1,000, with responsible officers held personally liable.

Refugee Queen Is Out of Danger

Larissa, Greece, April 13. — Queen Geraldine of Albania has thrown off a high fever which caused serious concern for her life following a dramatic flight with her new-born son from invading Italian troops.

She was reliably reported last night to be out of danger. The week old Prince Skander was described as thriving.

Dethroned King Zog, who is staying at an inn here, visited the Queen for several hours in a hospital room banked with flowers he ordered from Athens. It was said Geraldine needed only a long rest to ensure complete recovery.

Roosevelt Declaration Hailed As Stern Warning to Dictators

London, April 13—(CP-Havas)— President Roosevelt's approval of an editorial in the Washington Post attacking the expansionist aims of the dictators, was hailed in the British press today as clear warning the United States will side against aggressors in the event of war.

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said the President's remarks showed "that if a world war now broke out, the whole strength of the United States would and must be thrown against the aggressors."

Similarly, The Daily Herald (Labor) declared that Roosevelt, by endorsing the editorial, "had given the aggressor nations the clearest and most direct warning yet that the immense weight of the United States will be placed in the scales if they force a war on the world."

"The change of public opinion in our country and the abandonment of 'isolationism' are matters of common knowledge," the Daily Telegraph said editorially. "Much more remarkable is the revulsion in the United States from the attitude of impersonal disgust with which the average American citizen has been prone to watch the spread of aggression across the eastern hemisphere.....

"If the aims of the authoritarian states are noted in the United States as a threat to the whole civilized world, it is difficult to imagine that any large section of opinion in our own country any longer can take a narrow view of British 'interests' which would bid us call the aggression of the 'axis' to halt.

"The chances of our doing so without being involved in a catastrophic struggle are indeed strongly increased by Roosevelt's indication that the weight of the United States will be added to any deterrent that we and our friends in Europe may offer."

The Daily Herald acclaimed Roosevelt's declaration as by far the most important the world has heard in recent days.

"The leading article of the Washington Post," The Herald continued, "which the President warmly accepted as an accurate exposition of American foreign policy, vigorously advocated that kind of co-operation between peace-keeping nations which we call collective security.

"Its language goes a good way beyond anything that even the President had chosen to use before. By his explicit endorsement of its words, he had made them his own. And by so doing, he had given the aggressor nations the clearest and most direct warning yet that the immense weight of the United States will be placed in the scales if they force a war upon the world."

FOSTER-SON OF HOUSE SPEAKER IS ARRESTED

William J. Clarke, 28, of Windsor, Held for Attempted Murder

SEEN WITH GUN

Offered Weapon to His Small Son and Told Him 'to Shoot Daddy'

Windsor, Ont., Apr. 13 (CP) — Windsor police today laid a charge of attempted murder against William James Clark, 28, of Windsor. Police charged Clark shot his brother-in-law, John McMillan, 26, in the leg. McMillan's injury was not serious and hospital authorities said he would be released today.

Clark was arrested last night at the home of his foster-father, Major James Clark, speaker of the Ontario Legislature. Major Clark advised his step-son to give himself up to the police. Major Clark has been ill since Monday with influenza, but was reported slightly improved today.

William Clark appeared today in police court and was remanded eight days without bail and without plea.

Appeared At Home.

Police said Clark appeared last night at the home of Mrs. J. McMillan, mother of Mrs. William Clark, her brother, John McMillan; and the Clark's children, Connie Clark, two, and Buddy Clark, seven.

Members of the family were quoted by police as saying Clark waved two guns at them. He ripped the telephone from the wall, they said, and waved a gun at the children.

When John McMillan went toward him, police said, Clark shot McMillan and then threatened other members of the family. Mrs. Clark

SENATOR GRAHAM RESIGNS POST

Regret Expressed Over Retirement as V. O. N. President

Ottawa, April 13.— (CP)— Regret over the retirement of the President, Senator George P. Graham of Brockville, was expressed today by Hugh Fleming, honorary secretary of the Victorian Order of Nurses, in his report at the opening session of the 41st annual meeting of the Board of Governors.

"For 11 years the Order has gone forward under his wise and benevolent guidance, but the intense regret felt at the prospect of the loss of his leadership is happily tempered by the hope of having the benefit of his counsel for many years to come," Mr. Fleming said.

Five new branches were organized in the past year at Cloverdale, B.C., Amherst, N.S., Leamington, Chatham and the Peninsula branch in Ontario. One branch was closed at Glace Bay, N.S.

Child Falls From Car Moving At 40 Mile Rate

Toronto, Apr. 13 (CP) — Three-year-old John Zalay was in serious condition in hospital today with head injuries suffered when he fell from an automobile travelling 40 miles an hour between Hamilton and Toronto.

The child was riding in the back seat of a car driven by his father. His mother, sitting in the front, saw the child playing with the door handle but was too late to stop him from falling out.

GERMANY AGAIN RAISES DEMANDS FOR NEW COLONIES

Newspapers Charge Oppression of the Arabs in Palestine

VERY VEHEMENT

Berlin, April 13—(AP)—Germany's newspaper war, increasingly centred on Great Britain to counteract "infamous suspicions" of Germany's plans, assumed an unprecedented vehemence today as new demands were raised for colonial territory.

Following yesterday's allegations of British oppression on the Mediterranean Islands of Cyprus and Malta, morning editions charged oppression of the Arabs in Palestine.

"England's blood guilt" was the caption chosen by Deutsche Dienst, a special commentary service of the official German news agency.

All the morning editions prominently displayed such headlines as "agitating Arab cries for help against British terror," based upon purported messages of protest from the Arab town of Lydda, Palestine, which were carried by Deutsche Dienst.

The commentary found British military action at Lydda to be "an example of British cruelty" and declared, "robbery, cruelty and blood are the building stones of the British Empire."

With an obvious hint to smaller nations to keep clear of the British "anti-aggression" front, Deutsche Dienst said they would "see behind the mask of a hypocrite the inso-

WOMAN KILLED AS CAR HITS TREE

Mrs. Elizabeth Patterson of Toronto Pinned in Wreckage

Hamilton, April 13—(CP)— Mrs. Elizabeth Patterson, 55, (2475 Yonge Street) Toronto, was killed early today when the car in which she was a passenger failed to make a curve at the Windermer cut-off and crashed into a maple tree.

The driver, Leslie Whale, 32, of ('46 Danforth Avenue) Toronto, escaped injury.

Three others were injured. They were: Mrs. Clara Whale, wife of the driver, Harry Patterson, 26, (946 Danforth Avenue), Toronto, and William Tannock (2724 Yonge Street), Toronto. Passing motorists removed them to the General Hospital. They were not in a serious condition.

Whale told police lights of an oncoming car blinded him and obscured his vision of the curve. Passengers were thrown out of the car and Mrs. Patterson was pinned under it.

Urges Adoption Refugee Children

Kingston, Ont., Apr. 13 (CP) — Adoption of refugee children from Europe by Canadian families was urged in a resolution passed by the National Conference of the Fellowship for the Christian Social Order as its three-day sessions concluded here yesterday.

The conference expressed belief the Dominion should admit refugees both on the ground they will bring new arts and industries to the countries and for humanitarian reasons.

Rev. N. A. McMurray of Toronto was elected president.

PRESENT SYSTEM OF DISTRIBUTION TO BE CONTINUED

Federation of Mayors Informed of Decision of Gov't. by Minister

INCREASE ALLOTMENT

Relief Bill Will be Increased Ten Millions This Year

Ottawa April 13 (CP)—Decision of the Dominion government to continue the present system of distribution of unemployment relief costs was communicated today to the second annual conference of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

A delegation yesterday asked the Dominion to assume full responsibility for relief costs instead of the present payment of 40 per cent by the municipalities.

Secretary George Mooney of Montreal told the 80 Mayors and Aldermen that Labor Minister Rogers had told him the Federal government has increased its allotment for unemployed relief $10,000,000 over the previous year.

"It is the hope of the federal government," Mr. Mooney quoted the minister, "that a good portion of this extra amount will find its way through the provincial governments to the municipalities, thus relieving the municipalities to some extent of their share of the burden."

The secretary said Mr. Rogers had told him "after reference to the full cabinet, I am authorized to state that the policy as announced will be continued pending such new constitutional arrangements as may follow the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations."

Insult to Intelligence.

The cabinet's reply to the delegation's submission was "an insult to the intelligence of the mayors of Canada", said Mayor George C. MacLean of St. Boniface, Man. He felt that the country owed every man an opportunity to work, and that the "great moral issue" of the Paris, April 13—(AP)— France, with land, sea and air forces strengthened and coordinated with Great Britain's, drew up a defence guarantee today for a four-power anti-aggression bloc in eastern Europe.

Well-informed observers of the Paris press said Premier Edouard Daladier had completed negotiations of a French guarantee of the territorial integrity of Poland, Turkey, Greece and Rumania. Several sources said that perhaps 'even Yugoslavia" would be included.

DANZIG GOV'T ENTERS PROTEST

Protest to Polish Envoy Against "Polish Provocations"

Danzig, April 13—(AP)— The Danzig Free State government today handed a note to the Polish Envoy here protesting against "Polish provocations."

The cooling of diplomatic relations between the Nazi-dominated free state, at the head of the Polish Corridor, and Poland has been noticeable in the last few days.

The official press announcement of the note said that in the last few days anti-Danzig leaflets had been thrown from Polish trains passing through the Danzig territory.

The leaflets were said to have contained a Polish song demanding incorporation of the Free State into Poland. The Free State is administered under League of Nations supervision.

The note referred to the "dangerous results of these Polish provocations."

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, April 13—(CP Cable)—Great Britain and France will place all their resources behind Greece and Rumania if the independence of either is threatened, Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons today.

This pledge of military support followed similar guarantees given a few days ago to Poland and was another step in the united front against aggression in Europe.

Premier Daladier of France made a similar statement in Paris and announced his country had reinforced its defences "to guarantee the frontiers of France and its Empire against any surprise."

Albanian Invasion Condemned

Prime Minister Chamberlain roundly condemned the Italian invasion of Albania but announced Britain would not denounce the Anglo-Italian treaty.

Britain's latest commitment in Europe was outlined by Mr. Chamberlain in these words:

"I therefore take this opportunity of saying that the government attach the greatest importance to the avoidance of disturbance by force, or fears of force, of the status quo in the Mediterranean and the Balkan peninsula.

Consequently they have come to the conclusion that in the event of action being taken clearly threatening the independence of Greece or Rumania, and which the Greek or Rumanian governments consider it vital to resist with their forces, His Majesty's government feel themselves bound at once to lend the Greek or Rumanian government all the support in their power.

Turkey Referred To

"We are communicating this declaration to the governments directly concerned and to others, especially to Turkey, whose close relations with the Greek government are well known. I understand the French government are making a similar declaration."

The Dominion governments have been informed of all phases of the situation.

Vincent Massey, the Canadian High Commissioner, heard the Prime Minister's announcement from the Dominions gallery. Charles Te Water of South Africa and J. W. Dulanty, the High Commissioner of Eire, also were present.

Britain looks to the Italian government to give practical evidence of good faith in the future, the Prime Minister declared. This could be demonstrated by prompt observance of fresh assurances from Rome that Italian troops, planes and pilots would be evacuated from Spain immediately after general Franco's "victory parade" in Madrid May 2.

The Prime Minister's speech was punctuated by derisive laughter from the opposition benches at his recital of Italian promises not to interfere with Albanian sovereignty.

In Touch With Russia

The House was crowded to overflowing. Many members had reserved their seats hours before debate started. Only once was the Prime Minister thrown off his main thread of argument. Near the end of his speech Labor and Liberal members demanded some reference

Highlights Of Speech Of Premier

London, Apr. 13 (AP)—Highlights of Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech:

Italian warships appeared off the coast of Albania early on April 6 and Italian residents were taken on board. In the evening Italian troops left Bari and Brindisi for Albania. Italian troops disembarked at four points.

Accounts vary as to the resistance encountered, but in any case it seems clear that by the afternoon of Good Friday the four coast towns had been occupied by Italian forces.

Italian troops seem to have entered Tirana April 8. During the same day King Zog and Queen Geraldine with their infant son arrived on Geeek territory, where they were helpfully received by the Greek government.

Accounts seem to differ very materially, one from another, and it would be wise to suspend judgment on facts which preceded the occupation.

International Briefs

Rome, April 13 (AP)—Anti-air raid whistles cleared the streets of Rome today in a test of the defences of Italy's capital against bombardments from the sky. Three big bombers flew low over the civilian airport at the edge of the city. Pedestrians hurriedly sought shelter, with bicycle police sending laggards indoors. Buses and street cars stopped while passengers took refuge in nearby doorways. Storekeepers dropped their shutters.

The air raid practice at the Vatican found Pope Pius holding a series of private audiences. The Pontiff continued these calmly.

Moscow, April 13 (AP)—Nearly 9,000 women sailors now work aboard Soviet ships, according to figures published today. In addition, 21,947 women work on boats on the Volga and other rivers, including engineers, mechanics and several skippers.

A pioneer among Soviet seawomen is 29-year-old Anna Schetinina, the first to achieve the rank of captain in a seagoing ship.

Gibraltar, April 13 (AP)—The battlecruiser Repulse, completing a shakedown trip preparatory to taking the King and Queen to Canada next month, sailed for England today.

Berlin, April 13 (AP)—A balloon being inflated at Friedrichshafen was reported to have exploded today, damaging a wooden building which housed the aerological observatory at the big Zeppelin port. The Air Ministry announced no one was injured. The "balloon room" of the observatory felt the main force of the blast but it was said the damage was not great.

Necessary Diplomatic Action Taken for Maintenance of Peace by French Republic

FRONTIER GUARDED

Daladier Praises Strength of British-French Alliance and Loyalty of French People

Paris, April 13 (CP)—Premier Daladier, acting in concert with Prime Minister Chamberlain of Britain, today declared France would go to the aid of Rumania or Greece in the event those nations were menaced by force.

The French Premier also announced that France and Poland are immediately and directly guaranteeing each other against any threat, direct or indirect, affecting their vital interests.

The Premier declared the French government attached "the greatest importance" to the prevention of any modification by force or "the menace of force" of the status quo in the Mediterranean Sea or the Balkan Peninsula (Rumania, Greece, Yugoslavia and Turkey).

Maintenance of Peace

He added that the French government was continuing the necessary diplomatic action for the maintenance of peace and strengthening of the solidarity which "should unite before the common peril all countries resolved to preserve their liberty."

Daladier said the protection of "all French interests direct or indirect and of France's alliances" remained the government's "duty and desire."

Meanwhile France strengthened her land, sea and air forces and co-ordinated them with Britain's to bolster their "halt Hitler and Mussolini" campaign.

Paris, April 13.—(CP-Havas) — Premeir Daladier today announced the government had taken military measures to guarantee the security of the frontiers of France and its empire against any surprises.

The Premier's announcement was timed to coincide with the Anglo-French pledge of aid to Greece and Rumania made by Prime Minister Chamberlain in the British House of Commons.

In communicating decisions taken by the French cabinet during the past few days to newspapermen, the Premier said:

"I defined the policy of France in my speech broadcast on March 29. I said then that Europe was in a state of alarm and that France, determined to maintain peace with liberty and honor, would first have to strengthen its own defences and bolster the ties of solidarity with all nations resolved to face the aggressor.

Gigantic Postcard Bears Message From Unemployed to Premier

London, Apr. 13 (CP-Havas)—A gigantic postcard bearing to Prime Minister Chamberlain a message from members of the "National Unemployed Workers' Movement" was delivered at 10 Downing street today by postal messengers.

Anxious crowds in Downing street during the cabinet meeting saw police frustrate an earlier attempt to deliver the postcard. Told to move on by police the group took the card to a nearby post office, from which they sent it to the prime minister by special messenger.

The message on the card read:

"Fascist aggression threatens Britain from without. Unemployment and hunger undermine it from within. You betrayed Britain by friendship with the Fascist dictators and hostility to the British unemployed.

"The National Unemployed Workers' Movement demands: Relief of immediate hunger so that a strong and healthy Britain can be built; work for the unemployed at trade union rates on deep bomb-proof shelters and a national plan of public works schemes; a peace alliance with the Soviet Union and other nations prepared to resist Fascist aggression."

Health of animals continues good in this central area, it is reported by Dr. O. J. Reed, local Dominion veterinarian, and no epidemics among stock, nor unusual loss are reported lately. Some mortality in hogs has been noted, but illness has been from usual causes, and no particular blame can be attached to any specific reason. There is not in this district, any unusual reduction in the swine population this year as reported from United States centres and whether in the United States the late weather factor has been responsible, it is not known, reports Dr. Reed.

YOUNG LAD DECEIVED BY ICE'S APPEARANCE

Demonstrating to chums his belief that the ice of the bay was still firm near the government dock late yesterday afternoon, 10-year-old Albert Montclare of Pinnacle Street found himself precipitated up to his shoulders in the slushy mass when he stepped from a dock timber to the surface of the shaky ice. Albert chose a low water spot or his experiment or more unfortunate results would have been reported.

Splendid Variety Program Features Spring Festival

Large Crowd Attends 2nd Night Show at St. Michael's Auditorium

DANCE BY O.S.D. PUPILS

St. Michael's Auditorium was crowded last evening as the second night of the annual Spring Festival got under way. Attractions of the previous evening with the addition of an entirely new stage show, comprising outstanding Belleville talent, entertained the hundreds of visitors from afternoon to a late hour at night. Attendance far exceeded that of the opening night and the conclusion of the festival this evening promises to successfully close this annual event.

A delicious supper was served from four-thirty o'clock by the ladies of the church, assisted by members of the Children of Mary. Many guests were present and thoroughly enjoyed the appetizing meal. Games were played after the supper hour and before the stage program opened.

Variety Program

Lively music by Dan Fairman and his Top Hatters, who also provided an excellent dance program later in the evening, announced the beginning of the stage entertainment. The variety of the numbers which were excellently presented appealed to the large audience which expressed keen appreciation of each number. Mr. Allan Meagher very capably acted as master of ceremonies.

Under the direction of Mr. Alf. Cooper the Boys' Public School Band was heard in a number of selections. This talented group won great applause and the director of this band is to be highly praised for the excellent training and the fine success already achieved by these young schoolboys. A clarinet quartet from the Bellevillle Municipal Band, who had been trained by Reg. Hinchey, gave a splendid number, and a musical selection of special interest was the bagpipe number by the veteran James Clarke, which was enthusiastically received.

O. S. D. Pupils

Pupils from the Ontario School for the Deaf in a series of dances were a feature of last evening's program. Present through the kind permission of the Superintendent, Mr. W. J. Morrison, these boys and girls gave three dance numbers, perfectly executed with grace and skill, which showed the careful instruction of Miss Helen Keeler, in charge of dancing at the school. In charming costumes they gave tap dances, a Scottish reel and a Spanish number, Mr. Alec Gordon acting as accompanist on the piano and taking charge of the group.

Mr. James Lazenby provided much amusement with his impersonation act which was keenly enjoyed by the audience.

Gymnastic Display

St. Michael's gymnastic team in charge of Mr. Jack Doran, gave a splendid exhibition of their work while another novel act was the weight-lifting and athletic display by Tommy Pedder and his assistants, who were introduced by Mr. Herbert Mowat.

Miss Barbara Bolte gave a smart tap dancing number and Mr. Harold Barrett delighted the audience with a baritone solo. Mr. George Cornish was heard in a group of recitations, serious and humorous, that were greatly appreciated while the sensation of the evening was the fine dance number by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Samain who stopped the show, so enthusiastic was the audience.

After the stage presentation, the crowd made the rounds of the various games and at eleven o'clock the general chairman, George A. Lee, announced the drawing for the five dollar door prize. This was won by Mr. Leo Nosworthy, of Foxboro. Dancing to Dan Fairman's music concluded a splend'd evening.

Tonight's feature will be the district all winners amateur contest.

Shannonville

Shannonville — In spite of inclement weather a crowd that taxed the accommodations of Shannonville Orange Hall to its utmost limit attended the Euchre and Dance held in the Hall on Easter Monday under the auspices of the Shannonville Cemetery Board. Many outlying points were represented at the affair including Point Anne, Belleville, Napanee, Deseronto and Trenton and a very large number from northern points. The early part of the evening was spent in progressive euchre at which the older members of the crowd excelled. Following the euchre and the presentation of prizes the tables were cleared away and the gay crowd tripped the light fantastic to music furnished by a group of talented Belleville musicians led by the ever-popular Tommy Mason. At the social hour a delicious lunch was served by the members of the Cemetery Board which was enjoyed by the crowd. Following lunch the gay crowd again joined in dancing until the early hours of the morning. Any event sponsored by the Cemetery Board always is patronized by capacity crowds. The members of the Cemetery Board are to be commended for their consistent efforts during the past few years for the betterment of the Cemetery. Not long ago the Cemetery was an eye-sore for local residents but since the formation of the new executive the cemetery has been improved until it is now one of the best cared for cemeteries in Ontario. Mr. John Leitch, caretaker of the cemetery, is also deserving of much praise for his hard work during the past few years. Prize winners in the euchre were: Ladies, first, Mrs. Fred Barlow; second, Mrs. Earl Vivian; consolation, Mrs. Sidney Fitzgerald. Gentlemen: first, Mr. Andy Reid; second, Orval Stratton, consolation, Sam Taylor. Winner of the door prize was Mr. George Osborne.

A heavy snowfall that started early Monday and continued until late in the night left a depth of four inches of slush-like snow making it extremely treacherous for walking and for motoring. People attending the Easter dance in the Hall reported that highway conditions were extremely treacherous and cars were forced to proceed at a cautious rate. Conditions became worse at midnight and those returning from dances had a difficult time reaching home.

THE ROYAL VISIT

The fact that no serious consideration has been given to the possibility of cancellation of the visit of Their Majesties to Canada is encouraging news, indicating that nothing yet has occurred which might suggest that the royal tour should not be made. The fact that Lloyd's insurance is favorable is taken as a good sign that the tour will take place according to schedule and that the situation in Europe, serious as it is, is not yet beyond hope.

LESS OF CAESAR

Caesar's commentaries contain his story of battles and conquest and reveal the military tactics of two thousand years ago, vastly different from the operations of warfare today with tanks, planes and heavy artillery. Caesar also wrote the most concise and expressive Latin. He was not only a statesman, a military commander of surpassing genius, and a man learned in the arts, but one of the most gifted men in literature.

The trend of modern education is however away from the histories of battles and such like. That has been the trend for years in the study of history where the social life of the age is becoming more and more tsressed.

Dr. Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education, stated tô the Ontario Education Association this week that this change would apply to the study of Latin in second and thir dyears. Text-books are revised with a view to shifting emphasis from the predominantly military viewpoint. He said: "It is our desire to have Latin students learn the phase of the language more fully representative of life in that era."

So there will be less of the great Julius Caesar and more works from later writers who dealt more completely with the lives and the customs of the people of Rome in the late classical days. Next fall will mark the gradual decline of interest in Caesar's commentaries and the methods of his conquests in Northwest Europe and his histories of the peoples there with whom he came in contact. Less often will phrases referring to the Gauls, Germans, Helvetians and Britons creep into the Latin exercises.

A NATIONAL LIBRARY

Should there be a national library for Canada?

Librarian E. C. Kyte of Queen's University, Kingston, told the annual joint convention of Librarias of Ontario, Quebec and Maritime Provinces that it is necessary to have a national library because the future history of Canada will be written by Americans unless there is a national library in the Dominion. The librarians named a committee to frame a resolution urging the Dominion Government to institute such a library.

Canadians generally will be surprised to learn that many of the most interesting historical documents and maps are finding their way out of Canada because of lack of a national library.

The situation as summed up by Mr. Kyte is, "When a country has been content to see the treasures that it might justly claim as its own dispersed, abated and destroyed, it is time that some warning was given, that some step was taken, not to remedy past omissions that the beyond repair, but to prevent, in the words of the old proverb, "the helve from being thrown after the hatchet". He went on, "Because we have lost many of our most important collections the mere satisfaction of wringing our hands will not appease our future poverty or justify our past indifference."

Canadians should be grateful to Mr. Kyte for bringing this matter to their attention, for documents of a national nature should be treasured. Just as materials for a national library, documents which indicate the early history of settlements and relics are fast disappearing which ought to be assembled in collections by local historical societies.

Mr. Kyte holds the hope—one to inspire every Canadian to co-operation, "material of many sorts will flow to such a library"—and he adds—"material which in a few years would be lost forever to Canada."

GERMAN "HUMOR"

Typically German humor is to be found in Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff, which on Tuesday referred to the "old tubs" of ships in the Birtish Mediterranean squadron. It spoke of British fluctuation between complicated anxiety and naive bluff. As to the ships Britain is confident in her strength. As to the "complicated anxiety" it is a tribute. Any nation should be anxious for peace and security. Only a nation on a mad rampage could not be anxious in the presence of the menace of war.

But the German editor is wrong in speaking of "naive bluff". Where there is bluff in the pact with Poland and the treaty with Greece and Turkey, is difficult to see. It is realistic facing of facts and puts the future up to the real bluffer, the man who boasted of peaceful conquest, just because other nations strove to avoid war.

The German editor speaks of the "laughable reports of war preparedness in Malta and Gibraltar". What is laughable in this except to a militarist to whom peace is a joke and war the only thing?

But then German "humor" never reaches the point of wit. That seems beyond power of the Nazis. Their "humor" is for the German people in an effort to make light of what is going on and to build up the German belief in their own invincibility.

APRIL SNOW

The snow has come again this April day
To leave the garden path untrodden, white,
And fur my window ledge; one hour to stay,—
One evanescing hour in dazzled sight.

And I regret to see it disappear
Though greening twigs are traced against the blue.
I think a friendly face no longer near Familiarly returned to smile adieu.

OLD FRIENDS ARE GOOD FRIENDS—and there is nothing like old friends. What is a friend? asked the dominie. A friend is a guy who knows all about you and still likes you, said the lad in the third row. And so when we meet up with old friends of this Great Family Journal we just know that they are the salt of the earth—and then some. From Stirling comes greetings from Fred Ward, just entering upon his sixty-ninth year as a reader of The Belleville Intelligencer and The Ontario Intelligencer. Sez he: "Will be starting on my 69th year since I began to read The Intelligencer. Like an old friend I would not like to dispense with as long as I can get the price."

"WHO LIFTED THE LID OFF HELL, THE KAISER." So wrote Elbert Hubbard, of East Aurora, N.Y., known to his intimates and readers as "The Fra", in describing the beginning of the World War in his magazine The Philistine. In that number "The Fra" dealt it out to Kaiser Wilhelm without sugar but with much salt and vinegar. Later "The Fra" went down with the Lusitania with his wife clasped in his arms, victims of German hate and submarine vengeance, one of the worst crimes of the war, and the blunder which finally brought the United States into the war with the Allies. Elbert Hubbard's son, who succeeded the father in the management of the Roycrofters, fine arts and craft workers and printers, has said ever since that the denunciation of the Kaiser in The Philistine was the cause of the sinking of the Lusitania to kill Elbert Hubbard in revenge for his writing. Since the death of Elbert Hubbard the Roycrofter plant has fallen upon evil days, and their printing office, workshops and hotel were recently sold to a Chicago publishing house, which will continue to specialize on fine printing and deluxe binding, with some attention to the other workshops of the plant specializing in fine arts and crafts other than printing.

FIFTY THOUSAND NEW-YORKERS SPEND A NICKEL A DAY to ascertain the right time, via the New York Telephone Company, a profitable sideline, on dial MEridian 7-1212. Now the New York Telephone Company proposes to reap a daily harvest of 3,000 nickels a day, in addition, by giving a 25-second weather report. Dialers will hear a 25-second weather report, recorded on magnetic tape from information supplied four times daily by the U.S. Weather Bureau—'Phone WEather 6-12-12. Now that New Yorkers know what time it is and what the weather is going to be they should be happy—but gosh all hemlock they'll find many other things they want to know, and can't find out for a nickel.

"INSANITY FAIR", that prophetic forecast of European affairs published April 1, 1938, which was so accurate, may be said to be now reaching its climax in the super-madness of European events. Every nation in Europe is an armed camp, but thus far the wolves of war have just tried their teeth on little nations unable to defend themselves. No wonder the whole world is jittery at a time when every prospect pleases — and only man is vile. THAT MAN IS IN AGAIN, TWO OF HIM.

TWEED IS GOING TO GET A GOVERNMENT POST OFFICE BUILDING—Tweed says it doesn't want a new post office where the government intends to put it. First a post office site was selected at one end of the village. That didn't suit everybody. Then he site was changed to the other end of the village. That didn't suit everybody, either, and the government has been notified, so advices from Tweed say, that unless Tweed can have the post office in the centre of the village it does not want a new Government Post Office at all.

"Carter is the most absent-minded chap I ever met," remarked a clubman to a fellow-member.

"What's he been doing now?" inquired the other.

"Why, this morning he thought he'd left his watch at home, and then took it out to see if he had time to go back and get it."

The members of the Ramblers' Wheel Club will have their first run of the season tomorrow evening.

A collision occurred this morning between two buggies on the market. Two spokes in one of the buggies were broken.

Mr. Joseph Turley of this city has assumed the management of the Campbell House in Napanee and may purchase a half interest in the hotel. It is rumored that Mr. John Henderson, also of this city, may take an interest in the business.

The members of the Mogul Base-ball Club, composed of G. T. R. employees, are practising regularly and will soon give a good account of themselves.

Seven wild geese were offered for sale on the market today. They were shot in Prince Edward County.

LORDLY KINGFISHER

Now you take the kingfisher, he is a very wicked bird indeed. The sum of his iniquity is that he eats the infant fishes before they have grown large enough for us to catch. Many a black and glowering look is directed toward kingfishers because they will fish, descending like blue javelin points to reappear with their captures.

But when he flies the light kindles him and erratic as his flight seems still he is not unlike a blue arrow cerulean driven by some pagan bowman from an ancient bow. When the kingfisher flies the lonely river is lonely no longer, and a curious brightness, that may have been shed from his wings, strikes under the root and the tangle and drives the darkness away.

When he flies through the rain, the gray rain, the grayness is gone from the dark drizzle of it, and the green, tossing current tosses more brightly beneath him. Once there were those who believed that he was an omen of the good weather. And they were a childlike and credulous people—but still when the kingfisher flies the day isn't gray any longer.—Portland Oregonian.

SILENT MEMBERS

Sir Edward Campbell's record of 18 months' silence in the House of Commons, while (cynically speaking) creditable, does not entitle him to any really proud place among the records of reticence. Major J. D. Hope, who was elected for Berwick in 1900 and retained his seat until 1922 did not during the whole of that time open his mouth in the House of Commons.

Another silent member achieved the remarkable feat of attaining front bench honors and actually becoming chief Government Whip without ever addressing the Speaker. This was Mr. Glyn, who, in 1872, when Disraeli called for an explanation from the Whips, mentioned that this was his first speech in 15 years.

But even these remarkable records shrink before the achievement of General Forester, who represented Much Wenlock for 40 years without finding it necessary or desirable to open his mouth on the affairs of his country or constituents.

A certain Sir Charles Burrell, who represented Westminster, might have beaten General Forester's record but for a single unhappy lapse into loquacity. Sir Charles sat for 60 years in the House and broke silence only once—to comment on a bill providing that housemaids should be forbidden to clean windows from the outside.—Manchester Guardian.

SPEECH VARIETY

The Englishman speaks quickly and clips his words. An Englishman says "Good Morning," cheerfully, with a rising inflection. But an Australian greets another slowly, and not so cheerfully, with a suggestion of Scottish dourness about it. The Englishman says COMParable, slurring the second syllable; many Australians say ComPARable. Educated Englishmen will say organization quickly, and it emerges ORganization, but 99 per cent of the Australians say organIZation.—The Listener.

THE FRONTIERSMEN

The threats to the safety of many nations as result of the European developments of recent months have expanded the activities of a great patriotic association, known as the Legion of Frontiersmen, with the result that the organization is about to open its books again for membership in every city, town and village in Ontario.

The Legion of Frontiersmen, founded in London in 1904, shortly after the Boer War, by a group of patriots who realized that there might come a time when the Empire would have to call upon them, is composed of men who, when a job comes along, can be relied upon to do that job to a finish silently and efficiently, always ready, with no sounding of trumpets or waving of flags.

In Canada, the Frontiersmen are affiliated with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and the dress and uniform is the same except that a blue instead of a red tunic is worn by the Frontiersmen. The Legion is non-political and non-sectarian. Politics is strictly barred and no member is permitted to attend political meetings in Legion uniform.

Not Fascists, not Nazis, not totalitarianist in any sense are the Frontiersmen, but older men of substance and standing in their respective communities, who are supposed to be ready to take up the torch in spheres vacated in emergency by younger men called to the colors. Frontiersmen take pride in their declaration that they are ever ready to answer the call and protect the lives and property of their communities.

In the face of existing stringencies and international uncertainties there would appear to be plenty of opportunity for such service as the Frontiersmen perform. — Sudbury Star.

REFUSE RATIFICATION

The Legislature of Rhode Island once more has voted against ratifying the first ten amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Those amendments, as everyone knows, make up the Bill of Rights. It is they which put specific prohibitions upon the power of the Federal Government by saying, "this you shall not do." Most of the rest of the Constitution concerns itself with the machinery of government. These ten amendments concern themselves with its spirit.

But Rhode Island, which was the last of the Original Thirteen to ratify the body of the document has steadfastly refused to give her assent to the amendments. Not that it makes any difference; the amendments are as binding upon Rhode Island as upon any other member of the Union. — Baltimore Sun.

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS

At Lansing, Mich., a locomotive engineer, driving an automobile, was killed at a crossing of the very railroad on which he had been employed. There is no way of knowing how efficient or careful this man was as a car driver, but we have it on the authority of locomotive engineers themselves that as a rule, men employed at this class of work are not good motor car drivers.

We are personally acquainted with several engineers who are first-class car drivers. We know others, men who drive passenger trains through the night at 70 or 80 miles an hour, who admit that 50 miles in a motor car gives them the jitters, even when they're not at the wheel. Not a few decline absolutely to drive cars. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

PAIN IN THE HEAD

In my student days I witnessed a most prolonged and difficult operation for the removal of a small nerve bundle that was causing unbearable pain in the head and side of the face. This is known as Tic Doloreaux or trifacial neuralgia. The operation was justified because only morphine could deaden the pain.

Today this operation is not in use to the same extent as the nerve supplying the side of head and face can now be injected with alcohol and other substances and the patient kept free of pain for months and sometimes for years. There is thus no fear of forming the drug habit.

Another pain at side of head and face is migraine, believed to be due to mental and physical tiredness, also.

Pain in the forehead immediately in or above the eyes is usually due to eyestrain; if pain is up a little higher on the forehead it is likely due to sinus trouble. If half way up forehead, it is usually due to digestive disturbances, as is also pain at back of head.

Pain below the ear, at the hinge joint connecting upper and lower jaw may be due to mumps or ear disturbance but another cause for pain in this region is reported by Drs. E. C. Ernst and J. B. Costen in Radiology. These physicians report that the removal of teeth from the upper or lower jaw can cause pain about the ear, up to top of head, about the eye, and along the border of the tongue "Burning of the tongue follows, and the patient lives in dread of cancer." The pain is caused by pressure on the nerve supplying the ear and side of the head as it passes over the joint between upper and lower jaw bones. Relief is obtained by proper bridgework or other methods by which the dentist can bring the jaws together properly.

This discovery by Drs. Ernst and Costen should help physicians and dentists give relief for pain in this part of the head.

FREE SPEECH

So much ranting has been going on about free speech over the radio of late—free speech that is so expensive, that only a wealthy man can command such a ready-made audience as the ether waves now provide—that the business might be worth a look see.

The inalienable privilege of free speech, as exemplified for all Britons by Hyde Park in London, has been brought into the picture a great many times of late.

Of course, these columns long ago pointed out that so far, Hyde Park has not been fitted up with loud speakers. But nevertheless, Hyde Park still stands as a symbol of a principle.

But Hyde Park is a symbol, too, of futility, for it has never yet been the source of any great reform, despite the verbal pollution of much cubic space of London's smoke-laden air.

From Communistic sources comes this angle on Hyde Park:

"I have often been asked since returning from the Soviet Union whether a citizen in Moscow can get up in a park and attack the Government, as he can in Hyde Park in this country. My first reply usually is: 'God forbid that he should want to-'—for it is hard to imagine a more ineffective freedom, than the ability to address a handful of regular Hyde Park listeners on a Sunday afternoon; that is, if one is interested in effective speech that influences people to act, and not simply in exercising one's lungs, which can be equally well done in the bedroom with the window open."

Poor fellow, of course, he has been living in Russia and had forgotten that it is in bathrooms that lung exercise is usually taken, but outside of that, his point seems to be pretty well taken.—Timmins Press.

AIR RAID DANGER

Mr. Oliver Simmonds, as president of the Air-Raid Precautions Institute, made some grim calculations when he addressed the Institute on Tuesday. On what scale might we expect the casualties of an air attack to be in the absence of large-scale evacuation and efficient shelters?

The answer is worked out in this way: From every ton of bombs dropped upon urban areas of average population density we might expect ten people to be killed and 20 wounded. He estimated that at least in the early weeks of a war, Germany could rain upon us 3,000 tons of bombs a day, of which one-half might fair of their objectives. This would give us 15,000 killed and 30,000 wounded. But of course, the figures must be heavily discounted by the various means of shelter which are being used.

The Berlin authorities are said to have calculated that the weight of bombs which would be dropped upon their city in the first weeks of a war would be 600 tons a day, and the casualty rate expected would be 70,000 killed and 140,000 injured per week. Mr. Simmonds gave us as the probable casualties in London, in the absence of thorough precautions, 100,000 killed and 200,000 injured a week.

There is uncertainty in the figures, but whatever our method of calculation the result is ghastly. — Manchester Guardian.

CHARLIE McCARTHY INC.

Though he complains weekly that his 75 cents allowance is insufficient to meet his needs, yet Charlie McCarthy has filed articles of incorporation for a $75,000 firm to supervise everything done in Charlie's name, including sale of Charlie McCarthy toys and novelties, radios, motion pictures, radio and exhibitions.

Of course the articles of incorporation really are for the Edgar Bergen interests. Directors of the corporation are three Los Angeles attorney, John O'Melveny, John W. Meyers and Arthur J. O'Keefe.

TAMMANY WARNING

When Tammany District Leader James J. Hines was sentenced to from four to eight years in State Prison the underworld got final, grim, convincing proof that no politician in New York City is any longer powerful and privileged enough to protect criminals—and get away with it.

The epoch is ended. That cynically accepted theory is smashed. Both politics and crime now see their alliance can definitely lead to Sing Sing.

In view of Hines' age the public will find little fault, we think, with General Sessions Judge Chas. C. Nott, Jr. for imposing the short, concurrently running sentences instead of something nearer the maximum 27 years the indictment and conviction permitted. —N.Y. World-Telegram.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, April 14

A DAY of much definite promise is indicated by the lunar as well as mutual configurations of important planets. It is time for moving toward major objectives, with the assurance of the co-operation of elders, superiors and those in places of power and authority. Sound propositions and progressive ideals should be pursued with persistent and steady endeavor. Romance or adventure is also probable.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of very definite progress in the direction of major ambitions or high objectives. Elders, those of prestige and importance will be found ready to endorse and support these if steady effort, sound plans and constructive methods are demonstrated. There also is an indication of a sudden romance or unusual adventure, with probably an elderly woman figuring. Property values may be enhanced.

A child born on this day may be serious, studious, substantial and trustworthy, attracting the recognition and support of those in place and power. Its sound qualities and versatility may assist it to adventure and romance as well as responsible position.

No Interest In Reading, Spelling

By Garry C. Myers, Ph.D.

A Chicago mother writes:

"Dear Dr. Myers:—My boy, eight years old, is in the second grade. He missed most of the first year on account of sickness . . . . I cannot get him interested in reading and spelling. He grows tired when I want him to read although he likes drawing and coloring and would do that any time." I answered her about as follows:

Please remember, Mother, that your child, just as you and I, loses interest in what he cannot do well and grows tired of it. Read aloud a great deal to him from illustrated books you can borrow from the public library. You also can find there books with pictures that will be easy enough for him to read.

Book Too Hard

His school book is too hard for him now. You must find things that are easier for him so he can succeed. There are several good magazines for children with very easy reading and things to do and draw and color. Encourage him to cut out pictures from old magazines and make a scrap book. You could print or type under each picture for him or have him print the name of the picture or objects in it. Be sure he knows the letters of the alphabet. Some poor readers don't you know.

You might print neatly a story as he makes it up. Then he will like to read it, since it is his. Better to type it if you have a typewriter. And he will like to copy words and sentences on the typewriter. It is also excellent to help him learn to spell.

Help in Spelling

As you help him in spelling, keep him at only two or three words at a sitting. Be sure the word is in large clear print and not near another word. Be very calm, so he will be. Have him look at the word carefully and pronounce it, then have him name the letters slowly in right order as he looks at the word. Have him do this again, then again, and don't let him try to spell it until he is sure he knows it. The main problem is to keep him from ever spelling a word wrong while learning it, therefore to be very careful and never to hurry. Praise him as he succeeds, show no anger when he makes a mistake. Keep your voice soft and low. Exercise eternal patience.

Don't have him read or spell in the presence of another child who can read or spell better than he can, or he will feel ashamed. He must keep self-respect, courage and confidence.

It might be well to have his vision and hearing checked. If he doesn't hear sounds distinctly, he will have trouble both in reading and spelling. If he does not see clearly, or if the words and letters move about as he sees them, he will be hopelessly confused. And very best wishes to you and him.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Cousins or Step-Cousins?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are both 18 years old and are willing to wait until we are older before going out together steadily. The reason we are writing is we are wondering if we should tell our parents about our mutual interest in each other. You see we are kind of related. Her father is my father's stepbrother. What should we do if they object? Should we go on, or try to forget?

Roger

It's always a good thing for young people to tell their parents about the boys and girls in whom they are interested. And I suggest that you do his. Do you mean half-brother or step-brother? There is no actual blood tie in a step-brother relationship.

A Clean Break

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We had an understanding all along that we would just be good friends. She knew I couldn't afford to marry. Meanwhile we became very fond of each other. I realized it wasn't fair having her refuse all other dates, passing up some nice fellow who would make her a good husband. When I told her we'd have to break up, she cried hysterically, and insisted she must see me, even if we never marry. She is 21, I am several years older.

Dilemma

It was very square of you to tell the young lady you couldn't afford to marry, and unless she has some claim on you, it's wiser to stick to that resolution. Tearful girls have a way of breaking down resistance, and if marriage is out of the question, the effect of hysterics is as unfair to you as it is to the girl herself.

These In-Law Troubles

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Before we married I promised to live in the home of my fiance's parents for one year, as we thought that would give us a better start. When the time came to move, my husband would not make any plans.

His parents persuaded him to stay and he takes their advice in everything. He never wants to go anywhere unless they go too. We live on a large farm, which is run at a profit. But I'm not happy. I left a good home, and I'm so miserable here I can hardly stand it. If he really loved me, would he treat me this way?

Unhappy

You tell me the farm is successful and very likely your husband thinks if he left the parental home the farm would do less well. His parents may have some business understanding with him that the property will be his if he continues to stay with them and manage it. This may account for his breaking his promise to move when the year was up.

But it's unfair of him not to take you to any places of amusement, unless his parents are willing to go too.

I'm going to urge you to make friends with your in-laws. Don't antagonize them or hold them responsible for your husband's being a stay-at-home. After working on a farm all day, farmers aren't too keen on seeking amusement of evenings. Why don't you compromise on Saturday nights out, and get him to take you somewhere every week?

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

FOR MEN ONLY . . . WAYS TO MAKE YOURSELVES UNPOPULAR WITH GIRLS

Here are some Easy Lessons for you men, sure-fire hints on how to show girls, young and not-so-young that good manners are something to which you give no attention. They are guaranteed to make you unpopular with girls:

Always honk the horn of your car when you are calling for a girl. This will delight the girl's family; it will make the neighbors love you, especially if they are trying to sleep; and make your girl wonder how to break the news to you that it would be pleasanter for all concerned if you will use the door-bell.

Don't dream of getting out of your car to open the door for a girl and help her into the car. By all means take the point of view that inviting her to drive with you is all that a girl can expect. And, when you return from the drive, smugly keep your seat at the wheel. Why should she expect you, the popular Romeo, to get out of the car, open the door, and help her from the car?

Never send her flowers. Not even one inexpensive nosegay. All the other girls at the dance may be happily wearing corsages sent them by their generous-thoughted gallants . . . but what's that to you? Your willingness to accept her invitation to the dance should be enough, even if the dance is given by her club or school-class, and even if the tickets were on her.

Make a point of always being late for an engagement with her, specially when her family have invited you to dinner. This means that you can make your entrance excitingly dramatic, and will emphasize your condescension to dine with simple-hearted, hospitable people. Why should you worry that her mother should have to be harassed about "keeping dinner hot?"

Show your superiority by being arrogant to people who serve you . . . this is especially effective with headwaiters, waiters, ushers, taxi drivers. If you are arrogant enough the one-who-serves-you will notice that you are the Little Man who inevitably undertips.

When a man or a woman stops to speak to you or your girl-friend at a restaurant table, don't take the trouble to rise. This will make your girl companion proud of you, and she won't feel at all apologetic about you in front of her friends.

If these social errors don't succeed in making you unpopular, I'll tell you some more soon that will turn the trick.

Manners of the Moment

Why doesn't some civic-minded person suggest a Hats-off-in-the movies week? It seems incredible that so many women can be so utterly selfish as not to have a thought about the person behind the bows and birds and furbelows that seem devil-directed to obstruct the view.

And it takes bravery for us who are behind the enemy-hat to ask the lady (?) to remove it. The ill-bred female who keeps her hat on in the movies is the ill-bred female who gives those meant-to-be-devastating looks to anyone who presumes to ask her to remove her hat.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Possible Complications Make Measles A Disease to be Feared

In tracing the course of an attack of measles yesterday, we had progressed to the point where the rash had spread over the whole body.

This spreading of the rash is accompanied by a marked rise in temperature, and the child becomes miserable and irritable. His eyes become reddened and so sore that he cannot look at light. This is the acute stage of the disease; it lasts for three or four days and then the temperature begins to fall. The rash fades slowly until about the sixth day, when it disappears. The youngster usually makes a rapid recovery from his illness, and in about three or four more days is up and around again. Quite often he is able to return to school in a week. The infectious stages of the disease are over when the rash disappears.

The importance of measles isn't just that it makes the child feel miserable for a week or so, but because of complications that may follow the disease. Bronchitis is the most frequent complication in my experience. In fact, when a baby gets measles, I have found that it almost invariably has bronchitis too. Every now and then a doctor runs across a case where this bronchitis has led to pneumonia.

When you find this complication then you are in for trouble. Many small children who develop pneumonia in this way succumb to the attack; those who recover are often left with lungs and chests permanently affected and weakened.

There are many children who have fought off tuberculosis and have been left with a healed tuberculosis lesion in their lungs. These children are liable to develop an acute tuberculosis infection as a complication of the measles.

German measles is quite different from the kind we have been discussing. For the most part it is a disease that affects older children, occurring more frequently in children over the age of five years. Most common during the late spring and summer, it has an incubation period of fifteen to twenty days. Quite often, in German measles, the rash will appear without the forerunning head cold. Frequently the first symptom of German measles is the rash itself quite often accompanied by some enlargement of the glands of the neck.

In this ailment, the rash isn't accompanied by any degree of fever. In fact, the child often feels so well that you have a difficult time keeping him in bed. German measles is practically never followed by complications, as is the case with ordinary measles and its chief claim to fame is the fact that it is sometimes mistaken for the more serious type.

However, a child can, and often does, have two attacks of measles in his lifetime; one attack of the regular kind; the other, German measles. It is rare, however, that we run across children who have more than these two attacks. When it does happen, it is because the immunity which the patient derived from the first attack wasn't sufficient to last the rest of his life.

Prosecutions Follow Infractions of Fruit And Vegetable Act

Fruit transported inter provincially must be inspected and carry an inspection certificate of an official inspector. Recently, infractions of this regulation have been reported and court cases have followed, it was reported today by C. T. Stevenson, senior fruit and vegetable inspector for Eastern Ontario of the Belleville office.

Pleading guilty to a charge of taking apples to Montreal without the proper inspection and certificate, before Magistrate Butler yesterday, a local grower and one transport company were each fined $25.00 and costs following information laid by Inspector Stevenson under the Dominion Fruit and Vegetables Act.

Offering cull apples for sale on Peterborough market recently, A. Heaslip, Clarke Township farmer was fined $10 and costs before Magistrate E. A. Gee in Peterborough court.

The charge was laid by Inspector Stevenson of the local office, and Inspector A. Walton of Newcastle. The charge was that he had offered for sale apples that were below the minimum grade.

Heaslip pleaded guilty when arraigned before Magistrate Gee.

"I cannot read or write, Your Worship" he explained. "Two years ago the Inspector spoke to me about the fruit I was selling and told me what to do and I have been trying to follow out his orders."

"You don't need to read or write in order to pick out wormy or scabby apples" replied Magistrate Gee.

"I had some culls, all right, but they were for the Indians."

"Don't you think Indians are people?" asked the court.

"They will take anything," replied the accused.

Heaslip was given time in which to raise part of the fine money he did not immediately possess.

"We are not after the money of these people," pointed out the Fruit Inspector. "We warn them repeatedly and try to get them to stop selling inferior stuff. When they persist there is nothing else to do but bring them into court."

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

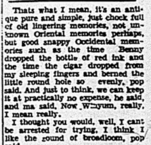
Little Benny's Note Book

Ma is having the living room decorated over and after supper she said to pop, Everything is practically settled, Willyum, I mean about doing this room over. The only thing that remains is what you might call the biggest question of all, I mean the rug question, because naturelly the whole room revolves around the rug, dont you agree with me, Willyum?

Absolutely, if it wasn't for its rug a room would go flying off into space in fact I believe that's the origin of a good many comets, pop said, and ma said, I was talking it all over with Howerd Beckwer the decorater and he agreed with me that the logical choice lies between a modern broadloom to correspond with the modernistic tone of the rest of the room, and a real antique to tone down the modernistic tone, what do you think, Willyum?

An antique by all means, pop said, and ma said, Oh Willyum, I was hoping you'd say that and fearing you wouldn't. Of course they come a little high, comparatively, but as Mr. Meckwer says, what can take the place of a real old Terkish or Persian rug with its softly faded harmonies and unknown old lingering memories?

This old rug of ours has practically got holes worn in it, hasn't it? pop said, and ma said, It's an undiluted wreck, if you want a frank discription.



Thats what I mean, it's an antique pure and simple, just chock full of old lingering memories, not unknown Oriental memories perhaps, but good snappy Occidental memories such as the time Benny dropped the bottle of red ink and the time the cigar dropped from my sleeping fingers and berned the little round hole so evenly, pop said. And just to think, we can keep it at practically no expense, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum, really, I mean really.

I thought you would, well, I cant be arrested for trying, I think I like the sound of broadloom, pop said.

Proberly thinking it sounded cheeper.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know the real cause of piles is on the inside?

Do you know they can be doctored from the inside?

Do you know you must get at and remove the cause of Piles, to get rid of them?

The real cause of piles is poor circulation—a congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel. This makes the veins flabby, full of impure congested blood and weakens the rectal membranes.

So if you would have relief from piles you should use an internal medicine like HEM-ROID, a prescription written by Dr. J. S. Leonhardt. HEM-ROID banishes piles by relieving the cause. It stimulates circulation, eases the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to heal and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that J. S. McKeown or any other good druggist is authorized to make good our promise to you that if you are not completely satisfied with the results from one bottle, you may have your money back.

Criticizes Leaders On Their Stand On Empire Affairs

Rev. A. L. Geen Refers To Church Unity

Lindsay, April 13 (Special)—Rev. A. L. Geen of Belleville, Grand Chaplain of the Grand Chapter of Ontario East, Royal Black Knights of Ireland, and oldest delegate to the Orange convention of Ontario East being held in Lindsay this week, said in an interview that members of the session should "stand firm by the principles of our fathers."

He declared that the stand of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Opposition leader, Dr. Manion in regard to Empire affairs "is a distinct challenge to all loyal British citizens" to stand by these outlined principles.

"Canadian leaders who sit on the fence and fail to take a definite stand on important issues are not worthy of the high office they occupy" said Rev. Mr. Geen.

Yesterday the well known Belleville resident who has long distinguished himself in educational and religious affairs of his home community, was elected to the Grand Chaplain's office for the tenth successive year. In addition to being the oldest Anglican minister in the province and one of the oldest members of the Orange Lodge, he is also the oldest Oddfellow.

Mr. Geen is a strong supporter of all church union. There is no doubt in his mind that the lack of attendance in church today is the result of the divisions in the Christian Church. "We should all have unity," he stated.

Referring to the old days of 'circuit riding,' the Rev. Mr. Geen recalled the time when he as a minister of the Anglican church travelled 100 miles each Sunday on horseback to carry the gospel to his scattered flock. "A mere 4,000 miles a year was nothing in the days of my youth," he said. He ministered to the Ojibway and Six Nations Indians, and is a member of both these tribes.

Question of Sunday Hunting Laid Over Until Next Year

Toronto, Apr. 13 (CP)—Fish and Game Committee of the Ontario Legislature today left in abeyance until next year the question of Sunday hunting, particularly in Northern Ontario.

J. M. Cooper (Lib. Sudbury) said all fourteen northern members of the House favored Sunday hunting. Representations on the question would be made again next year. Mr. Cooper said he had a letter from the Lord's Day Alliance saying it was not opposed to Sunday hunting in Northern Ontario.

The committee approved a recommendation that the 60-cent royalty on bear pelts, taken as trophies, be abolished. D. J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, said the royalty was an inconvenience, especially to United States hunters.

Use of airplanes for shipping raw pelts be prohibited unless a permit is obtained from the department. Fines of $50 to $500 would be provided.

That the use of automatic shotguns holding not more than three shells, be allowed.

Large Decrease Forecast in Canning Factory Operations

An approximate decrease of fifty percent in growth of canning factory produce of Prince Edward County is forecast by canning factory officials of the southern county this year, a prominent canner of Wellington stated this morning.

A number of factories will not operate, while others will decrease acreage to a large extent. One greenhouse owner will grow one million tomato plants this year as compared to two and one-half million plants of a year ago.

Excellent crops of last year that resulted in full warehouses, and lax home and foreign markets are given as the reasons for the reduced production planned for the current year.

2098 Placements Made by Employment Office in Last Year

Two thousand and ninety-eight placements a slight decrease over figures of a year ago, were made in all phases of employment by the Belleville branch of the Ontario Employment Service last year, according to the annual report of the branch. Four hundred and seven farm placements were made in the district, a slight increase over last year.

Six hundred and seventy-two persons, one hundred and ninety of whom are women and girls, are registered at present in the office.

A marked shortage of trained domestics and experienced farm labor in this district is noted in the report.

PICTON

ASSAULT CHARGE IS DISMISSED

Percy Minaker Held Not Responsible for Attack in March Last

Picton, April 13 — (Special)—A charge of assault against Percy Minaker was dismissed by Magistrate Butler in court here yesterday. Evidence was given by Glendon Farrington, serving time for theft and yesterday convicted of jail breaking and carrying an offensive weapon and also by Huron Brant, recently convicted of arson, that in jail Minaker had stated 'I hope that I did not leave any clues in the McLeod case so that the police can get me.'

This referred to the attack on D. L. McLeod, C.N.R. station agent, here, last October, as he was leaving the station one night. He suffered a scalp wound and his assailant escaped after a chase.

Arthur Farrington, a brother of Gendon, who is serving a term for theft, testified for the defense. He said that his brother had said that he would get Minaker, who he claimed had given the evidence at the theft charge hearing, which had convicted him. Further evidence was given to show Minaker was in Toronto at the time of the assault on Mr. McLeod.

Picton, April 13. — (Special) — Pleading guilty to charges of breaking from Picton jail on April 8 and of being in possession of an iron bar to be used in a manner dangerous to the public, Glendon Farrington was sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary by Magistrate Butler here yesterday.

Farrington was awaiting transfer to the Ontario Reformatory to serve a two-year term at the time. The sentences will run concurrently.

At the previous trial on charges of theft, Farrington had asked for a penitentiary term rather than another visit to Guelph and today left the court room smiling with his wish fulfilled. He has a lengthy record.

Turnkey E. Rist revealed that he had sent Farrington from the cell block to the kitchen on Saturday morning and during his absence in the men's quarters, Farrington had locked him in the corridor and before leaving the jail by a side-door had secured a wrecking bar from the store room, jimmied the locked drawer in the gaoler's office in an attempt to secure a gun and, failing this, had smashed a lock on the door giving him freedom.

GIVEN THREE MONTHS

Picton, April 13.—Harold Leavitt will serve three months in Picton jail as a result of pleading guilty to taking a car belonging to Gordon Cole, early Saturday morning. He was unable to pay a fine of $50 and costs of $13.75.

Constable P. Smith stated in evidence that attempts had been made that morning to steal seven different cars and believed Leavitt had been guilty of practically every attempt.

Cars which had been tampered with but which he had not been able to get started, included those of Clarence King, Jimmie Davies and C. A. Jones, and three others.

Cole's car had been taken from in front of Mrs. Leaven's home on King Street and driven out to Main Street. Leavitt had then sought out Will Smith, local service station operator, to secure three gallons of gasoline. On being told the car was a "pick-up" Smith had attempted to persuade Leavitt to abandon it. Later, failing to get the car started, Leavitt had abandoned it. Accused has a previous record.

"Apple Day"

The Boys Scouts held an apple day on Saturday. It was the second annual sale and despite very bad weather, the sum of $75 was contributed.

A cup and saucer shower was given Miss Ena Walker of Milford at the home of Miss Millie Dodds, Picton on Tuesday night. The gifts were presented in a decorated basket. Assisting the hostess in the serving of refreshments were Mrs. J. Miller, Miss Gwen Clapp and Miss Jean Mason. Miss Walker is being married this week to Mr. Leonard Carman of Green Point.

The annual shower of eggs for the Prince Edward County hospital was held last week end and Mrs. C. H. McGibbon, the treasurer, yesterday said that 42 dozen eggs had been donated.

Rev. D. T. McClintock of Belleville addressed the meeting of the Phi-Del-A-Tee Club on Tuesday evening at the United Church. His address proved very interesting to the young people. A social hour was spent.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, April 13 (Special)—Local police are using several clues in an effort to apprehend two or more persons who on Sunday afternoon or evening broke into the rear entrance of the store and apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Don Bonisteel, Dundas Street E., and ransacked the place, taking with them a quantity of tobaccos, chocolate bars and candies. Provincial Constable Harry Caldwell investigated and discovered from tracks in an ash pile at the rear of the premises, that more than one person were implicated. Mr. and Mrs. Bonisteel had gone to Kingston by motor during the early afternoon and the breakin evidently occurred some time between that and 8.30 in the evening when they discovered the entry on their return. Entrance was made by prying loose the fastenings of a rear door and forcing an inner door to the store itself. Amount of the loss has not been ascertained, but it is not thought to be extensive. Several suspects are under surveillance.

Two courts were held locally on Tuesday, both in the same quarters. Owing to the fact that Monday was a legal holiday the regular session of Division Court was held in the court rooms in the earlier afternoon with Magistrate's Court following later in the day.

Ice in the Trent River is breaking up gradually and already piles of loose cakes of ice are visible at the mouth of the river where the current deposits them. Open water was visible on Tuesday for a considerable distance between the highway bridge and the railroad bridge a few blocks north, and at the present rate it will not be long before both river and bay are clear again.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Graham, Lorne Avenue, are holidaying in New York City and other United States points.

Local R.C.A.F. officers and their wives were guests at the Mair-Graham wedding in Belleville on Saturday last.

Wing Comander C. M. McEwen is back again at the local station this week after a few days leave. Ceremonial drills are being carried out at regular intervals in preparation for the visit of the King and Queen next month, and the commanding officer is most anxious that the local R.C.A.F. contingent make as fine a showing as possible.

Mr. Gordon Derry of St. Catharines, spent Easter with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Errol Derry, Murphy Street.

A number of local hockey fans are planning a party to attend the Boston-Toronto hockey game in Toronto tonight.

AT THE McCARTHY

"StageCoach"

Andy Devine, whose voice has all the off-key variations of a Chinese fiddle, brings a new type of whimsy to the screen as Buck Rickabaugh in "Stagecoach," the Walter Wanger production now showing at the McCarthy theatre.

Under the direction of John Ford, whose creative ability reaches its heights with he-men roles, Devine's characterization of a frontier stagecoach "skinner" lends new color to his screen personality. With minute precision, Andy's pride in his six-horse teams and his downright fear of Apache Indians are molded into a serio-comic portrayal of broad appeal.

Andy's — or rather, Buck's—chief pride which emerges at every opportunity, is his importance as a gossip and news bearer. When his stagecoach dashes into a town, it is immediately surrounded by frontiersmen who are eager to hear their isolation pierced by Buck's off-key news items. Young boys stand aside in open-mouthed awe as the adventurous-appearing stage driver climbs down off the box and basks in this brief importance.

The only complication in Buck's life, or rather the 14 complications consist of his wife's grandparents and their 12 children who eat at his expense.

Other members of the cast include, John Wayne, as the Ringo Kid, John Carradine as Hatfield the mystic-adventurer, Thomas Mitchell, as Doc Boone, Claire Trevor as Dallas the dancer and entertainer, George Bancroft as Curly Wilcox United States Marshal, Louise Platt as Mrs. Mallory, Berton Churchill as Gatewood, a pillar of society and Donald Meek as Peacock a whiskey salesman—and what if he did mix his sales talks with sermons? Didn't he always want to be a preacher until his wife inherited that distillery.

"Stagecoach" is the story of these people—and what happened to them in the short lapse of forty-eight hours.

Due to the tremendous suspense developed in "Stagecoach" we recommend you see it from the start, which follows the presentation of a twenty minute all star comedy and a clever ten minute technicolor merrie melody cartoon and the serial "The story of Flying-G-Men."

Says Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced

At Home—Small Cost

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, as good advice for home treatment as any friend can give, is to get a prescription known as Moone's Emerald Oil.

Simply ask your druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer burdensome. So penetrating and efficient is Emerald Oil that it also helps simple swellings due to strain to disappear. Doyle's Drug Store.

AT THE BELLE

"Wings of the Navy"
"Say it in French"

Easily the best service picture ever to reach the screen is "Wings of the Navy" a Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan production which is now at the Belle Theatre with an impressive cast headed by George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne and Frank McHugh, demonstrating anew that there is no studio in Hollywood that can match this one presenting on the screen vivid, exciting, authentic stories about the nation's defenders.

That pre-eminence was established several years ago with the production of "Here Comes the Navy". It was maintained with "Devil Dogs of the Air" and "Submarine D-1". And now "Wings of the Navy" has come along not only to top anything of like nature produced by any other studio but even the best of the previous Warner service pictures.

Perhaps the background of the story which as the title implies, is the naval aviation service, lends itself more readily than any other arm of the national defense to the purposes of thrilling drama. And perhaps it is just that the story is better than those of all previous pictures.

Whatever it is "Wings of the Navy" emerges as a completely compelling production that holds the spectator continuously engrossed from the first minute to the last and has him on the edge of his seat a good part of that time.

Young Payne, a comparative newcomer, who plays George Brent, the younger brother, confirms the excellent impression he made in "Garden of the Moon". He enacts his role with an ingratiating sincerity that helps enormously to make effective the many scenes that revolve about him.

As the centre of the romantic interest, Miss de Havilland makes it easy to understand why the younger of the two brothers falls in love with his elder brother's fiancee, for she acts her part with all the warmth and charm that have come to be expected from the delectable Olivia.

"Say it in French"

Grand romance and madcap humor go hand-in-hand in the new Paramount comedy "Say it in French", which is the added laugh feature. The ideal starring team of Ray Milland and Olympe Bradna a clever and sophisticated story and smooth direction add up to one of the most satisfying and entertaining pictures of the season.

Informative, entertaining and different is "Robbin Good" a clever expose of card sharks and crooked gamblers, as demonstrated by Louis Zingone, to be presented on the same program.

LATE PREM. LYONS BURIED

Devonport, Tasmania, April 13—(CP-Reuters)—In a churchyard within sight of his home here, the remains of Joseph Aloysius Lyons, late Prime Minister of Australia, were buried today.

Brought from the mainland in a destroyer, the coffin was received by the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Hobart, Most Rev. J. D. Simonds, who conducted the burial service.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 13—(CP)— The British Premier's firm declaration against further aggression gave the Toronto market new confidence today and price advances in the early hours to show index gains of about a point in the mining and industrial groups. Western oil shares were up moderately. Trading was slow on the rise however and only 215,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

Selling of Pamour on a decline of 35 cents to 2.95 was the feature of the gold section. Senior golds were up by fractions and gains of 5 to 15 cents were scattered down the list. Some of the base metals ruled hibher, including Nickel, Smelters, Waite-Amulet and Pend-Oreille. In the industrial section the senior oils, banks, liquors and golds were firm to strong. Steels were again a bit soft.

Slightly firmer prices were posted by some of the western oils, including Okalta and Calgary-Edmonton.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 13 (AP)—Stock market apprehension over European war dangers was a bit less pronounced today and leading issues edged up one to three points

Except for a mild flurry in the forenoon, dealings were light throughout. Near the final hour prices were under the tops. Transfers were about 900,000 shares.

HIGHLIGHTS

Public opinion throughout the world has once again been profoundly shocked at this fresh exhibition of use of force. It must be apparent that a powerful nation has imposed its will on a small and relatively defenceless country and has done so by an imposing show of armed force.

Pressed by Lord Perth as to what were Italian intentions with regard to the future, bearing in mind definite pledges and assurances which the Italian government had already given, Count Ciano said this would depend on the wishes of the Albanians.

REPAIR TALL CHIMNEY OF CORBIN LOCK CO.

Steeplejacks working on a specially constructed platform ringing the brickwork of the chimney of the Corbin Lock Company, Ltd., and engaged in repointing the brickwork of the tall stack have attracted attention of downtown residents during the past day or so. Cool winds of yesterday and today provide plenty of atmosphere for the men working so high above ground.

CHILD SUSTAINS FRACTURED LEG

Martin Barlow, five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barlow, 51 Highland Avenue, was rushed to Belleville hospital late this afternoon after being struck by a car driven by J. R. Tomlinson of Port Elgin, Ontario. The child sustained a fractured leg and several body bruises but is not seriously injured. Mr. Tomlinson was proceeding asterly on Highland Avenue, when the child apparently darted out from the south curb directly into the path of the car, the vehicle knocking the child down. Mr. Tomlinson rendered every assistance, later reporting the accident to the police and was not held.

Aldershot, England, April 13—(AP)—The King and Queen motored here from Windsor today and watched field firing displays and camouflage infantry in defensive exercises. they saw anti-tank, anti-aircraft and Bren guns and field artillery operating from camouflaged emplacements.

New York, April 13.—(AP)—Hendrick Willem Van Loon says that democracy is "spinach" as far as he is concerned.

Declaring the word had become a synonym for cowardice and stupidity in the last six months, the author told a town hall luncheon yesterday:

"Democracy has gone the way of all men and nations who are not willing to stand up and fight for their own ideals and who thereupon discover that if you are no longer willing to fight for your own ideals, others most surely are not going to allow you to live by them."

London, April 13. —(AP)— The Earl of Perth, retiring as British Ambassador to Italy, is expected to leave Rome within ten days, Sir Percy Loraine, hitherto Ambassador to Turkey, will assume the Rome post immediately on Lord Perth's departure.

Paris, April 13.—(CP-Havas News Agency in a London dispatch last night quoted Soviet Russian quarters there as stating the Moscow government was willing to guarantee Rumania's independence only if that country returned Bessarabia to Russia.

The dispatch added:

"The report provoked a sensation. If true it would mean that for the first time in recent European history the Soviet Union has joined the ranks of "irredentist" powers — countries demanding return of territory they lost after the Great War."

PRESENT SYSTEM

relief question had not been touched by the cabinet.

Mayor Walter Mitchell of Halifax agreed Canadians must be given opportunity for work. He urged all able-bodied men as well as the youth of the land should be given training and should be paid while under instruction. The Federal government was not providing enough work. There should be more public works projects in municipalities to provide work for relief recipients. Such projects as the trans-Canada highway were of little help to unemployed married men of municipalities as they could not leave their families to go out to work on the road.

Wanted to Add

Controller F. J. Conboy of Toronto said it was unlikely the Federation could succeed in passing away resolution to change the Dominion Government's mind, but he submitted it might be possible to have the central government agree to a broader definition of material aid. "I think they will agree that provision of shelter, fuel, food and clothing for the unemployed is not enough," he said.

The delegates then unanimously passed a resolution asking the Dominion to include dental and medical services, hospitalization and household necessities in the "material aid" category.

it without verbal demonstrations and without useless provocations. To be effective action does not have to be accompanied by either speeches or threats.

"That is why we have taken military measures which will guarantee the frontier of France and its empire against all surprises.

"In the name of France the government thanks all men who have rejoined their posts in their regiments, their squadrons and on their ships, all those who have contributed to assure the security of the nation.

"I want also to thank all those, who in the national defence factories, or wherever they might be, are accomplishing that vigorous effort from which happy results are noted every day."

Tribute to French People

"I pay tribute to the entire people, who, in France and its overseas territory, have given an admirable example of coolness and resolution. At the same time, following the same methods, we are continuing the diplomatic action necessary for the maintenance of peace by the consolidation of the solidarity which should unite before the common peril all countries resolved to preserve their liberty.

"We remain in permanent contact with the governments of Great Britain, the United States, the Soviet Union, Poland and the Balkan entente.

"Our aim—and I am convinced we will attain this aim—is to organise this necessary co-operation between all nations who have no intention of threatening the vital interests of any peoples whatsoever, who do not refuse to examine loyally with anyone the present problems and who are determined to oppose any attempt at domination.

"Need I add that our close and profound entente with Great Britain never was stronger than today? Therefore I address to the French nation the following declaration which was drafted in common agreement by the government of the Republic and the government of Great Britain:

Status Quo in Mediterranean

"The French government attaches the greatest importance to preventing all modification by force or threat of force of the status quo in the Mediterranean and in the Balkan peninsula.

"Taking into consideration the special anxieties resulting from the events of recent weeks, the French government consequently has given to Rumania and Greece special assurances that in a case where action should be taken which would clearly threaten the independence of Rumania or Greece and which the Rumanian government or the Greek government felt it was in its vital interest to resist with its national forces, the French government would feel itself bound immediately to lend all the assistance in its power.

"The British government has adopted the same attitude.

"The French government, in addition, was happy at the conclusion of reciprocal engagements by Great Britain and Poland, who have decided to give each other mutual support in order to defend their independence if they are directly or indirectly threatened.

French-Polish Alliance

"In addition, the French-Polish alliance is confirmed by the French government and the Polish government in the same spirit. France and Poland are guaranteeing each other immediately and directly against all direct or indirect threats affecting their vital interests.

"We will communicate this declaration to all interested governments and in particular to Turkey.

"The protection of the territory of France and its Empire against any attack, direct or indirect, on its integrity or its rights; the search with the single thought of peace. for all ententes suitable to assure the united protection of peoples against enterprises threatening their independence. Such is the policy which the French government has followed in consciousness of its responsibilities and in the inflexible determination to retreat from no duties imposed upon it by the safeguarding of the destinies of the Fatherland."

Constable Beatty Of R.C.M.P. Tendered Farewell Banquet

Law enforcing agents of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Provincial Police gathered at the New Queens Hotel yesterday to tender Constable Wm. Beatty, of the R.C.M.P., a farewell banquet upon his departure to Cornwall, where he will be in charge of the R.C.M.P. detachment at that point.

Constable Beatty only received information of his appointment to the Cornwall post early yesterday, but prior to his hasty departure his fellow-officers wished him fond farewell and success. Constable Beatty is a native of Earl Grey, Saskatchewan, and joined the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Calgary in 1932. Prior to coming to Belleville two years ago, Constable Beatty was stationed at Winnipeg, Ottawa, Royal Military College and later Belleville.

Constable Beatty is one of the most expert marksmen in the ranks of the R.C.M.P. and only recently was chosen to be a member of a Canadian shooting team which competed in a match with United States Border Patrol officers at Alexandria Bay, N.Y.

Corpl. Green, in charge of the Belleville detachment of the R.C.M.P. and Inspector Frank Gardner of the O.P.P. spoke briefly at the farewell banquet and extended the good wishes of those present to Constable Beatty before his departure to Cornwall.

FAILED TO PRODUCE DRIVER'S LICENCE

Failure to produce their 1939 Ontario driver's licence proved rather costly to five motor car operators, who were summoned in special traffic court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the Court House today. Individual fines of $2.00 plus additional costs of $2.50 were assessed in each case and the offenders were warned to immediately procure their operator's permit before driving their automobiles.

The charges were preferred by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine, who later stated instructions had been issued by the Highway Traffic Department to rigidly enforce this section of the law, pertaining to the possession of operator's permits.

A non-support case, the charge being preferred by County Constable B. Bennett against a Point Anne man, concluded the day's proceedings.

ICE IN NORTHERN LAKES STILL FIRM

Northern county lakes are still covered with a firm coating of ice, it was revealed in a letter received this week from a Salmon Lake district resident who reports that up until the end of last week cars were still using the ice of the lake as a short cut.

According to reports of local truckers this morning roads through the northern townships are gradually being cleared of the ice and snow, though many soft spots are encountered.

HORSES OFFERED AT MODERATE PRICES

According to reports issued by the eastern offices of the Agricultural Department, drovers are offering horses weighing from 1200 to 1400 pounds at prices ranging from $150 to $250 per team. These horses have been bred in the central and eastern Ontario district and the demand is not reported keen at even these moderate prices.

Sheep owners of the central section are reporting a good crop of lambs and they are apparently doing well, the report states.

SINGLE CROCUS MAKES BRAVE SHOW ON LAWN

A lone crocus, yellow petals blooming bravely against the drab color of the earth, was noted this morning on the lawn of Dr. G. H. Stoble. A red-breasted robin chirping merrily in the warm morning sunshine provided an additional touch of color, as did the first shoots of grass that dotted the lawn.

The blooming flower is ten days behind its 1938 appearance, the first blooms being noted on April 3 of last year.

DALADIER

to Russia, with Miss Ellen Wilkinson shouting: "Deal with Russia! Cut out the bla!"

The Prime Minister hastened to declare his omission of a reference to Russia did not mean the Soviets were not being kept informed Britain's difficulty was that the government must deal not only "with what we wish, but what others will do."

Once again the Prime Minister declared there were no prejudices or ideological notions in attempting to line up the peace-loving forces against European aggression

Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, simultaneously told the House of Lords about an exchange with Guido Crolla, Italian Charge D'Affaires, concerning Corfu.

Italian Attitude

In the course of a statement paralleling Mr Chamberlain's the Foreign Secretary said Crolla on April 8 "assured me the Italian government were certainly not going to threaten Greek independence and that any British occupation of Corfu would create most dangerous reactions "

Lord Halifax said he told Crolla the British government had no intention of occupying Corfu but "would certainly take a very grave view if anybody else occupied it."

Corfu is a Greek island facing the heel of the Italian boot at the entrance to the Adriatic. It is of great strategic importance.

Lord Halifax repeated to the peers the pledge of Rumania and Greece which the Prime Minister announced in the Lower House. He said the government was fully aware of the gravity of the decisions it had made. It believed a perfectly clear definition of its attitude in certain events, from which in no case could it properly stand aside, would render those events less likely.

Divergence of Testimony

After being loudly cheered, Mr. Chamberlain began: "I was satisfied that it was in the interests of the country that the House should meet this afternoon in view of events in the Mediterranean."

In a resume of recent European events, the Prime Minister said they had created "widespread uneasiness and disquiet especially in the eastern Mediterranean."

Discussing Italy's occupation of Albania last week he said "when we come to examine the background of the events, we are confronted with a divergence of testimony."

Mr. Chamberlain, recalling Italian contentions, said Rome claimed "King Zog became hostile and they (Italy) must protect their interests."

The Duke of Kent was among those listening to the Prime Minister. He sat in the distinguished visitors' gallery next to the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Cartier De Marchienne. The Russian Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, was two seats away.

Public Opinion Shocked

Mr. Chamberlain said: "Public opinion throughout the world once again has been profoundly shocked by this fresh exhibition of the use of force."

He added: "The Albanian Minister reported to Lord Halifax (Foreign Secretary) soon after the Italian invasion that the Albanians had rejected an ultimatum delivered to them by Italy. The Albanian Minister appealed to the British government to do their utmost in the aid of a small nation which was desperately trying to defend its own territory.

"Rightly or wrongly the stories of the oppression of Italians are regarded with doubt and suspicion."

Amid cheers, he went on: "Whatever their faith, whether Christian or Moslem, it must be apparent that a powerful nation has imposed its will on a small, relatively defenceless country and has done so by an imposing show of armed force."

The Prime Minister continued "We must ask ourselves whether the proceedings in Albania were in conformity with the Anglo-Italian agreement of last April."

He then quoted a passage of the agreement relating to "peace and security?" in the Mediterranean.

Italy's action, Mr. Chamberlain said, "must inevitably be the cause of further uneasiness and increased international tension.

"Unmistakeable signs of uneasiness have been manifested not only in the particular area but in other countries adjacent to the Mediterranean.

"The Adriatic is certainly a part of the Mediterranean area and the Italian government could not therefore claim that the British government was not concerned."

He disclosed the British Ambassador to Italy, the Earl of Perth, had reminded the Italian government that "the situation might raise in acute form the whole question of the status quo in the Mediterranean."

Mr. Chamberlain said: "The British government will lend to Greece or Rumania, if their independence is threatened, all the support in their power."

He refused to denounce the Anglo-Italian agreement, asserting it "has been justified and should not at this moment be ended."

"I therefore take this opportunity of saying that the government attach the greatest importance to the avoidance of disturbance by force, or fears of force, of the status quo in the Mediterranean and the Balkan peninsula."

Christian World Shocked

He said "no one act in this business could have more effectively shocked religious sentiment everywhere than the fact that it should have been initiated on the day which to most Christians was the most sacred of the year (Good Friday)."

Mr. Chamberlain said in the House: "The government have taken due note of the assurances given for the withdrawal of Italian troops in Spain after the victory march in Madrid."

Regarding Turkey the Prime Minister said:

"We are communicating this declaration (the assurances to Greece and Rumania) to the governments directly concerned and to others, especially to Turkey whose close relations with the Greek government are well known."

The Prime Minister concluded his speech at 3:29 p.m. (10:29 a.m. EST).

He said Italy had told London that the future of Albania "depended on the wishes of the Albanian people "

Referring to what was described as an Albanian offer of their crown to the King of Italy, the Prime Minister said "we await the answer of the Italian government to this office "

The House laughed.

Shaken of Confidence

Mr. Chamberlain said: "Once confidence has been abruptly shaken it is not so easily reestablished." He declared Italy had given assurances that when her troops were withdrawn from Spain "Italian planes and pilots would leave also."

Expressing a desire for good relations with Italy, the Prime Minister said "it is to the Italian government that I look for practical evidence that they share my desire."

He was interrupted by opposition shouts of "what about Russia?" and "Deal with Russia."

Government supporters then shouted "take no notice."

Mr. Chamberlain, however, answered the opposition with this statement:

"We are keeping in the closest touch with the representatives of Soviet Russia.

"Members must not assume that if I did not mention Russia that meant we were not keeping in closest touch with representatives of that country. We have had many difficult tasks in considering not only what we wished but what other people also were willing to do."

Spanish Situation

Regarding Italia ntroops in Spain Mr. Chamberlain said Britain regarded their evacuation "as a vital element in the Anglo-Italian agreement and we look forward to its early fulfilment."

He said he deplored "the intolerable state of tension and alarm in which the world is being kept—poisoning every phase of human activity in every country."

Mr. Chamberlain expressed his own "deep disappointment at the action by the Italian government which has cast a shadow over the genuineness of their intentions to carry out their undertakings."

He added, however, that "without any prejudice or any preconceived ideological notions we are endeavoring to the utmost of our power to marshal the forces which are still in favor of peace and willing to resist aggression and I hope our efforts may be successful."

"Once again," he went on, "this house is facing grave and serious issues. Once again there has been brought home to all of us the intolerable nature of a state of things which keeps the whole world in a perpetually recurring series of alarms, damaging commerce and industry, depressing social life and culture."

Mr. Chamberlain mentioned his "patience in the face of disappointments."

"The events which we have condemned today could not fail to stir the minds and consciences of all people. Slowly but surely we are working towards common recognition of common danger.

"Today we must stiffen our resolution—resolution not only to make ourselves strong to defend ourselves but resolution also to play our part in siding with those who, faced by aggression or threatened with a loss of their freedom, decide to resist."

"In that resolution and in the steps which we have taken and shall yet take to put that into effect, I am confident we shall have the approval of this House, this country, and the whole empire," Mr. Chamberlain concluded amid cheers.

Immediately after Mr. Chamberlain sat down, Clement Attlee, leader of the Opposition, said:

"I see no clear sign that the government have really adopted a new policy. I welcome the fact that we have undertaken responsibilities toward Poland, Greece and Rumania, but I am sorry that the prime minister has not been able to give a message from the Soviet Union."

In the Upper House Lord Halifax said recent acts of aggression by the axis powers were condemned not only "by the overwhelming mass of opinion in this country ,but also by most of the states of Europe and by the United States of America."

Heron and Metz to Replace Jackson and Langelle Tonight As Leafs Hope to Even Series

Smythe Calls Drillon and Apps Into Consultation

BRUINS ARE 'HOT'

Cowley, Conacher and Shore Are Playing Best Game for Ross'

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Having patched up a couple of spots on his secondary forward lines, Manager Conny Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs worked today on his first line in hopes he could restore its high-scoring efficiency for tonight's Stanley Cup meeting with the boiling Bruins of Boston.

Smythe selected Red Heron from the Syracuse farm club yesterday to replace Harvey Jackson, who suffered a dislocated shouder when the Leafs lost the third game of the finals to the Bruins Tuesday. He named Don Metz, a Toronto amateur until two days ago, to work instead of Pete Langelle, who took quite a beating in the first three games of hockey's world title round.

Trio Handcuffed

Those replacements seemed to leave the Leafs in pretty fair shape up front according to actual man-power. But there still was to be taken into consideration the fact that the No. 1 line of Syl Apps, Gordon Drillon and Bob Davidson hasn't been carrying the mail in this round. Apps got a goal and Drillon two assists when the Leafs won the second contest, but those points came on a power play—not on their regular three-man formations. Otherwise, the trio has been handcuffed by the Bruins.

So Smythe called Apps and Drillon aside when they appeared together in the dressing room and told them something he had noticed Tuesday night.

"Your plays weren't getting away properly," the little Colonel said. "Every time one started, the puck seemed to be in possession of the wrong man. Davidson would have it when he should have been a trailer, or Drillon would be carrying it when Apps should have been nursing it at the blue-line to make a pass through the defence to Drillon."

May Correct Errors

They discussed ways and means of correcting the errors. If they found the formula, they may attain something like their mid-season form against the National League champions tonight.

And that seems to be about the only thing that can save the Leafs at this stage—a quick return to form by Apps, Drillon and Davidson. They are one game down and the scene shifts to Boston for the fifth contest after tonight. Doc Romnes and Gus Marker have made the best of what plays the Leafs have shown so far, but they can't carry any more of the load. With Jackson out, the first line will have to give something more or the Leafs will be near elimination after tonight's battle.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

Owensboro, Ky.: Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago White Sox today concluded a nine-game exhibition series begun last month on the Pacific Coast. Manager Pie Traynor of the Pirates assigned Bob Klinger to pitch. Maurice Van Robays, rookie outfielder, left the Pirates last night for Montreal by way of St. Louis, where he was to have an operation for an abscess.

Portsmouth, O.: Paul Derringer and Junior Thompson drew the nod from Manager Bill McKechnie today as Cincinnati Reds opened a four-game series against Detroit Tigers.

Topeka, Kas.: Manager Fred Heney, bringing his St. Louis Browns here today for their last exhibition before their home town series with the Cardinals, is well satisfied with the recent showing of his ace hurler, Buck Newsom. He has given only three hits over nine innings divided into two games against Chicago Cubs.

Norfolk. Va.: Cletus (Poof) Poffenberger is away to a good start with Brooklyn Dodgers. Immediately after joining the team at Greenville, S.C., he sat down with some of his mates in a restaurant and ordered a big dinner—then left before it was served. He sped away to have a tooth pulled.

Birmingham, Ala.: LeGrant Scott the outfielder obtained from Birmingham, is manager Doc Prothro's choice of the best rookie with the Phillies and will have the clean up spot in the batting order when the season opens.

FIVE TEAM LOOP POSSIBLE FOR BAY OF QUINTE

Napanee, Belleville, Picton and Kingston Are Represented

2 TEAMS IN KINGSTON

Expected Kingston Clubs Will be in a Higher Rating

Possibilities of a five-team loop that will comprise the Bay of Quinte Baseball League was arrived at last night when the moguls of the Quinte district met in Napanee.

Picton, Belleville, Napanee and Kingston were represented with statements that the R.C.A.F. might be a possible entry.

In view of the fact that a number of senior players in Kingston were available it was felt by the remainder of the clubs, that the Kingston team should be relegated to a higher rating. In that respect, the Limestone City gang will play a notch higher than the intermediate rating guaranteed the other clubs.

Discussion was lively with the Picton representatives putting up a lively argument against the admittance of the Kingston Club into the group.

President Ken Colling outlined the possibilities of the loop and urged that all squads "play the game," and perhaps minor effort might bring back the prestige that has been absent during the past decade.

Arguments pro and con flew back and forth. Kingston representatives demanded that they play in the same category as the remainder of the clubs. The suggestion that the Limestone City be relegated to one team was met with approval with the exception naturally of the Kingston representatives.

Officers elected at last night's meeting included: President, Kenneth J. Colling; Vice-President, Lorne MacDougall, Belleville; Honorary Presidents, George Tustin, M.P., Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon, Picton; A. H. Rendall, Kingston, and Dr. G. A. Morton, Belleville.

Attacks Standard Of Some Trustees

Toronto. April 13—(CP)— A school system that allows districts to elect school trustees below the mental standard of the school teachers they direct should be changed, Rev. J. C. Cochrane, Superintendent of Missions for Northern Ontario of the United Church of Canada, said in an address before the Supervisors' section of the Ontario Educational Association.

"In the name of democracy, we penalize the future of our children by placing uneducated men on trustee boards," Dr. Cochrane declared. "Local authority in education ought to be reduced. I know places where there is no school because the trustees can't agree on selection of a site."

BAER CONVINCED HE IS BETTER THAN JOE LOUIS

Believes He Will Lick Nova and Then Brown Bomber

IN GOOD SHAPE

Tells World Schmeling Was Harder Hitter Than Louis

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, April 13 (AP)—By the very power and sped of his own arguments, Max Baer appears to have convinced himself he is a better fighter than Joe Louis and destined to knock the crown off the negro's head no later than next September.

Most of Max's conversation, of course, is not to be taken seriously, but he seems to be levelling about this. He kept coming back to it during two hours of florid talk here yesterday en route to Ferndale to train for his fight with Lou Nova on June .

"Just put it down," said the former champion, "that I will beat Nova and then Louis, in that order, and that I will be the first man ever to win back the heavyweight title. I'm not fooling about this.

"Sure, Louis stopped me the last time, but what of it? I took that fight for the money and didn't have an idea in the world I would win. But I took everything he handed out, didn't I, and I wasn't on my back when they stopped it.

Not Great Hitter

"He's not such a great hitter. Schmeling hurt me more with one punch on the nose than all the blows Louis hit me. Who has Louis knocked out? I mean knocked out so that they went down kicking, like Dempsey used to hit them, and they had to be carried out of the joint. Nobody. Louis can't hit that way."

But, someone interjected, Louis sure seemed to get results.

"Results," yelled Maxie. "Who's talking about results? Anybody can get results against hams like he's been fighting. Sure, I know you're all laughing to yourselves about what he did to me. Go ahead and laugh, but wait until you see us in that ring the next time.

"I've been fighting 11 years. I've been champion, but I know I'm a better man now at 30 than I ever was. I only hope Louis will think I'm afraid of him this time. There's just a chance that he will. That'll be wonderful."

BATTING PUNCH, GOOD HURLING ADDED TO CHIEFS

Syracuse Expects to Give Newark Bears a Real Battle

GEE HEADS STAFF

Kleinhans, Mooty and Grabowski Are Other Key Hurlers

(By Lawrence . Skiddy, Sports Editor, The Syracuse Herald)

Syracuse, N.Y., April 13 (AP)—Syracuse Chiefs have added batting punch to good pitching and expect to put forth a real challenge to Newark Bears in the International Baseball League's race. They finished second last year but were 20 games back of the Newark Bears.

Johnny Gee, the six-foot nine-inch Syracuse native left-hander, heads the pitching staff with Ted Kleinhans, capable southpaw, Jake Mooty and Reg Grabowski, able right-hander, as his main aides.

Ray Benge, former major leaguer who won three and lost one late last season, is back on the job, coaching pitchers and ready for relief work. Dick Midiff, husky young right-hander bought from Boston Red Sox, has signed.

Five catchers, all new to the club this year are in camp. Indications are that Tommy Heath, with St. Louis Browns last year, and John Bottarini, brough east from the Pacific Coast league while Heath hit .275 when he was with Toronto.

At first base the Chiefs have Baxter Jordan, who hit .299 for Philadelphia last year and who is dropping down after six years in the National League. He replaces Joe Mack, who has been sent to Indianapolis.

John Kroner, hard hitting star of Syracuse's 1935 winners of the Governor's Cup in the International League, comes back to second base after three years in the American League.

Herb Meyers, a holdover from last year, is stationed at third base. Len Kahny appears to have beaten Skeetter McDaniel, last year's shortstop, out of that position.

VICTORIA WINS FIRST

Victoria, April 13 (CP)—Victoria Dominoes defeated Winnipeg St. Andrew's 42-26 in the first game of the best-of-three series for the Western Canadian Men's Senior Basketball championship and the right to enter the Dominion final here last night.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Local baseball fans may yet see the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" in a baseball uniform. Yesterday we were in conversation with Squd.-Ldr. Van Vleit, who assured us the "Flyers" were keenly interested in the diamond game. Coupled with the four-teamed set-up of the Bay of Quinte League of last year the "Airmen" will doubtlessly round out a successful and financial loop. From outside information received we have been informed there are some really high class ball tossers in and around our 'air defence' on the bay.

Last night the Bay of Quinte baseball convened but little success was arrived at until it was revealed the R.C.A.F. might try their lot at baseball, after three years and knocking at baseball's door. The admission of a "Flyer" team into the Quinte loop would undoubtedly elevate the stocks of the summer pastime throughout the sports district. After taking in last night's conclave we are convinced that the presence of the "Airmen" is the sole hope towards the advancement of baseball in Napanee, Picton or Belleville. Unfortunately Skipper Van Vleit is veiled under a shroud of baseball uncertainty, but as we have been reliably informed, there are some really high class pellet-pounders up around Canada's first line of air defence. Kingston 'Locos' who should have won the loop last year on the field and on paper, but who unfortunately didn't, were again represented, as were Picton, Napanee (Gibbards) and Belleville, the latter entry remaining solely to the discretion, opinion and enthusiasm yet to be displayed by the players.

Last night's conclave was no pink tea party—Picton, Napanee and Belleville proverbially ganged up on the Kingston "Locos" and demanded the Limestone City nine play a higher classification of ball than the smaller centres, after taking into consideration the potentialalities of a Kingston nine with the advantages of players, who last year were stars in the Central Ontario League. Mentor Olsen, of the "Locos" naturally tried a prolonged bluff, but it remained to the Napanee and Picton clubs to sternly assert their contentions and assure the league they would not tolerate a "packed team" from Kingston. Eventually Belleville line-up with the minorities (which is in accord with today's world's business) and the subsidized "Locos" of Kingston themselves on the outside, wondering what it was all about. At no time did the smaller centres try to discourage Kingston from the loop, but towns the size of Picton and Napanee did not feel they should be called upon to compete evenly on the diamond with a city the population of Kingston and on a common level.

After many hours of discussion Roly Rorke, coach of the Picton nine, brought matters to a head when he procured a majority vote which carried and assured at least a four team intermediate loop, including Picton, Napanee, Belleville and possibly the Air Force, but stipulated that the Kingston "Locos" must assume a grade higher classification than the afore-mentioned quartette of clubs. The Kingston club has the matter under consideration, but their decision practically does not affect the league insofar as operation is concerned, as a three or four team league has been assured the returned president of the loop, who, unfortunately, happens to be your humble correspondent. (And we tried hard to evade the job, but no dice.)

Those who might have entertained fond hopes of the Edmonton Roamers repeating the performances of the St. Boniface Seals of last year had their cherished hopes dashed on the hard rocks of despair when the Oshawa Generals spilled the Roamers 12 to 4 to make it two straight in the Memorial Cup finals. The Motor City sextette should romp into the Dominion junior hockey top laurels without an effort from now in, needing only one game to cinch those honors.

Did You Know for once Tommy Farr is favourite to win a boxing bout?....In his bout with Red Barman, Farr is quoted as 5-4 favorite, believe it or not.... Boston Bruins should win again tonight, but....There must be warmer weather close at hand, the American Association commences its schedule tomorrow... Picton baseball interests are keenly interested in midget and bantam baseball for the season ....And in that lies the success of the game for the future.

EDMONTON TRIED, FOUND WANTING AS OSHAWA WINS

Generals Defeat Roamers in Second Game of Finals 12-4

TAYLOR THE HERO

Centre-Ice Star Scores Four Goals and Assists in Five Others

(By Sydney Gruson, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Edmonton Roamers have been tried and found wanting. And today there was no one, not even the Roamers, who held more than the slightest of hopes the 1939 Memorial Cup final would be forced past the minimum three games.

Writing new chapters into the glorious history of the junior hockey classic, Oshawa Generals walloped the Western champions so soundly last night in the second game of the best-of-five series that Edmonton's strongest supporters gave up. There wasn't much else they could do after Generals added a 12-4 victory to Monday night's 9-4 win.

There'll be another chance for Edmonton Saturday night. All the odds are that Generals, built around the brilliant 19-year-old Billy Taylor, will be crowned champions, bringing the cup east from the trophy shelf of St. Boniface Seals, who defeated Oshawa in last season's final. Seldom, if ever, has Memorial cup scoring been so one-sided.

Good For Period

Obviously past the peak of form that brought them the Western championship easily, Roamers again were a match for Oshawa in only one period. The teams were tied 2-2 after 20 minutes' play. Oshawa scored three more in the second without an answer and in the deluge of the final stanza, they got seven.

Actually the result, though not its decisiveness, could be seen in the first few minutes of play. Knowing they had to stop Taylor to win, Roamers couldn't keep him in check and the blond pivot scored Generals first goal and set up the play for Orv Smith's counter after the score was tied. When Taylor's checks had failed, so had the Roamer cause.

Amazed at Ability

Before he was through, Billy the Kid shot four goals and made perfect plays for five others. It was such an outstanding display, that he had such hockey veterans as Conny Smythe and Lester Patrick National League managers, shaking their heads in amazement at his ability and hockey brains.

Paul Steffes and Bob Carse divided Edmonton's first-period goals, both coming to tie the score after Generals had forged in front. Roamers couldn't keep coming back, however, and besides Taylor, Nick Knott and Jimmy Drummond each got the first of their two goals in the second period.

Jud McAtee also scored twice for Generals with Gerry Kinsella getting the other. The third and fourth Roamer counters came from Bruce MacKay and Dave Farmer. Knott suffered the only serious injury, a severe charley horse in the left thigh, but it was unlikely to keep him out of the third game.

Mr. Van Gamp's Goat

By MYRA A. WINGATE

"Mr. Van Gamp is pardonable for buying the Babbits' goat," stated Victoria, Mr. Van Gamp's unsophisticated sister.

Expected to comment, I replied: "Your brother has the reputation of being an expert tradesman, undoubtedly he bought the goat to trade."

"Van does trade farm stock, but he didn't buy the goat to trade," persisted Victoria.

As I saw no logical reason why a shrewd tradesman should buy a goat for the mere sake of owning a goat, I made no answer. Victoria continued:

"It's like this, Miss Leonard: Van was brought up from childhood deprived of playthings. Our neighbors, the Hubbards, were well-to-do; their boys had everything—bicycles, guns, pigeons and goats. Our boys only had garden tools and a wheelbarrow. Van used to run away and stay in the pasture with the Hubbard goats. It's only a childish whim of Van's now to have a goat of his own.".

"The Babbit girls told me a woeful story about Rags. Last Monday afternoon he chewed off his tether rope and then went to the clothesline and chewed up the week's wash".

"I'll have Van keep Rags in the barnyard," vowed Victoria. "I'll have him fix the fence.

Van did; he worked hours adding an extra top-rail. With evil eyes the goat stood watching, ready to butt viciously whenever Van ventured inside.

Although he built a corral, Mr. Van Gamp had no intention of keeping Rags in it. A summer boarder at Van Gamps' I assumed a neutral attitude in their family differences. Therefore, when Van let the goat out back of the barn, bravely harnessing him into a goat-cart to go driving around Rockhill, I knew all about the affair, while Victoria, who puritanically would not tolerate any such tomfoolery, did not know.

The first house across Meadowbrook bridge is Van Gamps'. Behind this house rises a round-topped hill, abounding in boulders, the rocky pasture sloping to Meadowbrook pond. Hitherward, to the pond, this Saturday morning, in my bathing suit, went I; and hitherward riding in his iron goat-cart to Rockhill, went Mr. Van Gamp. I barely had time to gather my important manuscript papers and scramble out of the way to avoid being run over. With momentum the goat speeded down and out into the Bottomless Pit, where the iron cart forthwith sank.

Solicitously I looked down into the still, deep water, but I saw nobody, nothing. In my bathing suit I went up into the pasture. When I shouted, only mournful rock echoes came mockingly back to me. At last I scudded home.

Victoria was in the kitchen, making pies.

"Where is Mr. Van Gamp?" inquired I.

"I s'pose he's in the meadow lot planting potatoes."

"Well, he's had a runaway."

"That sorrel mare again," fumed Victoria. "I've advised Van to trade off that nervous mare. She ran away from me one day, leaving me at the postoffice to walk home. Didn't you see Van?"

"No, but his team dashed down into the pond."

Victoria continued to make pies.

"I wonder what could have happened to Mr. Van Gamp?" persisted I.

"Well, I can't leave my pies very well," declared Victoria dutifully, "but I'll telephone for men to help"

Victoria went to the telephone while I returned to the dale of the disaster.

I found the goat chewing up my shoes and silk stockings which I had mindlessly left behind me.

Presently came Victoria's help—policemen, coast guardsmen, men of the fire department, followed by the endless thrung of week-end joy riders.

Needless to say, they found Mr. Van Gamp; they found him leaning bewildered against a boulder with a gash in his head. He supposed he had been asleep 20 years.

On Monday following, Van traded the goat with Billy Brown's father for a rooster.

"I didn't want pay; I gave Billy the goat," Van explained to me confidentially. "But Brown offered a rooster I'd been wanting that's how we happened to swap."

At Muskolunkus

By Virginia S. Southworth

With startled eyes, Kathleen Dale listened to the crackling of underbrush that warned her of the approach of some unknown danger, doubtless a bear. This was her first venture into the Maine woods, and, child of apartment houses and paved streets, she feared all the forest sounds. Her fascinated gaze was upon the exact spot where the bushes parted and a man stepped out on the opposite bank of the stream. The startled look deepened to horror.

"Allen," she said.

"Hello, Kathleen," he returned moderately. He was uncomfortably conscious of a week's growth of whiskers, and of the fact that he had stepped into a bog-hole and was muddy to the knees. The much more distressing fact that he was a jail-bird and the woman—beautiful even in camping clothes—seemed remote.

He crossed the stream, balancing lightly on the footlog. She was frightened he could see. He had been in a white-hot rage when they parted. She would not understand that the years had changed him.

"You here," she said. "Escaped and hiding. Shall I never be rid of the disgrace?"

She couldn't know about the pardon nor the inheritance that had made it possible for him to make restitution. Traveling abroad, anxious only to forget him, she would not be likely to hear. Returning from a week's fishing, he must look the part of a fugitive.

He looked at her gravely — this woman for whom he had cared enough to betray a trust that he might give her all she desired.

"I hoped you might be sorry" he said haltingly. "The years have taught me things—sorrow for you, shame for myself—"

"Weakness never appealed to me," she said coldly.

"Emerson Blake will be here presently. He went back after some forgotten tackle."

He lifted his weather-stained hat and the bushes closed behind him. A faint rustling told of his retreat.

She could hear Blake's cheery whistle, and her heart stirred at the sound. The friendliness between them had strengthened into friendship, and the friendship had deepened until it seemed that love hovered breathlessly near.

"Was it a long time?" asked Blake anxiously. "I was delayed. You know that fellow La Bree, who frightened us in to the camp? Seems he has catered to the sportsmen a little too earnestly and the officers are trailing him. He's taken to the woods. The sleuths stopped me and questioned me. What is it, Kathleen?" suddenly noticing her impulsive gesture. "Seen La Bree?"

"There is an escaped convict in hiding near us," she said swiftly. "I saw and spoke with him. I—it isn't safe. If the officers knew—"

"Kathleen! Did he frighten you? How could you know?"

"I—have seen him. His name is Calder".

His look was so long and searching that she flinched inwardly. At length he asked: "Was he the man, Kathleen?"

She nodded wordlessly. Blake knew all the story, as it appeared to her.

"And you would have given him up?" he questioned curiously.

"A criminal," she reminded him, "even though once—" her voice trailed away, her customary decisiveness failing her.

Going down the brook, Blake said carefully, as if after long thinking, "I know Calder. He is not an escaped convict. He was pardoned out and later restored the money he misappropriated. He has lived here in the woods ever since. I was lost in the big storm last winter, when I was up here hunting with Porter. I verily believe I should have died but for Calder. He sheltered me for three days. I was grateful and he, I suppose, was lonely. We talked more or less, and got rather deeper into one another's confidence than we often do. I could see how severely he blamed himself and gathered something of his anxiety for his—wife. Blundering, perhaps, but none the less sincere. I did not dream of you in connection with him. Neither did he know I knew you."

As plainly as if it had been spoken in words, Kathleen understood. The deeps closed relentlessly, the friendship withered and died. When they entered the doors of Porter's great hunting lodge, Muskolunkus, there was between them only a pleasant, surface friendliness. All the warmth and cheer of the great log-fire could not dispel the chill at Kathleen's heart.

WORLD'S FAIR GOUT

After all the attractive propaganda we have read about the New York World's Fair and the Golden Gate Exposition, the prediction of a doctor in the Mayo Clinic that they will cause a gout wave comes as a great disillusionment. We shudder to think how Grover Whalen and his counterpart on the West Coast will greet this sort of publicity.

Gout is an old-fashioned disease and, therefore, particularly unacceptable in connection with the "World of Tomorrow." The pessimistic physician has had the delicacy to coin a new word for it — "exposition feet"—but that is only sugar coating the grim facts. He sees thousands of tourists committing "dietary indiscretions" and then walking their food and drink down into their feet.

Yes, there is a gloomy side to the picture. It won't be all a brave new world.—Boston Transcript.

GLASS HOUSES

Today, as at the time of Munich, Moscow is jeering at the democracies for not fighting it out with Hitler.

The truth is the Communists live in an exceedingly fragile glass house. But for their deliberate desertion of those same democracies in 1917 the chances are that what is going on now would never have happened.

In 1917 Russia, with Britain, France and associated powers, was at war against Germany. Like the Fuehrer of today, the Kaiser then aspired to hegemony over all Central and Easter Europe and right on down to Baghdad. In fact, he and his allies then held most of that area and things looked dismal indeed for the democracies.

It was at this precise moment that the Bolsheviks of Lenin and Trotsky came into power. And Russia's first act was to run out on the war.—New York World Telegram.

HITLER'S "DEATH"

The new book, "The Strange Death of Adolf Hitler"—a remarkable story which alleges that Hitler was slain shortly before the Munich pact and that a double now rules Naziland—came to the publishers originally as a 5,000-word document. An American mystery-story writer elaborated on the thesis, and spread it into a volume.—Leonard Lyons in New York Post.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN ANTI-AGGRESSION ALLIANCE URGED

David Lloyd George Says Military Alliance Would Stop Dictators

ASSAILS PREMIER

Pwllheli, Wales, April 13.—(CP Cable) — David Lloyd George in a fighting speech to his Welsh constituents last night demanded an "anti-aggression alliance" with Russia and bitingly denounced Prime Minister Chamberlain's Foreign policy.

The wartime Prime Minister said that if a definite military understanding linking Great Britain, France and Russia were established immediately neither of the Axis dictators would launch a "fresh raid".

But, he said, Russia would not join a "skedaddling alliance such as we have been accustomed to recently."

Since Mr. Chamberlain returned from Munich in the Autumn declaring he had brought back "peace in our time" the predictions of many experienced men that submission to aggressors would only engender a period of worse crisis had turned out "calamitously true". Mr. Lloyd George said.

Within a few months of the Munich settlement, which gave Germany the Bohemian Mountains and their Czech fortifications, Czecho-Slovakia had been completely annihilated he continued. Albania had met the same fate Good Friday.

"Yet Thursday last the Prime Minister stated he knew nothing about such a project and he could not anticipate its truth," the Welsh statesman declared.

"We are now awaiting the next raid by one, or both, of the dictators."

Says Russia is the Key

Unless Russia were brought into a definite military alliance, Mr. Lloyd George said, it would be idle to invite Rumania, Greece and Yugoslavia to risk their lives on promises made by two powers which had "so disgracefully abandoned Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Albania to the rapine of the dictators."

"I am certain Russia will not come in unless definite assurance is given her that Britain and France will act and not merely talk," he said.

Mr. Lloyd George said that instead of holding discussions with Russia on military possibilities or plans, he understood the Prime Minister was going to rely on "another facile, fragile, futile promise given him by Signor Mussolini."

He charged the government was proceeding on three erroneous assumptions: 1—That Mussolini would not be faithful to the Axis; 2—That General Franco would betray the dictators who had made possible his victory in Spain. 3—That Britain would have full control and command of all the Mediterranean.

"We are being hemmed in in the Western and Eastern Mediterranean," he said. "If we give them more time to complete the process, that vital sea route will be practically closed to us and we shall be at the mercy of the aggressor states."

Calves Thrive On Egg Nog Diet

Hurd, N.D., April 13—(AP)—Because eggs bring only about 11 cents a dozen, A. W. Ellsworth, local dairy farmer is going the 'milk-fed' baby feed standard one better, and gives his calves egg nog.

With more than 200 chickens providing a surplus of eggs, Ellsworth uses four to five dozen a day, mixed with milk, as part of the ration for his 24 calves.

The animals appear to be doing well on the unusual diet, he said.

Belleville Humane Society Reports on Year's Activities

Facing the second year of its organization and one it is hoped of increased activity and development, the Belleville Humane Society held its annual meeting at the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday afternoon.

Confidence in the new year and the part the Society can play in eliminating the suffering of animals through co-operative effort was voiced by the President, Dr. R. W. Tennent, who occupied the chair, and later by Mr. W. H. Reeves, the newly-elected President.

The Secretary's report showed that seven general meetings, one public meeting and a number of executive meetings had been held during the year. At the public meeting Mr. J. MacNab Wilson, General Manager of the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, gave an address illustrated with lantern slides. Many of the pictures were of cases that had been dealt with by the Society and could not fail to impress everyone who saw them with the necessity of having humane societies throughout the country.

During the year it was decided to extend the work of the organization to cover the entire county of Hastings and an effort will be made in the immediate future to interest the towns and villages and secure the necessary co-operation to bring this about.

The financing of the society has been carried on through the collection of membership fees, a tag day, a bridge and tea, a rummage sale and donations of from one to twenty-five dollars. A house to house membership canvass was made and too much credit cannot be given to those who worked so untiringly in this effort as well as those who gave their services or contributed in many different ways to the success of the tag day, the bridge and the rummage sale. The generous response of the public on these various occasions is also greatly appreciated.

It is hoped that through the co-operation of humane societies throughout the Province that many abuses will be eliminated in the not distant future. One of these is the keeping of captive wild animals at gasoline stations, where they are housed in cramped quarters and under most unhappy conditions.

It will be noticed from the Inspector's report that he is constantly watching the conditions under which cattle are shipped to the abattoirs, which often cause much suffering and sometimes death on the part of the animals.

Four Prosecutions

It was reported that a condensed statement of the Inspector's activities for the year had been mailed each member.

There were just four prosecutions during the year, it being considered preferable by members to issue warnings, except in cases of extreme cruelty. In most cases these warnings had the desired effect, it was stated.

Good work has been done in the matter of disposing of stray and unwanted cats, but this is a phase of the Society's effort which it is urgently hoped will be further extended, and it is hoped also that it will not be long before it will be possible to maintain a shelter in Belleville or district where the work can be effectively carried on by the most humane method. This latter effort has long been an ambition of members, it was revealed.

To Promote Interest of School Children

One phase of the Humane Society's work that has not yet been undertaken by the Belleville organization is humane education in the schools. This is one of the most important branches of the work and an endeavor will be made to have it taken up in the near future.

Grateful appreciation on the part of the Society was expressed for the splendid co-operation received from the Press, the Y.M.C.A., the City Council and the City and Provincial Police.

Orangemen Urge Canadian Support If Britain at War

Resolution Passed at Grand Lodge of Ontario East

Lindsay, April 13.—That the resources of the Dominion should be made available to Great Britain and France in event of war was the consensus of the 400 delegates to the eightieth annual convention of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, which opened in the town hall here yesterday.

A resolution which received the unanimous endorsation of the assembled delegates will be forwarded to the Prime Minister of Canada and to the leaders of all political parties in the Dominion. The text of the resolution follows:

"The Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East places itself on record that in its opinion the whole resources of Canada should be placed behind the efforts of the British and French Governments if war should come, for the following reasons:

"1. For the preservation of personal freedom, religious institutions of all races and creeds and democracy.

"2. For the preservation of Canadian nationality within the British Empire.

"3. Because the people of Canada in whose veins flows the blood of Great Britain and France, cannot but take their place, following with filial affection the lands from which they draw their heritage of freedom."

That faith in Britain and loyalty to things British as advocated by the Orange Order is the thing which is needed today more than ever before, was the contention of Acting Mayor Lorne Jordan in his address of welcome to the delegates yesterday afternoon.

"In these days of totalitarian states and undeclared wars nothing that in any way lessens the bonds of democracy and freedom in this country can be tolerated," he said in urging faith in Britain, "knowing that nothing will be done without cautious deliberation."

E. N. Mitchell, retiring Grand Master, in his address referred to the visit of their Majesties to Canada this summer and expressed the hope that the ties between the Motherland and the Dominion would never be broken.

GERMANY AGAIN

lent, reckless and calculating peddler and robber."

The British press was characterized by such phrases as a "mud geyser of lies."

Chancellor Hitler's Hamburg edition of the Voelkischer Beobachter declared peaceful development in the world would be assured if "political and colonizing opportunities were open to any people according to its abilities and its national strength."

Calling attention to Germany's 80,000,000 population, the paper said Nationalist Socialist Germany needed territory in proportion to that of smaller countries.

"Forty-seven million Englishmen rule over territory 140 times as large as their home state," said the paper. "Forty million Frenchmen rule over a territory which is 21 times as big as France. Eight million Dutch possess 60-fold of their homeland. Eight million Belgians 80-fold of their state."

Fault With Democracies

Official Germany took the position that if the world should find itself at war the fault would lie with the democracies—for not heeding Hitler's "pleas" for peace and his warnings against "international war-mongers."

Commenting on the decision of United States insurance companies to cancel war risk insurance for German and Italian ships, a government spokesman said: "If a people is being urged into war the way the American people are nobody need be surprised if business gets jittery. This is a typical example of panic politics. ....Germany is doing nothing but pleading for peace. Our Fuehrer himself has decided to call the September party rally at Nuremberg 'the party convention of peace'."

Official circles claimed apprehension over the possibility that peoples of the western democracies already had been "incited" to the point where they were more radical in their "demands" for war than their governments. This was referred to as "overheating of the people's minds."

Britain Denounced

The Berlin newspaper Zwoelf Uhr Blatt capped morning newspapers in their denunciation of Britain. The upper half of its front page was taken up with the following streamers, some in black and some in red ink:

"Desperate cries for help by Arabs —last warning—morality or immorality in Europe, that now is the question—it stinks to heaven—Boers, Indians, Irish, Arabs: always the same massacres—perfidious incitation by London."

Lieut.-General von Metzsch, writing in "Deutsches Adelsblatt", organ of the German nobility, charged Britain was trying to create conditions which would ensure victory to British arms with the aid of foreign nations.

"Under England's leadership the democratic world is pursuing the purely negative aim of throttling German dynamics," he wrote.

The General said that Whitehall would like very much to kick out Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of France because, the General said, he favors an understanding with the axis powers. Despite these British efforts, he declared, the Italians and French are in secret contact with each other.

MEN, MUNITIONS

France's armed preparedness meanwhile was advanced by military decrees, details of which remained secret. Their general effect however, was known in that they called more reservists to join the land army estimated already at more than 1,200,000 men. Men and munitions were massed mostly in fortifications and rearguard camps.

Move as One Fleet

The combined French and British Mediterranean fleets—normally at least 160 units—were standing "somewhere in the Mediterranean" ready for orders. In event of conflict this formidable naval force, which normally includes about 74 destroyers and 50 submarines, would move as one fleet.

Under the French-British agreement reached before the present crisis both fleets would be under the single command of a ranking British Admiral.

Nearly all French observers, speculating on reports of activities along the Rome-Berlin axis, agreed that if war came Germany and Italy would attempt to flank France's Maginot Line facing the Rhine by an attack through the Alps and from Spain.

For weeks French and Swiss newspapers have carried reports of German men, arms and war material passing through the Brenner Pass and other routes into Italy.

Munitions Moved

On Easter Monday alone, according to the Swiss German-language newspaper, Freheit, of Basel, 15 long trains loaded with munitions went through Switzerland into Italy from Germany.

Observers on the Spanish border reported at least one artillery baterf, with its muzzles pointed toward France, had been placed in plain sight on the Spanish side of Leperthus Pass.

All dispatches from North Africa indicated France held a firm grip in Algeria, Morocco and Tunis.

To the report that 80,000 Spanish Moroccan troops had been returned to their homeland after the civil war in Spain, and that these troops constituted a threat to the French African Empire, French army men replied that French Morocco, with seven times the population of Spanish Morocco, has many more than 80,000 men under arms.

DEFENCE ALLIANCE

in Germany, announced a campaign beginning April 15 to enlist increased support for its activities.

Official quarters said they saw "obvious public manoeuvres" by Germany to bluff Poland into neutrality.

They said Foreign Minister Joseph Beck's train was held up several hours on the German side of the frontier last Saturday so Germans could parade their military might before the eyes of the Foreign Minister as he returned from his talks in London.

The foreign office denied Germany had made any new suggestions on her demands for the Free City of Danzig, highway rights across the Polish Corridor and cession of Bogumin, a railway junction city in the southern frontier region near Slovakia.

Nevertheless, reports that the demands had been repeated and the German attitude restated through the Polish Ambassador to Berlin, Joseph Lioski, persisted in diplomatic circles. Lipski returned from Berlin yesterday.

(German officials suggested that Warsaw make public the German demands, the essence of which already was common knowledge, and said the disclosure would show the world that they were "not exorbitant" and in no way endangered "the independence or territorial integrity of Poland.")

The German Ambassador, Hans von Moltke, was due to return from Berlin today and was expected to seek an interview with Colonel Beck to discuss German-Polish relations.

Beck had long conversations yesterday with both British and French Envoys. He also saw the Japanese Ambassador and was scheduled to see the United States Ambassador today.

Polish sources in Danzig denied German press reports that large numbers of Germanic residents of Poland were fleeing because of anti-German "excesses."

CONSTABLES' BILL

Attorney General Conant ran into more trouble when the legislature generally seemed to agree that a bill to give all constables and policemen in Ontario province-wide jurisdiction was too sweeping.

Premier Hepburn agreed with Conservative leader Drew and other opposition members that some undesirable consequences might follow if the measure were adopted as presented. The Premier and Mr. Conant agreed that the bill should be modified in committee stage. It was then given second reading.

Substitute Bill

The bill, for an act to amend the Constable's Act, substitutes for the measure withdrawn by the government before the Easter adjournment. The withdrawn bill would have empowered the Attorney-General in time of emergency or for the apprehension of a dangerous criminal to order the commissioner of Provincial Police to take charge of all police forces in the province.

The measure would also give the Attorney-General power to require the Commissioner of the Provincial Police or any other person to inquire into and report on the conduct of any constable, the administration of any police force, the system of policing any municipality, and the police needs of any municipality.

An inquiry into remarks allegedly made by Professor G. M. A. Grube, Professor of Classics at Trinity University, Toronto, in an address to a Co-operative Commonwealth Federation meeting here Friday will be made by Dr. J. L. Simpson, Minister of Education by order of Premier Hepburn.

Thomas Murphy (Con. Toronto-Beaches) read to the House a newspaper report attributing to Prof. Grube the statement that Canada's defence budget was "a waste of public funds in the interests of British imperialism."

The Premier, agreeing with Mr. Murphy's condemnation of the remarks, said that men associated with the universities were generally found when Communist activity was located.

Referred to Minister

"There should be discipline in some way or other," said the Premier. "I'll refer it to the Minister of Education." The Premier added that there must be no interference with free speech.

Col. Drew agreed there must be no restraint on free speech, but the Professor was seeking to spread "seditious poison."

First reading was given to a bill introduced by Hydro Commissioner W. L. Houck to make the provisions of the statute governing subsidies for Hydro lines in rural areas apply to the Northern Ontario system, operated by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission as trustee for the government.

The present statute, applying only to areas served by Hydro-owned systems, bonuses rural power line construction, the Province and the Hydro Commission each paying 50 per cent of the subsidy. The change to apply it to Northern Ontario was sought by Northern Ontario members.

Budget Debate Resumed

The budget speech debate was resumed by William Duckworth (Con. Toronto-Dovercourt). The debate had been adjourned by W. L. Miller (Lib. Algoma-Manitoulin) but he wasn't in the House today when the Premier called the order.

Mr. Duckworth urged the government to institute an unemployment insurance scheme. It was to be doubted if the federal government intended to do so.

Premier Hepburn said he had been informed within the last few days that "the solicitor for the Senate has given his opinion that there are no constitutional difficulties in the way of the federal government enacting unemployment insurance."

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Disappearing snows! Newly fallen snow is clean and beautiful; but now that it is disappearing, it is less beautiful, especially near towns and cities where it is covered more or less with soot and ashes. But it is just that covering that makes the snow melt faster. Clean snow reflects the sun's rays readily, but soot, ashes and leaves lying upon the snow absorb the sun's heat and thus speed up its removal. Snow disappears by evaporation and by melting. The latter is, of course, brought about by the warmer air and rains, although melting by warm rains is very slow. A covering of soot or ashes is very efficient, and in some countries the melting is facilitated by scattering oil and trash on the snow surface.

GERMAN FLEET TO CRUISE OFF SPAIN FOR ONE MONTH

Twenty - Five Units Leaving Home Port for Month of Training

BRITAIN ASSAILED

Many of the Newspapers Said Britain was "Bluffing"

Berlin, April 14—(AP)—An official communique disclosed today that more than 25 German fleet units, from battleships to submarines, were leaving home ports for one month of foreign training off Spain, Portugal, Spanish Morocco, and Tangier, the internationalized zone of Morocco.

The spring manoeuvres, the communique said, would revive an "old tradition of the German navy — interrupted by the Spanish civil war."

Officials said they did not expect the warships to enter the Mediterranean further than Tangier during the manoeuvres but it was not excluded that some units might cruise in the Mediterranean afterward. These sources insisted the games had no connection with present international affairs.

WOMEN'S LAND ARMY RECRUITED

Will Replace Male Farm Workers in Case of War

London, Apr. 14 (AP) — Britain decided today to recruit immediately a women's land "army" to replace male farm workers and provide additional labor to increase home food production in case of war. The ministry of agriculture, announcing the decision, said the new army would primarily be a mobile force ready to undertake all kinds of farm work in any part of the country.

In wartime volunteers in the women's land army would be assigned to travelling gangs for hay, corn and potato harvesting and other field work. Others would undertake dairying, care of livestock and operation of tractors and other farm machinery.

All women "land soldiers" would wear special uniforms when on "active service" but would be paid by individual farmers.

The service would be similar to the women's land army Britain organized during the Great War.

Second Development in Britain's Efforts to Extend Policy for Collective Security

RUSSIA IS PLEASED

Admires Guarantee of Britain Given to Rumania to Help Her Defend Her Independence

London, April 14—(AP)—British Efforts to bring Soviet Russia into a grand alliance against European aggression were reliably reported to have made good progress today after a long conference between Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, and Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador.

This was the second development in Britain's efforts to extend her policy for European collective security against aggression.

The first, reliable reports said, was a British proposal for military staff talks among Polish, Rumanian, Greek, French and British experts.

Maisky, seemingly pleased by the Anglo-French guarantee yesterday to help Rumania defend her independence, asked for the conference with Lord Halifax.

After he left, a British spokesman said:

"There is no reason to believe that Russia may not join the alliance within the next few days."

The staff talks were to be directed toward translating the Anglo-French guarantees of military aid to Poland, Rumania and Greece into terms of potential planes, soldiers and strategy.

Expedite Details

Envoys of the guaranteed states have been told of Britain's desire to expedite detailed military arrangements, one well-informed source said.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, whose declaration in the House of Commons yesterday extended military commitments to Greece and Rumania, left for the weekend at his country estate, Chequers. The Prime Minister's relaxation was broken a week ago by the Italian invasion of Albania.

TIMES SUPPORTS SECURITY BLOC

Advocates Adherence of Russia and Stresses Value of U.S. Support

New York, Apr. 14 (CP)—The New York Times (independent) today advocated in an editorial the adherence of Russia to the system of collective security being built in Europe by Great Britain and France and stressed the advantage to world well-being of United States support for Franco-British efforts at halting aggression.

"The new system of security which is being put together is a balance-of-power system, and at present it has the important disadvantage usually found in such a system," said the Times. "There is no such overwhelming preponderance of strength on the part of the law-abiding nations as contemplated in the League (of Nations) system.

Fortifying New System.

"The alliance of Russia with Britain and France would fortify the new system. So would action by the American Congress making it clear that supplies from this country will be withheld from aggressors in the event of war and be made available to their victims."

"With the Anglo-French guarantee to Greece and Rumania, we may at least hope that Europe will retire for the time being from the front pages," said the Herald Tribune (Republican).

"The axis gains have been tangible but not in themselves of great value. The Democratic gains have been intangible but of the first importance. Thanks to the Nazi-Fascist methods the Democratic peoples are now psychologically prepared to fight if need be. It is now the axis powers' move."

Britain May Denounce Treaty if Italy Refuses to Withdraw Troops

London, April 14—(CP-Havas)—The Financial Times (Independent) predicted today that if Italian troops are not withdrawn from Spain by May 10 Great Britain probably will denounce the Anglo-Italian agreement of last spring.

The diplomatic correspondent of the newspaper said he had reason to believe that the British government has taken toward the Italian government a much stronger attitude than was suggested in the speech in which Prime Minister Chamberlain yesterday announced an Anglo-French guarantee of Rumania and Greece.

Of the new pledges the London Times (Independent) said: "They are not engagements lightly undertaken, responsibilities accepted without a full and considered measurement of their meaning. They represent a considerable national decision exactly by the course of events, to which no other answer is possible. They have the force of their own evident gravity."

"For all who understand this country and the quiet language habitually used here," said the diplomatic correspondent of the Manchester Guardian (Liberal), "Mr. Chamberlain's declaration has a momentous character. But does that understanding exist in Berlin and Rome?"

The Yorkshire Post (Conservative) was pleased by the precise nature of the British and French statements. It regretted that Mr. Chamberlain did not take more account of the uneasiness felt in well-informed circles regarding Spain.

The News Chronicle (Liberal) said the "chief weakness of the government statement was the

NIGHT SITTINGS OF LEGISLATURE TO START MONDAY

Toronto, April 14—(CP)— Night sittings of the Ontario legislature will start Monday in an effort to have the session over by April 21, but it is doubtful if this goal can be reached.

Few major measures remain on the order paper in debate stages, but there are a host of less important bills.

The budget debate will not be ended till Tuesday, if then, and the estimates remain for consideration.

$75,000 DAMAGE IN TORONTO FIRE

Three Firemen Injured and Several Forced to Flee Building

Toronto, April 14.— (CP)— Damage of $75,000 was estimated today in a stubborn fire that swept the fifth floor of a West-Central Toronto factory building, sent three firemen to the hospital and forced evacuation of several families from adjacent houses.

For more than five hours firemen battled the flames that broke out early last night and were not subdued until early today. An explosion early in the fire rocked the building and led to the collapse of the roof. Strong squads of firefighters remained on duty throughout the night.

Platoon Chief Peter Herd and Firemen Murray King and Frank Ward were overcome by fumes and were carried from the blazing structure for emergency hospital treatment. Several other firemen suffered minor injuries, chiefly caused by flying glass, but did not require medical treatment.

Several Printing Firms

The building, the Nichols factory situated on Spadina Avenue at Cameron Street, is occupied by several printing and leather-goods firms. The speed with which the flames spread shortly after the fire was discovered at 9 p.m. was believed due to inflammable materials stored in the building catching fire.

Late workers in the building fled to safety down fire escapes, two persons being removed down an aerial ladder. An hour after the blaze was discovered, when it appeared to be under control, an explosion of undetermined origin sent flames leaping anew through the brick structure and were not finally subdued until after 2 a.m. today.

Among those forced to leave their homes until the danger was over was Mrs. Julia Kramar who carried a four-months-old child. Mrs. Kramar and the baby were poorly clad owng to the haste with which they fled but neither was believed to have suffered ill effects from the chilly weather in which the fire was fought.

MANION PREDICTS ELECTION IN FALL

Qualified Statement That International Outbreak Might Prevent One

London, Ont., April 14—(CP)— Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion said in an interview here today he had little doubt there would be a general election this fall.

The date he placed not later than October. "It may be before that."

The Federal Conservative chieftain and M.P. for London qualified his statement with an observation which recalled now famous words of President Roosevelt.

The United States executive in leaving Warm Springs, Georgia, declared: "I'll be back in the fall if we don't have war."

Dr. Manion said: "Everything points to an election this fall if there is no international outbreak in the meantime."

German News Agency Indulges in Sarcasm

Berlin, April 14 —(AP)— The German News Agency presented an editorial today entitled "God's Own Country Now Satan's Country," in which the United States is described as a country in which the Indians have been exterminated and the Yankees have full sway.

The 35-line editorial was a departure from the agency's usual custom of reporting events only and was preceded by a 14-line dispatch on a speech by Edward Corsi, Deputy Welfare Commissioner of New York City.

(Corsi, speaking before the Long Island City Chamber of Commerce Wednesday night, said 70 per cent of United States families had incomes below a $1,750 minimum he held was necessary for the support of a family of four).

The editorial begins with a description of America's natural wealth and comparatively sparse population. It continues: "one would think that after all the glorification of the Democratic system one hears about, Americans generally would just be swimming in wealth and contentment. Yet more than one-fifth live in inconceivable misery and 70 per cent of families with small incomes are in economic distress."

GUARANTEES CREATE PROFOUND IMPRESSION

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

Budapest, Hungary, April 14 — (AP)—British and French guarantees of the independence of Rumania and Greece have created a profound impression in the Balkans.

Positive assurances from the western democracies convinced many Balkan statesmen that at last a force had arisen to oppose the German "drang nach osten" (march to the east), which seemed to be sweeping to the Black Sea, and possible Italian expansion through the lower Balkans.

Letter Threatens Death to Family If Alderman Opposes Nazi Activity

Saskatoon, Apr. 14 (CP)—Threat of death to members of the family of Alderman Walter B. Caswell if he expresses himself again on Nazi activity in Western Canada was received through the mail Thursday by the alderman, he disclosed in releasing the letter to the press. Enclosed was a .22 calibre rifle cartridge. Alderman Caswell spoke of the Nazi activities at the Canadian Legion's annual celebration last Saturday of the Canadian victory at Vimy Ridge during the Great War.

Written in indelible pencil on cheap notepaper, the letter read:

"Alderman Caswell,

"I would strongly advise you to keep your mouth shut regarding Germans in Canada, or certain members of your family will come to grief. (I mean it).

"The German population is more united than you think and will stand together if necessary. The rest of the population of Saskatchewan is broken up and is composed of a motley, illiterate group of bohunks who are not interested in British traditions.

"The west is, and is becoming more 'Balkanized' all the time and Britain's rule is coming to an end.

"If war comes you 'English pigs' can be assured that there will be plenty of German activity in the west and you English will have to support Britain yourself because you will get no help from your 'bohunk' friends.

"If you open your mouth in the press again remember someone in your family will meet their end.

Issue is Peace and Civilization or Unending Militarism with Periodic Wars, Says President

PAN-AMERICAN DAY

Men Not Prisoners of Fate, Only Prisoners of Their Own Minds—Have Power to be Free

Washington, April 14—(AP)— President Roosevelt today pledged the United States to defend the nations of the American continents against attack from overseas by means of "economic pressure."

Mr Roosevelt, speaking on the occasion of Pan-American Day, added the pledge of his country against economic attack to earlier pledges of defence against military invasion of Pan-American countries and Canada.

Also, without mentioning names, he disputed the claims of Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Premier Mussolini of Italy that they were being "encircled" by pointing to the methods by which the United States retained peaceful relations with Canada and the Central and South American nations.

"Force to Force"

He called aggression criminal but cautioned that the Americas would match "force to force" if any attempt was made to subvert their institutions. He then added:

"Should the method of attack be that of economic pressure, I pledge that my own country will also give economic support, so that no American nation need surrender any fraction of its sovereign freedom to maintain its economic welfare."

In a pointed reply to Hitler's and Mussolini's claims of encirclement, he said:

No Encirclement

"Men are not prisoners of fate, but only prisoners of their own minds. They have within themselves the power to become free at any moment."

Mr. Roosevelt said the Americas know through experience that "there is no such thing as encircling or threatening, or imprisoning any peaceful nation by other peaceful nations."

"For instance, on the occasion of a visit to the neighboring Dominion of Canada last summer, I

Emilie Takes Her Orders Literally

Callander, Ont., April 14 (CP)— Emilie, generally regarded as the comedienne of the Dionne quintuplets, brought tears of laughter to the eyes of nurses in the Dafoe nursery with a display of spring finery this week.

Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Marie and Emilie were outfitted with sets of rubber boots to protect their feet from melting snow of the play yard.

"Rubber boots are only to wear in water," nurses Molly O'Shaughnessy and Louise Corriveau told their little charges. The quints took heed.

Emilie remembered orders that night as the five sisters were being prepared for their bedtime baths. Clad in nothing but her shiny new rubber boots, she dashed to the tub and clambered in.

When the nurses controlled their laughter, the boots were removed.

Highlights of Pan-American Day Speech by Roosevelt

Washington, April 14—(AP)— Textual highlights of President Roosevelt's Pan American Day address follows:

Few of us realize that the Pan American organization as we know it has now attained a longer history and a greater catalogue of achievements than any similar group known to modern history. Justly we can be proud of it. Never was it more fitting to salute Pan American Day than in the stormy present.

For upwards of half a century the republics of the western world have been working together to promote their common civilization under a system of peace. That venture, launched so hopefully 50 years ago, has succeeded; the American family is today a great cooperative group facing a troubled world in serenity and calm.

Elsewhere in the world, to hold conferences such as ours, which meet every five years, it is necessary to fight a major war, until exhaustion or defeat at length brings governments together to reconstruct their shattered fabrics.

Only a few days ago the head of a great nation referred to his country as a "prisoner" of the Mediterranean. A little later, another chief of state, on learning that a neighbor country had agreed to defend the independence of another neighbor, characterized that agreement as a "threat," and an "encirclement." Yet there is no such thing as encircling or threatening, or imprisoning any peaceful nation by other peaceful nations.

On the occasion of a visit to the neighboring Dominion of Canada last summer, I stated that the United States would join in defending Canada were she ever attacked from overseas. Again at Lima, in December, the 21 American nations joined in a declaration that they would coordinate their common efforts to defend the integrity of their institutions from any attack direct or indirect.

At Buenos Aires, in 1936, all of us agreed in the event of any war or threat of war on this continent we would consult together to remove or obviate that threat. Yet in no case did any American nation regard any of these understandings as making any one of them a "prisoner", or as "encircling" any American country, or as a threat of any sort or kind.

Measures of this kind taken in this hemisphere are taken as guarantees, not of war but of peace, for

GIVEN COMMANDS OF LAKE FREIGHTERS

In the list of ship's masters given commands on the Great Lakes this season announced by the Upper Lakes and St. Lawrence Navigation Company of Toronto yesterday, are included the names of J. Buchanan of Belleville, who will take over the Shelton Weed; T. Heffernan of Picton, who will command the J. Rammacher, and H. Welbanks of Picton, named to command the W. Warren.

SLOW MAIL SERVICE BANCROFT TO COE HILL

According to Gilbert Stenson of Coe Hill, a visitor to the city this morning, Coe Hill Village has recently become more isolated by the change in the mail service. A letter sent from Bancroft to Coe Hill now requires three days' time for delivery.

Spring is making a slow appearance in the northern section of Hastings County this season and considerable snow and ice is still observed in Coe Hill district. Ice on many of the lakes is still firm and hard and swamps which are well ice-coated have yet to show the first sign of thaw.

FORMER MEMBER KILTIES BAND DIES AT HOME IN TEXAS

One time pipe major of the once famous Belleville Kilties Band, which during a tour of the world played by command before King Edward VII in Balmoral Castle, Roderick Bain McKenzie, known as "the Ashfield Giant" died suddenly at his home in Houston, Texas, yesterday according to word received by relatives at Lucknow, Ontario.

He was born in Ashfield, Ont., and as a young man "Rory" as he was known to intimates, was a stone mason. He learned the art of Scottish piping early in life, and due to his magnificent height of more than seven feet, he was an imposing figure. He weighed 427 pounds in his prime.

Mr. McKenzie had long been associated with circus and carnival life and had toured many countries. He helped at one time install a carnival concession in Australia.

HEAVIER PRODUCTION CHEESE LOOKED FOR

Cheese factories of the district are slowly entering into the work of the season's first production and the current comment of makers concerns first prices which will be paid on boards soon to open. The hope expressed by the majority is that a fourteen-cent price will be established on the season's first boarding.

The price received for butter fat at the creameries has not been as high this past winter as in other years, it was pointed out by one maker this morning, and due to the fact there is expected to be little export for butter this season due to stocks currently on hand, it is expected that the majority of farmers are likely to send more milk to the cheese factories this coming summer, which may result in a heavy year for cheese production.

LARGE PROPORTION OF DRIVERS' PERMITS HAVE BEEN ISSUED

Of an estimated total of 8,000 driver's licences for issue in the Belleville district, it was stated this morning by the office of Major S. E. Vermilyea, issuer for this district that about two-thirds of this total had been applied for and given out. Recent prosecutions of drivers who had failed to produce their 1939 permits for driving had spurred the new issue during the later part of the week it was reported.

Nor all cars of the district have as yet been equipped with new markers according to the number of 1939 plates still on the shelf but business in this issue is still reported fairly good.

MUSKRAT SEASON REPORTED POOR

Ice-locked inland, rivers, marshes and lakes, has resulted in the lightest catch of muskrats seen in years a prominent fur-buyer of the district stated today. Fluctuating markets due to surplus stocks and the European situation is responsible, it was stated, to the present instability of prices.

Catches in inland waters and swamps due to ice conditions have been very light, the only open waters where catches of any size have been made being the bays, rivers and other bodies of water emptying into the larger lakes.

$17,642.30 Net Profit Shown By Hydro in Belleville in 1938 Despite Lower Rates

Revenue Down $14,596.37 While Consumption of Power Rises

LOSS ON GAS SERVICE

Interest Charges and Debenture Debt Load Causes Loss of $12,663.44

April 11th, 1939.

TO THE USERS:

I have much pleasure in presenting to you the annual report of the electric, water and gas utilities for the year 1938. The report covers the financial condition to date as well as the operating results for 1938.

Electric Utility

Once again we reduced the electric rates. It makes the seventh reduction in domestic rates, the sixth reduction in commercial rates and the fifth reduction in industrial rates since the plant was purchased in 1929. The reduction has meant a decrease in revenue. The revenue is down $14,596.37 over 1937.

While the revenue was down the amount of power used was up. The average monthly H.P. demand in 1937 was 4874 while in 1938 it was 5184 which means you get considerably more power for less money. The average cost per H.P. in 1937 was $29.05 whereas in 1938 it was $24.79.

The plant value has increased this year by $77,546.81. It is chiefly due to the purchase of the Belleville Substation. The substation was originally part of the capital of the Eastern System and last year you were advised that an agreement to purchase had been made. The price paid was approximately $75,000 of which $31,176.87 was owing on December 31st. The Thirteenth power bill credit of $16,504.31 was used to further reduce the liability. The decision to purchase the station has proven during the year to be a wise one as the power costs have been considerably reduced.

Belleville's equity in the Eastern Ontario System increased from $119,707.98 in 1937 to $136,803.85 in 1938.

The net assets not including the equity in the Hydro Electric Power Commission amount to $396,083.97. In other words the surpluses which have been made each year since 1929 have been used to purchase plant and other assets which amount to the foregoing figure.

The operating expenses remained about the same as in 1937.

Street lighting revenue is down $1057.75 although many new lights were added and a cash rebate of $3,018.56 was made on account of 1937 street lighting.

Many improvements have been made to the lines etc., and each year maintenance work is well looked after. During the year one of the worst storms in many years swept the city and had it not been for the good condition of the lines the interruptions would have been much more severe.

The net profit for the year is $17,642.30.

Water Utility

The rates in the water department were also reduced. The reduction in flat rates was on a 10 per cent basis whereas the meter rate reduction varied depending on the use.

The revenue was up $544.39 and the operating expenses were down $928.97.

The operating surplus was $18,314.27 after meeting all expenses including debenture and interest payments. An amount of $10,349.97 was turned over to the City Council, the balance being credited to depreciation reserve and surplus.

The amount of water pumped during the year was lower by six million gallons than in 1937. The reduction took place during the last part of the year. You may remember that during the year a circular letter was sent to each user asking to conserve water. Evidently you co-operated. May we ask further co-operation as the amount of water used per person per day is still much too high. The total pumpage in 1938 was 782,064,000 gallons.

The physical condition of the pumping plant has been much improved during the year and we know that the quality of water is better. Considerable study and experiments have been made in the operation of the filters in co-operation with the Government engineer as it is our desire to provide the best quality of water possible.

The condition of the distribution system has also been improved but further improvements will be made during 1939.

Many new water meters have been installed and the commercial users are gradually being converted from flat to meter rate.

Gas Utility

I regret I cannot report as bright a picture for the gas as for the other two utilities. The financial statement shows that it is about the same as in 1937. The operating surplus was $5,613.25. In 1937 it was $5,590.02.

The revenue dropped $1,017.44 in spite of an intensive campaign to increase the use.

The debenture debt and interest charges amounted to $14,476.12 so the net loss was $12,663.46. The debenture debt as of December 31st is $179,817.18 and will not be paid off until April 1st, 1960.

Neither the plant nor the distribution system is in good condition but no expense has been incurred which could possibly be postponed. It was necessary to rehabilitate the old water gas plant during the year for emergency purposes and also to provide an auxiliary plant for use in case it was necessary to reline the coal gas retorts. The funds were obtained from the depreciation account.

Owing to the very low electric rates the gas consumers are gradually getting less.

The plant made 28,165,440 cubic meet during the year.

The work of amalgamating the three utilities in one organization has required considerable planning but at present everything seems to be functioning very smoothly.

The staff are most anxious to render the best possible service and to them your Commission desires to express its appreciation of their loyalty and support.

All of which is respectfully submitted on behalf of the Commission.

'All Winners' Amateur Contest Concludes Festival

Leona and Burton Pickering, P. E. County, Win First Prize

KEEN COMPETITION

Culminating three days of outstanding entertainment, yesterday's program brought to a close the second annual Spring Festival of St. Michael's parish crowning with complete success the efforts of the affiliated societies under whose auspices the affair was held. The enthusiasm of the whole community made the event the fine success it was and those in charge were most appreciative of the cooperation of citizens in their support of the Festival.

The "All Winners" amateur contest, the special attraction of last evening's program, was keenly contested by champions of amateur competitions throughout the entire district and the first prize was presented to Leona and Burton Pickering of Prince Edward County, brother and sister, who took part in a clever character song. Three other prizes were also donated, and the judges, Mr. Albert Boynton, Mr. Bert Hanks, and Mr. R. J. Moher were sincere in their praise of the high quality of the acts which made up the program.

All Winners' Contest

Last evening's entertainment opened at eight o'clock with the amateur contest in which eleven acts were entered, the entertainment being supplemented by guest artist numbers which were thoroughly enjoyed. Dan Fairman's Tophatters opened the program with favourite popular numbers. They were followed by St. Michael's Band, under the direction of little Miss Barbara Forhan, whose masterly playing of difficult numbers captivated the audience. Mr. Allan Meagher, chairman of the entertainment committee, as master of ceremonies introduced the evening's contestants, explaining the competition which they had won qualifying them to take part in this district champions' contest.

There was great variety in the acts. Four were tap dance numbers splendidly presented by Mona Hartley, Barabar Donavon, Mary and Gerald Bongard, and Geraldin Farrar of Trenton who danced on roller skates. Musical numbers included vocal and all kinds of instrumental selections. Songs were sung by two talented musicians, Carol Kiser and George Shepherd, with a novelty vocal number by Leona and Burton Pickering of Prince Edward County.

Other interesting numbers were bagpipe selections by Herbert Collins, piano accordion and banjo number by Albert Case, Picton; selections by Bert Kouri and Eugene Reynolds, Marmora, versatile players on harmonicas and guitars; and old time fiddling by Mr. Bill Levesque, one of the most popular numbers on the program.

Guest Acts

Guest artists added to the enjoyment of the huge audience present at the Festival last evening. Their numbers consisted of selections on the musical saw, tap dancing by Pat Domenico, daughter of the general chairman, and Shirley Meagher, daughter of the entertainment chairman, recitations given with great feeling and expression by Mr. George Cornish and a solo by Harold Davidson singing with the orchestra at the conclusion of the program.

Expresses Appreciation

Rev. J. J. Collins was called upon with various chairmen, to address the audience at the close of the Festival. "Because of the unavoidable absence of Monsignor Nicholson," Father Collins said, "I have been asked to convey his greetings and gratitude to all who have cooperated to make this second annual Spring Festival the magnificent success it is. I wish to thank the general chairman of the Festival Committee, Mr. Frank Domenico, and the various chairmen and committees who worked under his guidance. I wish also to thank the ladies who prepared and served the delicious suppers on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. I must also thank the orchestra and all those who have provided entertainment either for the special feature program last night or for the amateur programs Tuesday night and tonight and the judges for these events. In short I thank all members of the parish and our visitors, too, who by their generous spirit and good will have once again made the Festival a social and financial success.

Mr. Frank Domenico, general chairman, expressed sincere appreciation to the various chairmen for their energetic cooperation, and to all groups and individuals who planned and worked for the success of the Festival, and thanked the congregation, friends throughout the community and the press for their support of the event.

Mr. George Lee, assistant general chairman, Mr. Allan Meagher, chairman of the entertainment committee, Mr. Maurice Callaghan, stage manager were called upon for short addresses and added their appreciation for the co-operation they had received in their work.

At this point the decision of the judges of the amateur contest was announced by Mr. A. Boynton, and proved to be very popular with the audience. First prize was won by Leona and Burton Pickering of Prince Edward County, and the other three prizes were won by clever little tap dancers, Mona Hartley, second; Barbara Donavon, third; and Mary and Gerald Bongard, fourth.

Major Prizes Drawn

The various games were well patronized during the evening and at eleven o'clock, the eagerly awaited grand drawing took place. The lucky tickets were drawn by Rev. J. G. Hanley of Trenton. The five-dollar door prize was captured by Mrs. J. V. McIntyre. The twenty-five dollar major prize was won by Miss Bernadette Flynn, Queens Hotel, fifteen-dollar prize — Harold Davidson, 138 East Moira St.; ten-dollar prize—Bill Frawley, 105 East Dundas Street.

Dancing to music by Dan Fairman's Tophatters brought to a close one of the most successful events sponsored by St. Michael's parish.

MR. H. W. R. NEWBY IS TRANSFERRED TO WOODSTOCK

Manager of Walker Stores Ltd. Has Resided Here for 10 Years

LEAVES ON MONDAY

Harold W. R. Newby, manager of the Walker Stores Ltd., at Belleville for the past ten years, will leave on Monday for Woodstock where he takes over the management of the branch of the Walker Stores. In going to Woodstock, Mr. Newby is returning to a portion of Ontario with which he is familiar. He was at one time in Brantford which is only forty miles from Woodstock.

From the time Mr. Newby came from Niagara Falls branch of the Walker Stores Ltd. to assume charge of the Belleville store he has entered into the life of this community, in business, in social circles and in movements which relate to the improvement and betterment of Belleville. He is one of the best known and most popular members of the business fraternity in this city. He has been highly pleased with the development of the retail business in this district and has done his full share towards its growth. In leaving Belleville he has only the kindest words to say of merchants and the people for whom he wishes continued prosperity.

Pleasant Sojourn in Belleville

"I appreciate the fact that I have been privileged to live in this city," he commented. "I have learned to love Belleville which is one of the most beautiful cities I have ever known." He went on to remark that all his life in business had been spent in the retail dry-goods trade and that all his experience had been in the western part of Ontario, his sojourn in Belleville being the one opportunity he has had of living in Eastern Ontario.

A native of England, Mr. Newby came to Canada in the year 1905. "My entry into Canada seemed inauspicious," he related today. "I was on the S. S. Parisian which was seven miles off Halifax when she was hit by an American boat and damaged." He told of feeling the shock of the impact and of the sight of a huge dinge in the hull and efforts of sailors to plug the opening. It was about seven o'clock on a cold night in March when the collision occurred. The vessel lay to for about an hour and a half and then started for the port of Halifax, reaching it in about two hours somewhere about ten o'clock. "An hour and a half after we landed, the liner sank in the Halifax harbor." She had been escorted to port by two boats.

But in spite of this rather exciting entry into Canada, Mr. Newby has had a successful and happy life.

His family will remain in Belleville for a short time. His two sons Douglas and Bill are finishing at Queen's University, Kingston.

Will Be Missed Here

Mr. Newby will be missed in business circles, by the Retail Merchants, by the members of the Bay of Quinte Country Club of which he is a member and by a wide circle of friends with whom he has been brought in contact throughout the district by reason of his position with the Walker Stores Ltd, and in a social way.

Citizens of Belleville and the surrounding community will wish him success and happiness in Woodstock.

At the close of business on Thursday afternoon the members of the staff presented Mr. Newby with a fountain pen and pencil set as token of appreciation and good wishes. The presentation was made by Mr. Eric Naylor on behalf of the staff. Mr. Newby in accepting the gift spoke of the loyalty of the staff and of the fine recollections he would carry from Belleville of his relations with the staff.

BATTERY DINNER AT HEADQUARTERS MUCH ENJOYED

Retiring Commander, Major Van Steenburgh Honored by Sergeants

FINE PROGRAM

Pride of achievement that characterized the officers and members of the 34th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, when they were presented with silver cups emblematic of unit and personal efficiency in Dominion Artillery Competitions last year, was tinged with feelings of regret at the annual dinner held in the battery quarters last night, for it was the last time that Major W. E. Van Steenburgh, popular commanding officer, who is relinquishing the command of the battery, will appear before them in his official capacity.

The beautiful silver tray, bearing engraved facsimile signatures of officers of the unit, presented by them to Major and Mrs. Van Steenburgh a few days ago, was augmented last night with further tangible evidence of the respect and esteem in which the commanding officer is held by all ranks, when the sergeants of the unit through Battery Sergeant-Major William Lindsay, officially presented their C.O. with a handsome silver cocktail shaker, tray and set of glasses.

Taken by Surprise

Visibly affected, and taken completely by surprise Major Van Steenburgh expressed his appreciation of the beautiful gift. "I have had my ups and downs with the sergeants" he smiled, "but they have been grand boys to know. There are none better. Many a time in a pinch the sergeants stepped into the breach and saved the day."

He expressed his sincere regret at leaving the unit. "I love the battery" he said, "and it has been my life's work. That in itself is compensation enough. I am not deserving of these splendid gifts but shall always cherish them as reminder of one of the finest units in Canada."

Presentation of cups and trophies won by the unit and individual members followed the sumptuous repast, that was enjoyed by members and guests. The Herdman Challenge Trophy, emblematic of 1st place for Efficiency of Personnel of all batteries, field medium and heavy in the Dominion of Canada, was accepted by Major Van Steenburgh after it had been officially presented by Lieut. Col. T. Y. Wills, brigade commander. He reviewed the fine record of the unit for the past few years, and in welcoming new members urged that they do all in their powers by qualifying and becoming efficient in various phases of training to keep the battery among the finest in Canada. "The fine showing of this unit is due to the fact that it has been comprised of all trained men, efficient and proud of their unit," he said.

Trophy Presented

The commanding officer presented the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch No. 200, trophy for the best recruit of the past year, to Gunner E. Turner; the Graham Trophy for the highest efficiency in gunlaying at Petawawa to Sergt. G. Buker and the trophy for proficiency in signalling at Petawawa to Sergt. Little. The names of Sergts. Naylor, Little, Bombardier, Ridley and Gunners Wilson and Leavitt had been engraved on the trophy for the highest marks in musketry, he said.

"It is hard to leave this unit," he said in closing. "It has meant a lot to me. However I shall always maintain a high interest in its activities, and I am extremely proud to have been a member of such a splendid organization". "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" followed by cheers rang out in the room as the popular commanding officer resumed his seat.

"He will be missed considerably, by every member of this unit," Lieut. Dr. Ralph Bird said in proposing the toast to the C.O. He paid distinct tribute to Major Van Steenburgh's efficiency as a commanding officer, voicing the regret of the unit at his departure. Sergeant-Major Lindsay then formally presented the C. O. with the sergeant's gift.

Fine Musical Program

A feature of the banquet was a splendid musical program in which such outstanding local artists as Leo Riggs, James Bankier and Harold Barrett took part. The twinkling fingers of the former were heard in the ever-popular "Nola" while Mr. Barrett's fine baritone voice was heard in such favorites as "The Road to Mandalay"; "I love life" and others. Mr. Bankier delighted his audience with "When you and I were young, Maggie". "Anyone here seen the Colonel" "The road that leads to you" and other favorites. Gunner Don Grass, was hilariously funny in a humorous rendition of "Old MacDonald had a farm" while Sergt. Major Lindsay had a busy evening turning the music for the various artists.

Lieut. Bert Wells acted as chairman and master of ceremonies in his usual capable manner. Officers of the unit present were beside the C. O. and chairman, Lieuts. Bird, Laughlin, Sprague, Cousins, Prink, Barclay. Guests were entertained in the various messes at the conclusion of the banquet.

NIGHT SITTINGS

Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews will visit the House just before adjournment today to give royal assent to a number of measures.

First reading was given yesterday to a bill introduced by David Croll (Lib. Windsor-Walkerville) to require employers to grant two weeks' holidays with pay to every employee with 52 weeks' service.

If the governors of the University of Toronto do not discipline Professor Frank Underhill, Professor of Political Science at University College, for allegedly seditious utterances, then Premier Mitchell Hepburn will consult the law officers of the crown to see what the legislature can do.

Same Course Adopted

The same course will be adopted in the case of Prof. G. M. A. Grube, Trinity University, affiliated with but independent of the University of Toronto, for his alleged endorsation of the statement that Canada's defence budget was "a waste of funds in the interests of British imperialism."

"I'm not content to let the matter drop," the Premier told the legislature. "I'll consult the law officers of the Crown.

"Unless something is done to Grube and Underhill, unless action is taken by the Boards of Governors to do the things that should be done. I'm prepared to bring into this house a measure that will, I believe, receive the unanimous support of this legislature."

Conservative leader George Drew offered full support of the government in the matter and brought to the house's attention the allegedly seditious utterances of Prof. Underhill.

Statement Read

The statement attributed to Prof. Underhill of which Col. Drew complained is contained in a book titled "Canada looks abroad" by R. A. MacKay and E. B. Rogers. It read:

"We must therefore make it clear to the world, and especially to Great Britain, that the poppies blooming in Flanders Fields have no further interest for us. We must fortify ourselves against the allurements of a British war for democracy and freedom and parliamentary institutions, and against the allurements of a league war for peace and international order.

"And when overseas propagandists combine the two appeals to us by urging us to join in organizing the 'peace world' to which all British nations already believe, the simplest answer is to thumb our noses at them."

Meanwhile the House adjourned debate on a resolution offered by Fraser Hunter (Lib. Toronto - St. Patrick) demanding immediate dismissal of the two professors. Dr. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, will consult university heads to see if disciplinary action is to be taken.

The remarks attributed to Prof. Grube were made at the Ontario Convention of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation here last Friday during adoption of a resolution urging diversion of the defence appropriations to public works and relief.

No Effort to Curb Speech

Premier Hepburn, Col. Drew and Dr. Simpson all stated there should be no effort to curb free speech, but all agreed that university professors' remarks, no matter where made, were lent a weight they otherwise would not have by reason of a university affiliation.

The education system today should be used as an instrument to preserve democracy, not to undermine it.

Premier Hepburn said it might be well for the legislature to inform the heads and governors of Trinity College that unless they seek to discipline "Grube in a manner befitting the insult he has hurled at the empire, we might well revise the arrangement between Trinity and the university itself. We have the power necessary."

The Premier said he was prepared to break a precedent to get at a man "of the character of this man Grube—a foreigner." He was disappointed the University of Toronto governors had not disciplined Underhill "in a manner befitting the crime he has committed. It smacks of rank sedition."

Restrictions Severe Claim

The Throne Speech debate was continued by W. L. Miller (Lib. Algoma-Manitoulin) and by A. H. Acres (Con. Carleton).

Mr. Miller urged the removal of vexatious conditions and restrictions connected with the leasing of crown land lots to United States citizens for the construction of tourist and summer homes.

"My experience has been that the restrictions placed upon the applicant are entirely too severe and the procedure too cumbersome," he said. "In fact they seem designed to prevent people from buying crown lots rather than encouraging them to become summer residents in the province.

"We definitely have something to sell in the north in the way of cottage sites along the shores of our inland lakes. My suggestion is that choice locations be surveyed, priced and catalogued, so that the officials of the Department could be in a position to give definite information when applications for lots are received."

Many Leasing Sites

In spite of unfavorable conditions and delays, Americans were leasing and buying cottage sites from the crown in increasing numbers each year. The government should take steps to facilitate this profitable business by seeing to it there were no unnecessary regulations to hinder it.

Mr. Acres, whose frequent clashes with Senator Duncan Marshall, then Ontario Minister of Agriculture, were looked forward to by all the members of the last legislature, ran into trouble all along the government benches.

Alleging that the present government wasn't doing all it should for Northern Ontario, Mr. Acres was interrupted by W. G. Dixon (Lib. Temiskaming) who said the present government did more than the Conservatives ever did.

Seeks Retraction

"I might tell something about you that wouldn't be so pleasant," said Mr. Acres to Mr. Nixon. The latter demanded a withdrawal or an explanation and got the latter.

Mr. Acres charged that Mr. Nixon, who was an agricultural representative until a few months before the 1934 general election, "directly and indirectly canvassed for votes and against your predecessor and you ran against him and were elected."

"An absolute falsehood," said Mr. Dixon.

"It isn't," said Mr. Acres.

Mr. Nixon said he had resigned his position as agricultural representative a month before he decided to become Liberal candidate.

"You or nobody else can say I used my office for political reasons," he said.

The speaker seemed to be forgotten as Mr. Acres and Mr. Nixon addressed each other.

"I know what I'm talking about" said Mr. Acres. "I won't retract a thing. You asked for it and you got it."

Hepburn in Argument

Premier Hepburn came into the argument. He said he happened to know something of the situation. Five weeks before the election he was in the constituency and certainly Mr. Nixon had no thought at that time of being the candidate. Mr. Acre's charge was a "mean, unwarranted insinuation against an honorable member."

"Now where did I get my information," Mr. Acres asked himself. "I was up there a year before the election and men told me, "Mr. Nixon would be the next candidate."

A controversy arose as to just what charge Mr. Acres had made. The Premier stated it thusly: That the member for Temiskaming has used his office for political purposes.

Deputy Speaker Roland Patterson asked Mr. Acres to retract and close the incident, but the Carleton member offered to prove what he said, not withdraw it. Col. Drew rose in his seat.

Demanded Retraction

"Now you sit down," advised Premier Hepburn. "You weren't in on this."

"I'll handle this in a minute," interjected Leopold Macaulay (Con. York South).

"You'll handle it," said the Premier, incredulously.

"I'm not going to be told to sit down by the Premier," protested Col. Drew.

"You should know enough about the parliamentary procedure to sit down when I'm on my feet," said the Premier.

The Drew-Hepburn-Macaulay-Acres exchange continued for a few minutes with Mr. Nixon the forgotten man.

"I'm demanding a retraction," finally said Mr. Nixon.

The chair asked Mr. Acres to say he did not intend to make the remark objected to by Mr. Nixon.

"I'll go this far and no further," said Mr. Acres. "If the honorable member didn't know he was going to be a candidate, I'll withdraw, but I was in the riding and was told he was to be the candidate. What I heard a year before the election took place.

"I'll take it back if you take it as charged. I make it just as a complimentary statement of how you got here."

TURKEY THROWS OPEN DARDANELLES TO RUMANIA IN CASE OF WAR

Turkey has expressed her willingness to co-operate with Rumania in presenting a stiff front against aggressor nations and has reportedly agreed to throw open the vital Dardanelles straits for Rumanian use in case of war, according to word from Bucharest. Premier Saydem, of Turkey, has announced that Turkey, "Is maintaining, and will continue to try to maintain, her friendly relations with all powers, great and small, but that, thanks to her great army, Turkey is prepared to repulse any attack." Turkish troops are shown ABOVE when they marched into the Dardanelles area in 1936, to remilitarize the strategic straits which were stripped of their armaments following the great war. Two views of the Dardanelles are also shown, with a view of a fort at the narrowest point of the straits seen LOWER RIGHT.

Only Two Really Care Whether You Like Your Car

Your neighbor might mutter some words of sympathy, but he probably would "wise crack" about it if your car refused to start or broke down a long way from home. It isn't likely that your relatives would send messages of condolence. Nor could you expect the mayor to call a mass meeting of interested citizens.

Only one person other than yourself really is affected by your failure to find complete satisfaction in motor car ownership. That one is the local dealer who sold it to you. A lot depends on what he is able or disposed to do about it.

People who buy Pontiac and McLaughlin-Buick cars here always know that there is a capable permanently established, responsible organization right here in town that will not fail to see that they enjoy all the advantages of motor car ownership. We make sure that the new car is in perfect condition before we deliver it— the first responsibility of a worthy local dealer. And we provide every necessary means to keep it so.

Come in and see today's Pontiac, McLaughlin-Buick line.

GUARANTEES IN BALKANS

A united Britain and a united France, with a growing united front of democracies of the world led by the solid front of the Anglo-French alliance is facing Germany and Italy. It was said at the beginning of the world war, Germany believed Britain would not engage in the war. Of course she made a mistake if she believed that. But no doubt is left today that if there is any aggression the aggressor must count on British and French opposition.

That the free nations of the world, particularly the small ones would not be allowed to be threatened into loss of their independence is the determination of Britain and her ally France.

When Germany stepped into Czecho-Slovakia and carved it up to German taste, and squeezed Memel away from Lithuania, and then went on to throw heavy forces of troops upon the Polish border, she did what brought Britain and France into the situation in East Europe. Their action is now known as the "anti-Hitler bloc". Poland came into the picture. In an effort to break out of what the Germans called "encirclement" by the bloc, Italy made the next move — the Good Friday war against Albania, which shocked the Christian world and further galvanized all the democracies into action. Out of it has come the guarantees to Rumania, Greece and evidently to Turkey that Britain and France will throw their resources into the Balkans should these nations be threatened. Greece and Rumania will decide when and if they are threatened with loss of their independence. That is the same sort of wide contract as was made with Poland.

This will encourage the little states to resist the clumsy bludgeoning by dictators such as was applied to Abyssinia and Czecho-Slovakia.

The strong support voiced by President Roosevelt is one of further signs of a peace-loving world, whose sense of justice is outraged by the tactics of totalitarian governments.

FUTURE OF CZECHS

German authorities have impressed as well as they can upon the Bohemians that there has just taken place the one event for which the period of the past thousand years was mere preparation.

But the Bohemians will not take that. It will stir the blood of these patriots who have preserved their nationality in spite of the Austrian repression. But unfortunately German repression seems to be worse than anything Austrian was.

Germans have a way of penetrating with their Teutonic blood other races. Yet it has not always worked. They thought they had Lower Schleswig safe in Germany at the time the Great War broke out but the Danes proved in the post-war plebiscite that they outnumbered the Germans and so the lower portion of old Schleswig went back to Denmark.

Could the Czechs, Bohemians and Moravians, preserve their individuality for four hundred years as they did under Austrian rule?

But Czechs may hope that they will be able to shake off the German bondage some day. Such would be only fair compensation for this little country which had to swallow bitter pills beginning with October last and just recently.

FROM TORN BOHEMIA TO PEACE RIVER

Fifty Sudeten refugee families are nearing Canada from an English port on their way to homes in the Peace River Country. Next week fifty more families are to sail and in succeeding months 100 families a month may follow, up to a total of between 300 and 400 families. The settlements in the Peace River district will be in groups of 25 to 50 families.

Only those in such a situation as these people who are able to make new homes in a land going by the name "Peace River" can appreciate their feelings as they leave the Old World which is fearful of war. They have had to do a difficult thing—to break with their native places; leave the associations of their old homes, and take up life anew, some probably well-advanced in years. Most of the more experienced farmers and will no doubt be able to render a contribution to the life of Canada, which has adopted them with the aid of the British Government's loan and what aid was given by Czecho-Slovakia before the last jump of Germany when she took over that unfortunate state under her protection.

THE FIRST PLOUGHING

The sun shines bright on this fair April noon,
The crow's dark shadow drifts across the lea.
The robin's song—our hearts with it atune—
Falls on the ear—a welcome melody

The damp, dark mould a mist of incense flings—
A subtle fragrance on the April air—
The ploughman to the field his horses brings,
No satin sheen can with their coats compare.

With patient step they haul the sturdy plough
And turn the furrows from their winter's dream;
The sky o'ercast—the rain is falling now—
And in the silver rain the furrows gleam.

TWENTY ONTARIO COMMUNITIES HAVE QUALIFIED by passing the required by-law to secure Government payment of municipal taxes on houses costing up to $4,000 under the National Housing Act. Belleville City Council has not passed the by-law as yet. National Housing Act loans for the month of December, 1938, totalled $1,241, 374, providing housing accommodation for 377 families. Total of all loans approved under the National Housing Act, and its predecessor, the Dominion Housing Act, to December 31, 1938, was $27,678,002, with total number of family housing units to 7,132. During the last four months of 1938, unfavorable building months, loans were approved aggregating $5,491,000. Indications in Belleville are that considerable building will take place under the act this year. From enquiries made it was ascertained that at least twenty-five new houses are under consideration. In those communities taking advantage of the Government's tax offer and making a reasonable number of building lots available at a nominal price to prospective home owners who will occupy them on completion, the Government will pay 100 per cent. of the first year's taxes, 50 per cent. of the second year and 25 per cent. of the third year. To be eligible for this government aid a by-law must be passed by the municipality in accordance with the National Housing Act. 1938.

RECENT CHARGES OF BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION against United States judges of high and low degree exposes the weakness of the system which places the position of Judge at the whim of politicians, Judges being nominated and elected the same way their dog-catchers are. Recently there have been several cases in the headlines where United States Judges have been accused of using their positions for private personal profit in a manner unethical and illegal. The Canadian system is much more dignified and ethical and inspires respect for the Bench which the United States system can never do.

FIVE HUNDRED PROFESSIONAL PICKPOCKETS HAVE BEEN MUGGED, fingerprinted and barred from the New York World's Fair. Getting pretty tough for the light-fingered lads. Perfection at their trade now means being barred from the best "pitches." In the old days every travelling circus could afford to carry a "mob" of the light-fingered gentry — paying for the concession for the season or working on commission. Now the pickpockets are barred from all places where crowds gather, making their work just twice as hard. Times have changed, the public gets the protection now instead of the pickpocket.

TRUE MODESTY

It was the habit of several local householders to get together over a pint of beer in the local inn and discuss their gardens. On this particular evening each was trying to outdo the others with stories of the marvellous things he had managed to grow.

But one little man, sitting by himself in the corner, took no part in the conversation, until one of his neighbors turned to him and asked: "By the way, what happened to that rhubarb you were growing, Jim?"

"Oh, that!" came Jim's quiet reply. "I sold the sticks to a builder for scaffold poles."

60 Millions Paid Admissions

Not sixty million out-of-town visitors to the New York World's Fair, but sixty million paid admissions is what the managers of the Flushing show expect. The outlook is for fifteen million sightseers from West of the Hudson and north of Van Cortlandt Park. If sixty million is the anticipated total Fair attendance, this would mean that the clients from out of town are expected to average two or three visits; there is New York's own population to reckon with. After all we have in town something like five million adult citizens. On their own account they should roll up an attendance of twenty-five or thirty million. This is a city which on a warm Sunday pours a million people out on the beaches.

If the New York Fair gets its sixty million paid admissions it will be doing relatively as well as the Chicago Fair; not the one of six years, but of forty-six years ago, the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893. This still holds the record for attendance in absolute numbers with very nearly twenty-eight million visitors. Forty years later in Chicago the Century of Progress drew twenty-two million visitors the first year; next year's repeat performance brought sixteen million more visitors, but we are speaking of single-session Fairs only.

When the Chicago Fair of 1893 drew twenty-eight million visitors the country had a trifle over half the present population. If our own show this year attracts the aforesaid sixty million patrons it will be relatively just a bit better than Chicago forty-six years ago.

People out West beyond Chicago like to go to fairs, or else they put on very good shows that attract visitors from all over the United States. Thirty-five years ago, the year in which Theodore Roosevelt was elected for a second term, St. Louis with its Louisiana Purchase Exposition drew twenty million visitors. The country's population was less than two-thirds of what it is today; that attendance would be equivalent to thirty million today.

San Francisco may be said to have done even better with its Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915. The attendance was something under twenty million. To be sure, the country's population was by then up to one hundred million; but on the other hand, Chicago and St. Louis are within a stone's throw, so to speak, of the centre of population, whereas San Francisco is two thousand miles away from the centre of population. A radius of a thousand miles from San Francisco would take in less than fifteen million Americans. The same radius from New York would take in eighty million people. The same radius from Chicago or St. Louis would take in perhaps one hundred million people.

New York can only hope that San Francisco in 1939 will do even better than in 1915 and that all the visitors will then decide to come and see how the New York show compares.

The huge crowds at the original Chicago Fair nearly fifty years ago are all the more remarkable when one recalls that it was before the age of automobiles; and that would hold as late as the St. Louis Fair of 1904. Within a radius of 200 miles from New York live perhaps 40,000,000 people. It would be almost two-thirds of the whole population of the United States at the time of the Chicago Columbian Exposition; today 200 miles are an easy day's run in the family automobile.

We saw the other day that in the course of a single year, which is virtually in the course of a single summer, more than 30,000,000 Americans visit the national forests. All that we need do is to divert this single item of the nation's motor traffic from forests to expositions and we have a successful World's Fair right then and there.

"CANADA SHOP"

A tastefully arranged "Canada Shop" is open at 70 King Edward Street, Hull, under the auspices of the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce. This exhibition of Canada's pure foods is attracting widespread attention, especially among the housewives of Hull, who are particularly adjured to "Buy Canadian: start the habit today."

Breakfast cereals, cheese, bacon, honey, apples, and canned salmon, lobster, tomatoes and soups are among the many tasty food products displayed.

Samples of many of these are obtainable; demonstrations are given; and books of recipes are distributed. In connection with this "Canada Calling" campagin a window-dressing competition has been organized for grocery and provision dealers, in which over £60 is offered in prizes, as well as three silver cups. — Canada's Weekly (London.)

NEW GOLDFIELD

Gold has been discovered in what is claimed to be paying quantities over a wide area in Gujerat (Western India.) A company is shortly to be formed. India today mainly produces from the Kolar Gold Fields in South India, her percentage of the world's output amounting to one.

One of the promoters of the new company first heard of gold in Gujerat nine years ago and has spent all his spare time in following up the clues. He has personally prospected many hundreds of miles while his workers have been ceaselessly employed in the search.

When satisfied that gold could be recovered in good quantities, he applied for a lease. Government of Bombay have now sanctioned the granting of a mining lease for 30 years for gold and silver in 3,356 acres of land—5½ square miles. — Indian Press, Union.

QUICKER THAN WINK

As long as people have been writing and speaking in English at all, they have been writing and uttering the expression, "Quick as a wink."

Way back in the primitive days before everything was scientific, they used it. But, poor, benighted folks, they didn't really know what they meant.

Just how quick is "quick as a wink?" No need for ignorance any longer. Science has stepped in and accurately measured the wink.

With apparatus and photographic film and pages of mathematical calculations, based on the records of expert and just average winkers, they found that the ordinary involuntary wink (blinkus vulgaris) takes between one-eighth and one-fourth of a second, while even one of those long, lazy provocative winks takes no longer than a full second.—Kitchener Record.

JUVENILE COURT

Joseph Daley, 14, is judge, and Fred Duncan, 14, is prosecuting attorney in the recently instituted Juvenile Traffic Court in La Porte, Ind., where 4,000 bicycles in a city of 17,000 had created a serious traffic problem. Under the law, bicyclists had to be treated the same as automobile traffic violators, but police hesitated to act against boys and girls. So last summer Mayor Alban M. Smith selected two outstanding Boy Scouts to conduct a weekly juvenile court, giving them authority to inflict penalties varying from the imposition of essay-writing on traffic rules to the impounding of bicycles from one day to a week and fines of 25 to 50 cents.

VIENNA VISIT

The visitor to Vienna of the '20's would hardly recognize the city today. This city, at one time mellow with Old World color, romance and charm, now seems suspended in a nameless tension and fear—a dangling participle on a once-light hearted and eloquent page of history.

A city remembered for gay music and the spirit of youth is now almost devoid of both. If there is any music, it is the fancied rumble of drums over the distant world as it arms for the great conflict. The youthful soldier and his sweetheart seem to have vanished from the streets. In his place are the grim, taciturn, humorless Nazi troops, unloved by the repressed and fearful daughters of old Vienna.

The sight is enough to bring tears to the eye. The absence of music, the knowledge that the city has aged overnight and youth has fled, must bring sadness to the heart of the most prosaic. With what grief must the three ominous sisters have woven this tapestry of suspicion and distrust! Even the mellow, wine-colored Vienna buildings — the old Schoenbrunn — now look dingy in a sun suspended on the Rome-Berlin axis. The wine of choice is now soured and bittered by an Austrian paper-hanger.—Letter in St. Louis Post-despatch.

DANGER IN BREVITY

Mr. Justice Cave's laconic summing-up mentioned the other day might be compared with the comment of Mr. Commissioner Kerr: "eGntlemen of the jury, you have heard the witnesses for the plaintiff. If you believe them you should find a verdict for the plaintiff. You have heard the witnesses for the defence; if you believe them you will give a verdict for the defendant. But if, like myself, you don't believe any of them, then God alone knows what you will do. Consider your verdict."

At the same time, a laconic summing-up may be a dangerous thing, and even defeat the ends of justice. Hawkins used to say that he learnt a very useful lesson in this? respect early in his career as a judge. He forgot, as he confesses, that country juries were not always wise, and that "juries are unused to evidence and have very often to be told what is the bearing of it."

In a case of fowl-stealing at Exeter the evidence seemed so overwhelmingly clear that he confined himself to saying: "Gentlemen, do you believe in the defence?" "They put their heads together and kept in that position for some time, and at last, to my utter amazement, said: 'We do, my Lord. We find the prisoner not guilty.'" — Manchester Guardian.

RECALLING HISTORY

Those who remember their European history will recall that in the latter years of the eighteenth century the then independent nation of Poland was swallowed by her three powerful neighbours, Prussia, Russia and Austria. The process required three gulps. Historians gave them the more genteel name of partitions. But the result was the same. After the third gulp there was no more Poland.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Diseases of Old Age

At times when we look about us we are apt to think that the world is going backwards. There appears to be more crime, more hate, more jealousy, more disrespect for parents, and for law. But as we look on the other side of the picture and see the efforts put forth to save mothers and babies, the work of the service clubs for underprivileged girls and boys, the free medical clinics with best physicians in charge, the mental clinics which prevent, to a considerable extent, loss of mental health, we cannot but be persuaded that the human heart is progressing forward and upward.

One of the most gratifying of the forward steps in medicine is that of caring for the middle-aged and elderly individuals of the community. Thus, as we have had pediatricians (children's specialists) for some years now, a new group of specialists is now with us—the geriatricians—who specialize in the treatment of elderly people.

And as we think of it, why should the world not have the contribution of the old and wise and why should not these old people have comfort and freedom from illness and pain?

In speaking of treatment in old age, Dr. Meyer Golob, in Medical Record, says:

"In old age each symptom must be traced to its source before any particular disease can be found. Whereas, in the young or middle-aged, a group of symptoms denotes the particular disease present."

"Diet is the first line of defense against disease. The administration of drugs is of far less importance than the willingness of the physician to listen to the many aberrations (departures from normal) of the old person who feels neglected and unhappy."

"Cathartics should not be used as constipation in older persons is often due to the wastes being closely packed together in lower end of bowel. A better method is the use of low enemas." A quart of warm water every few days is usually sufficient to remove any impaction of the wastes.

"The mere fact of willing attention, cheerfully given, is often, in itself, the best remedy to rule out many ills."

It is a hopeful sign when the very young and the very old are receiving the best attention of the mature.

WEATHER DETECTORS

Royal Air Force pilots fly daily to a height of 25,000 feet to gather essential information for the Air Ministry meteorological experts, according to whose forecasts millions plan their work and pleasure, and on whom countless pilots depend.

The 15-year record of the Meteorological Flight is an astonishing story of high endeavor and onerous duty fulfilled as a matter of routine. An unbroken run of approximately 1,500 flights to a level not far below the peak of Everest, world's highest mountain, has been accomplished from Mildenhall airdrome since the last cancellation of a scheduled flight, in November 1936, when every airdrome in Britain reported "visibility nil".—British Aircraft Society.

Donald Baxter of Bloomfield Addresses Stirling Club

Stirling — Nearly a hundred members and guests were present at the final meeting of the Stirling Community Welfare Club before the summer recess. The meeting was set aside as the annual Father and Son Banquet with Donald Baxter of Bloomfield being the guest speaker. Dinner was served by the ladies of the Stirling branch of the Ontario Women's Institute in the Stirling Community Service building. President George Bailey presided as chairman, R. A. Patterson and Art Duncan as song leaders and H. Moore as Sergeant-at-Arms.

Following the toast to the King, song leaders Bob Patterson and Art Duncan assisted by Fred Houchin, Carl Potter, Bill Dermedy, Murney Hick, formed a music committee that sang the requested songs suggested by the members of the audience. When they failed they paid a fine to the sergeant-at-arms and when they were successful the party making the request paid. The event was novel and enjoyable.

Speaker is Donald Baxter

At this point in the meeting Donald Williams introduced the speaker of the evening, Donald Baxter, as one of the leaders of present day youth in the Bay of Quinte district. Proving himself successful in business, Mr. Baxter found time to be a very energetic leader and President of the Young People of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada. After a display of original wit and humour, Mr. Baxter introduced his topic for the evening under the caption "The Challenge of the Present Day to the Modern Boy" a subject fittingly chosen for the occasion.

Today all nations are blessed with the finest schools and colleges wherein youth can obtain unrivalled academic training. But the completion of this training often leaves them drifting and unsettled because of the lack of opportunity to apply the knowledge acquired. Too often as we view the situation we are prone to give up, nursing the idea that the days of adventure and conquest are gone. There are no new worlds to discover, gone are the days of romance, adventure etc., enjoyed by the youth of pioneer days. But we should keep in mind that to discover and build an Empire required great bravery and the effort to maintain the things for which our heroes died also requires bravery. The salvation of democracy is adventure for all youth to have a real part in. Scientific achievement has given us many things and it requires much of the bravery displayed in their discovery to carry them forward in constructive use. Youth must be given the confidence of their elders in a safe measure at least but at the same time remember that they lack greatly in actual experience and must be willing to accept advice from Dad who, after all has been through the mill.

A man's greatest asset in life is his father, and close association with him by the limitations of rural life provides one with a steadiness in intellect not to be found in large cities. There seems to be a vast moving of youth from the farms to the city, but the majority of our successful leaders point with pride to rural life and training as the foundation of their success. It seems that all movements of upward trend for social betterments are led by rural influence.

The late Dr. Gordon, one of Canada's most famous men, author, soldier, statesman and Minister attributes his wide knowledge of humanity, its needs and weaknesses to his early days spent in Glengarry County. Ramsay MacDonald rose to the highest position available in the British Empire from a humble rural environment. The day of crusade and adventure is not past for Canadian Youth. There is opportunity for youth to campaign for progress. The youth of yesterday made Canada and the British Empire a leader in the cause of Democracy. Our job is to keep it such. The job of youth is to right the wrongs existing in a democratic way, discourage all the isms that present no solution to the problems but disturb our thinking.

Eastertide has just passed. It is a good time to re-affirm our allegiance to the cause of Christianity, strive to establish a world wide peace that will last. It's a man sized job that offers much of adventure and requires plenty of courage. From present day youth must come leaders who can solve such problems as inadequate distribution of wealth and products, unemployment, want and provide a means whereby all men shall be given a right to work, have a home and live a natural, normal life and direct the youth of the coming generations.

COMMANDING FLEET

Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, commander of the British Mediterranean Fleet which converged on Malta as an emergency call was broadcast to all officers and seamen ashore, ordering them back to their vessels. Reports indicate that British and French warships are cruising in the neighborhood of Corfu, Greek island believed next on the dictators' list of annexations.

Rev. J. E. Beckel thanked the speaker for his excellent address and the program continued under direction of R. A. Patterson. Following a few reports from Committee workers the meeting adjourned until the Fall season. The fine program presented was made possible through the efforts of program convener F. R. Mallory assisted by H. L. Pair, R. A. Patterson, H. R. Tompkins and A. Duncan.

St. Paul's W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society was held in Church Parlours on Tuesday afternoon, April 11th. Mr. R. A. Patterson, President, was in charge and opened the meeting with the singing of hymn No. 115 followed by prayer. During the business part of the meeting which followed, the Secretary presented a detailed report of the last regular meeting and the roll call indicated a good attendance. Other matters of business included a communication regarding allocation for the year read by the president. Mrs. Hulin asked for group leaders as helpers in her division of the work. Department Secretaries' reports were read and the Treasurer gave an excellent report of the finances.

Easter Service of Worship.

Mrs. C. Macklin directed the remaining portion of the meeting which took the form of an Easter service following the use of hymn No. 89. Miss Mae Currie gave the topic of the day taken from the Study Book entitled "The World in Canada." The Scripture lesson dealing with the story of the good Samaritan was read by Mrs. F. Elgie with the leader remarking briefly upon the lesson. This interesting meeting climaxed with the singing of hymn 252 and prayer by Mrs. W. Jones.

Mrs. Geo. Livingstone is 80

Celebrating her 80th birthday on Monday, Mrs. Geo. Livingstone remarked that never in all her recollection had she seen so much snow on that particular day. Enjoying exceptionally good health this lady who has spent the greatest part of her life within walking distance of the village of Stirling, received messages and gifts from friends and relatives in all parts of the province and children of the neighborhood with whom she is very popular were among the first to offer their greetings. Born in the vicinity of Trenton being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Elliott, she spent nearly all her life in the Stirling district living for many years on the Oak Hills. Plants and cut flowers were among the gifts displayed to the friends that called. The ladies of the Friendship Circle of St. Paul's W. M. S. called and presented her with a gift basket of fruit. Mrs. Livingstone has been active in church work for many years and still attends when weather permits.

Special Easter Church Services

Climaxing an interesting series of Lenten midweek services at St. John's Anglican Church Rev. A. S. McConnell conducted Ante Communion services on Good Friday Morning and continued the Easter Services throughout Easter Sunday with Choral Communion Service in the morning and a special children's hour of worship in the evening. All services were largely attended.

At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church special Easter Services were featured by the ringing of the chimes which were amplified and transmitted from a loud speaker placed in the belfry through the kindly efforts of Jack Ormiston, local radio expert, and Art. Duncan. In the services excellent messages were presented by Rev. W. H. V. Walker and the choir of twenty voices assisted with special music under the direction of Miss Grace Pitman. In the absence of the regular organist, Mrs. R. H. Williams, Miss Pitman presided at the organ and special musical numbers included two anthems with Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Eggleton and Mrs. C. Fargey giving solos and duets. Arthur Duncan also assisted with a solo at both services, in the morning singing "Leave It With Him" and in the evening, "The Holy City". Both services were largely attended and the Easter messages presented were inspirational and helpful.

St. Paul's United Church

With the minister, Rev. W. J. Scott, speaking on a subject suitable to the day a large congregation attended morning worship at St. Paul's United Church. Mr. G. L. Clute presided at the organ and directed the choir in the presentation of an anthem "And Behold". William Reynolds was the soloist, singing "Man of Sorrows". In place of the regular evening worship Easter Vesper Service was conducted at four-thirty in the afternoon with special music including the anthems "Wake Thou That Sleepeth" and "Throned on High". Messages appropriate to the day were presented by Rev. Scott with large congregations present particularly at the vesper service in the late afternoon.

Enthusiasm abounds in the activities of these youthful farmers and an exceptionally successful year is looked for.

Successful Euchre and Dance Held

Held under the auspices of St. James Church a most enjoyable card party and dance was held in the Stirling Community Service Building on Monday evening. Cards were enjoyed by the large gathering for the early hours of the evening with euchre being the game popularly adopted. From ten o'clock until the early hours of the morning, the large dance floor was well filled with dancers both young and old that thoroughly enjoyed the excellent music provided. Luncheon was served by the ladies of the church. The event was looked upon as one of the most successful from every standpoint regardless of the very unusual weather on that night.

ENGLAND LOOKS TO HER AIR DEFENCES

Caught off guard last fall, Britain has spared neither expense nor effort to build up her defences in a great rearmament drive. One of the results of the drive was this demonstration in London's Hyde Park. Anti-aircraft guns and their crews gave Londoners an idea of just what steps his majesty's government has taken to protect them against hostile aircraft. Neutral observers now believe that England is ready for whatever may come from the present critical situation existing in Europe.

Mr. Spencer and Mr. Howard were returning from their morning trip around their muskrat trap line when they saw the otter sitting on the ice along the shore of the river. Weddings

GEEN—VARTY

Tweed, (Special) — The Tweed United Church was the scene of a very pretty Easter wedding, Wednesday afternoon at 2 p.m., when Adelaide Eliza, daughter of Mr. Hiram Varty, and the late Mrs Varty of Bogart, became the bride of William Murney, eldest son of Mrs. Margaret Geen and the late Murney Geen of Thomasburg. Rev. Lloyd H. Morrison officiated and Miss Lois Richardson was at the organ.

Owing to the illness of the bride's father, the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Harold Varty. She wore a white taffeta gown made on Princess lines, and an embroidered tulle veil caught with gardenias. She carried a nosegay of Johanna Hill roses and sweet-peas. Miss Mabel Varty, in Royal blue chiffon, was her sister's maid of honour. The bridesmaids, also sisters of the bride, were Misses Hilda and Marjorie Varty. They wore gowns of shell pink and lilac taffeta. The attendants wore matching doll hats made of tulle and flowers, and they carried old-fashioned nosegays of sweet-peas. Little Miss Shirley Gwendolyn Varty of Toronto, niece of the bride, in pale blue taffeta dress, was flower-girl, while her sister, little Miss Eleanor Diane in pale pink taffeta was ring-bearer.

Mr. Everett Geen of O.A.C., Guelph, was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. George Varty of Toronto, brother of the bride and Mr. Stanley Geen, brother of the groom. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Harry Grier sang very sweetly "O Promise Me".

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held for eighty guests at the Varty homestead, Bogart, when a buffet luncheon was served. Receiving with the bridal party were Miss Eliza Coulter of Tamworth, aunt of the bride and Mrs. Margaret Geen, mother of the groom.

The bride and groom were the recipients of many useful and beautiful gifts. Out of town guests were present from Toronto, Cornwall, Tamworth, Belleville, Picton and Stirling.

For a trip to Ottawa, Hawkesbury and Montreal, the bride wore a gray tweed suit with matching accessories. On their return the young couple will live in Thomasburg.

BAKER—TESKEY

Beneath a canopy of white wedding bells and white streamers, banked by ferns and baskets of Easter lilies, Nora Eileen Teskey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Herbert Teskey of Wellington, on Thursday, April 6 at two o'clock, became the bride of Frank Eugene Baker, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Baker, Trenton, Ont.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a long gown of white chiffon over white satin, made on princess lines, with bolero of chiffon in pleated effect. Her finger tip veil, with Juliet cap, was caught with lilies of the valley, and she carried a bouquet of Token and Killarney roses with lilies of the valley and fern.

Miss Isobel Morton of Oshawa, as bridesmaid wore a becoming gown of pale blue net over blue taffeta, with lace bolero. Her small hat was of blue velvet ribbon and flowers and she carried a bouquet of Premier Supreme roses with sweet-peas and fern.

Mr. Arthur Howard of Oshawa, attended the groom.

As the bride and attendants entered the parlour and took their places Miss Velma Vandewater of Wellington, played Mendelssohn's Wedding March and during the signing of the register, she played softly "Oh Promise Me"'. Miss Vandewater was smart in a long gown of cerise taffeta with black jacket, small black hat with flowers and veil.

Rev. J. G. McKee of the United Church was the officiating minister.

Guests were admitted by Miss Dorothy Baker, young sister of the groom and received by Mrs. Charles Carter.

At the reception following, Mrs. Teskey wore an attractive gown of sandalwood crepe with corsage of Token roses and sweet-peas. The groom's mother, Mrs. A. Baker, was in navy sheer with touches of lace, navy straw hat and corsage of Parnet roses sweet-peas.

The bride's table was prettily done, being centred with the wedding cake, tall pink tapers in silver candlesticks on a lace cloth. A bevy of girl friends of the bride assisted in serving the forty guests. Mrs. Wm. Brown, Trenton, aunt of the groom, and Mrs. Hilton McCartney of Wellington, aunt of the bride, poured tea and cut the ices. The home was brightened by baskets of fragant Spring flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker left by motor for a trip to Toronto, the bride travelling in a tailored suit of navy tricotine with small straw hat and other accessories in Suez. On their return they will reside on Dufferin Avenue, Trenton.

LOHNES—SIMMONS

Frankford, Special—A quiet wedding took place in the United Church parsonage on Tuesday morning, April 11th., when Mary Elizabeth Simmons of Coe Hill, Ontario, became the bride of Louis Earl Lohnes, son of the late Gilbert Lohnes and Mrs. Lohnes of Frankford. Rev. J. F. Lane, pastor of Frankford United Church officiated, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes witnessed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Lohnes will reside in Coe Hill where Mr. Lohnes is teaching school.

Never enough gloves to suit the suit ensemble! A good model is made of strips of navy doeskin and navy kid, joined by narrow silk fagotting.

Plenty of room for everything in a handbag made of three distinct parts, one in red capeskin, one in white, and the third in blue.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

For the Boy Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend's birthday is coming in about a month. I want to give him a nice gift, but as he doesn't smoke, it's rather difficult to know what would be nice. Can you suggest something suitable?

Girl Friend

Leather articles are always good presents to give the boy friend: A photo frame, a brief case, a collar box, desk accessories, books are always acceptable, but be sure to find out what he likes best. A magazine subscription to his favorite magazine is good. Neckties are always safe, if you know how to pick them and from what I hear, boys as well as girls, enjoy candy.

Shall They Dance?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've fallen in love with a man of 24, who is of the domestic type. I am 20 and very fond of dancing and parties. Therefore, he objects to my going to these places of amusement. He gets so jealous when I go to dances with my girl friend, and he doubts my love for him. But I really love him very devotedly. Could this be a happy match, if he expects me to give up everything for him? Please help me to solve my problem.

Wondering

It's always a doubt in my mind whether two people of such opposed tastes could be happy if married. You are exceptionally fond of the innocent amusement of dancing; what normal girl isn't? And your boy friend is violently opposed.

And then too, he is jealous and doesn't like to see you go to dances with your girl friends. If you marry this young man, you are likely to resent this opposition more than you do now.

Think it over well, before you make up your mind.

Sauce for the Gander

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We often talked of the future when we could really belong to each other. So I gave up all my other boy friends because I didn't care to date other boys, loving him so much.

During this time he kept company with cheap girls. I begged him to give them up, which he never did completely. I happened to make a date with an old friend, and when this boy found out about it, he swore he'd never stop going with other girls. But he said that I knew he loved me and that he would never love anyone else.

Now he says we must quit, but when I beg him to come back to me he does. Still he continues to say we must quit, and as I still love him, I feel that I cannot give him up completely.

Verca

When a young man tells a girl he must quit, there is usually some definite reason. Perhaps he felt that your friendship was becoming too serious and he is not in a position to marry and thinks he is unfair in doing what is called "wasting a girl's time".

But as you tell me he comes back sometimes, things may turn out the way you want, if he feels he can really afford to marry. Your letter was too long to publish in full. I hope this answers your leading question.

Etiquette news Here and There

What a grand boost for etiquette that line spoken by Charles Boyer toward the beginning of "Love Affair"! Remember? The group of girls, persistent autograph hounds, swoop on him gushing about their adoration of him and demanding his autograph. They give him definite orders that he must "write something that we can remember always". He writes his message, continues his walk down the corridor of the luxury-liner. With languishing eyes they watch him disappear, and then they read what he has written. I hope they will remember it. . . . "You are very pretty girls, but you have very bad manners".

And have you been listening too to the new love angle in the Amos 'n' Andy program? Much problematic talk about Andy's fiancee, "Puddinface." Andy is desperately confused about the apparent unpopularity of Puddinface; no one offers him congratulations on his approaching marriage no one suggests giving Puddinface a shower. The prize line was the other evening, when Amos asks Andy where Puddinface is. "She's out drumming up a shower for herself", admits Andy, more than a little disconsolately.

Much comment about that photograph of the Duchess of Windsor wearing her diamond bracelets on the outside of her gloves. We've all been brought up, of course, to consider this mode in the worst possible taste. Now "it is to laugh" to observe that some women, who consider themselves cosmopolitan, copying this definitely provincial mode!

I heard a hostess the other day make a very interesting and thought compelling comment about a charming guest at her party . . . "I love to invite Miss Field to a party. She always takes care of herself . . . does her part . . . is always socially cooperative. I never have to have her on my mind." A grand thing to have said about you!

"A family should be like a fabric for a dress—strong, closely woven and knitted, wrinkle-proof, color fast, long in wearing and put together by 'union labor'." This was the theme of the symposium I attended this week, a symposium on family life held by the department of family living of the New York City Federation of Women's clubs. Each speaker, before her speech, demonstrated the quality of the fabric, likening this quality to the required quality of the members of the family. And each speaker stressed these qualities especially: Patience, understanding, cooperation, courage, sense of humor, sense of responsibility, resistance, and the desire for harmony and discipline. Here is food for thought!

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Measles Inoculations Still in Experimental Stages

Measles is one of the diseases we haven't been able to do much about, for there are just as many cases of it now as there were hundreds of years ago. If the disease were as harmless as German measles, we wouldn't worry about this fact. But every year hundreds of children die or are left permanently weakened, so it is our duty to try to do something about it.

Public health departments have done a great deal toward controlling the disease by the application of quarantines. But there is still much to be done. Perhaps no disease depends so much on the parents and family in the matter of its control.

I firmly believe that we will succeed in controlling this disease only when we have educated the people to the point where they will know or suspect, something of this and other infectious diseases and call their doctor before the contagion has been passed on to others.

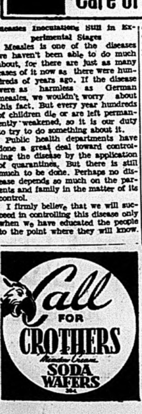
Measles start out with a head cold and a fever. This is the time, even before the rash comes along, when your child is the most dangerous to others, for this is the most infectious stage.

I know that lots of mothers and fathers get rebellious at the thought of the quarantine. They sometimes argue that someone else has given the disease to their child, and why should they worry about him giving it to someone else. This is a very short-sighted view to take. Parents must not feel that because they call their doctor and submit to quarantine that they are doing it for other children. They must realize that this is the means they are taking to protect their own child from developing complications which may weaken him for life, or even cause his death.

Measles is one of the diseases for which we haven't been able to develop vaccines or serums. Some progress has been made along this lines. Experimenters have been made from the blood of a patient able to control attacks of measles in individuals by injecting a serum who has recently had measles. As I say, progress is being made, but we haven't anything yet in the way of inoculations or vaccinations which will guarantee that the disease won't occur.

Some physicians who have been working with this serum have been making discoveries. When we know a child has been exposed to infection, an inoculation of this serum is given. It has been found however, that if this inoculation is given too soon, the child won't contract it, but the next time he is exposed, he will. Then it was found that if the inoculation was given later, the child will develop the disease in a very mild form; so mild, in fact, that there won't be any complications. Then the child has been immunised, and the next time he is exposed to the contagion he won't take the disease.

All this inoculation is still in the experimental stage. The actual control of the disease is still up to you parents. You can protect your own children as well as others if you will just let your doctor help you.



Grape Juice In Dessert Dishes

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

THE IDEA of using grape juice as a cooking ingredient to acquire that delightful wine flavor, so nice and tangy, has caught on quickly, and there are many requests for more. We are pleased to comply, this time giving dessert dishes.

Bread Pudding may be anything from a dull way to use up a left-over loaf to a culinary triumph. It's all in the way you make it. And, of course, every housewife wants to make it now and again, not only with an eye to its budget appeal but for its food value as well. Here's an intriguing new recipe for a dish likely to make the family en masse asks for "seconds" especially if you make assurance doubly sure by serving a new sauce as well!

Grape Juice Pudding

Grape Juice Pudding calls for five slices white bread, two tablespoons butter, three cups grape juice, three eggs, separated, one cup and two tablespoons granulated sugar. Spread the bread, from which the crusts have been removed, with the butter. Cut into one-inch squares and arrange in one and one-half quart baking dish. Beat the egg yolks, add three-fourths cup sugar and the grape juice. Pour over the bread and bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) for 30 minutes. Beat the egg whites stiff but not dry. Add the remaining sugar gradually, beating constantly until the mixture stands in peaks. Arrange on the pudding and bake in 300 degrees F. oven for 20 minutes. Serves six.

And here are some new sauces. Golden Fluff Sauce requires one-half pint grape juice brought to a boil. Add yolks of four eggs and one cup sugar. Whip it on fire until in a state of high froth and a little thick.

Snow Foam Sauce is made with the whipped white of an egg and one cup of sugar whipped to a stiff froth. Whip separately one cup thick cream to a solid froth. Mix lightly together and flavor with two tablespoons grape juice.

Apple Snow

Apple Snow is a dessert that entails quite some effort, but it is worth it. Ingredients to serve six to eight include one tablespoon gelatin, one-fourth cup cold water, one and one-half cups grape juice, one-third cup sugar, one-eighth teaspoon grated orange rind, one-fourth teaspoon grated lemon juice, two stiffly-beaten egg whites and one cup grated apple. Soak gelatin in cold water for about five minutes. Place over boiling water until completely dissolved. (All of the gelatin must be dissolved before it is removed from hot water.) Cool gradually at room temperature; the cooling must not be hastened by placing the gelatin in cold water. To the grape juice now add three tablespoons sugar, the salt and the grated orange and lemon rinds. Stir until sugar is completely dissolved. Add small amount of this mixture to the cooled gelatin, mix thoroughly and add to the remaining grape juice mixture. Chill until thick and syrupy. Then to the stiffly-beaten egg whites add remaining sugar and whip with a rotary beater until the sugar is blended. Add grape juice mixture gradually, beating after each addition. Chill, and when mixture begins to set fold in the freshly grated (tart) apples. Turn into mold or pile lightly in sherbet glasses. Chill till firm. Serve plain or with whipped cream or soft custard.

New Beauty Tricks Glorify Woman

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHY IS IT that a woman with a shopping list as long as your arm will speed through a store at breakneck speed, pull up at the cosmetic counter and hang around for half an hour? The answer is so simple that it's silly. She's bent on giving Popper Time the laugh. She knows that cosmetic chemists are keeping their kettles boiling and she doesn't want to lose out on anything new. If there's anything more important than keeping sweet and gay, looking young, she doesn't know what it is. In that respect she's a smart baby.

Cosmetic kits have the sisters by the ear; they can't resist them. Time was when you tried to pack a collection of misfit jars, bottles and boxes into your suitcase when you went travelling, only to find, at your destination, that they had got together on the way and had a party. Corks loosened, powder everywhere perfume gone where the woodbine twineth, wherever that is.

How different now! You have small containers, every item unspillable, the whole outfit taking up no more space than three pairs of stockings. Such kind people these chemists and gadget makers; always thinking of us. Why should not we shell out our money when we get renewed youth in return?

A heavenly beauty kit has a closing device that facilitates the business of getting out make-up and putting it back again. The bag opens at a touch, stays open while you dig in for your lipstick or rouge compact. It's as cute as a baby's mitten. Another touch—like a swish over Aladdin's lamp—and the container is closed again. The spring action is of special Swedish steel so it won't fail you. The steel is invisible, the kit is of moire silk and very elegant.

And now for something else the girls are in a frenzy about. They are buying earrings, tinting them with nail polish to match the glitter carried at their finger-ends. Polish comes off with polish remover, so you can have ear pendants of any color your little heart desires. Earrings with a little opening for a drop of perfume are going strong. The floretted odor wafts up into your suitor's nostrils when you dance. Makes him feel romantic. Honest!

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Mary's Lamb Star Pupil Today

By Garry C. Myers, Ph.D.

Our parents or grandparents read at school about Mary's lamb that followed her to school one day which was against the rule for "It made the children laugh and play to see a lamb at school." So the lamb was turned away and Mary rebuked.

Today the lamb would be welcomed by the teacher as about the best "book" to be found, and Mary would be heartily approved for her co-operative contribution. So also is the boy or girl who brings to school a pocketful of garter snakes a can of tadpoles, a turtle, frog, toad, rabbit, pigeon, crow or any other walking, hopping or creeping creature. Hundreds of young children in various parts of the United States and Canada have been gathering cocoons from which they will see beautiful moths or butterflies burst forth presently.

Canaries, Top

In ever so many public and parochial schools I have seen canaries which the children care for. As I entered a certain third grade room a number of canaries were singing happily and the children were all at their work. I considered them much better to study than swing music on the radio. I actually saw a high school group of several hundred students in a study hall presumably studying to swing music, and I have heard high school students say that many study at home with the radio turned on. I doubt their wisdom, but then—

About a year ago a little bull dog was the first to greet me as I entered a rural school in New Jersey. The children paid no special attention to the matter. The teacher informed me that the children, since they have had the dog at school, have grown far more kind to dumb animals, and that even some of the farmers in that community had quit beating their horses and mules.

Unusual Experiment

She also told me that she discovered most of the children had been having only bread and coffee for breakfast and were eating much candy at school between meals. Two white rats had helped solve this problem. Of the same age, one was sleek, active and playful; the other, only half as large, was ruffled, lazy and glum. The children had brought up the sleek one on a proper diet of grain, milk, fruit and vegetables; the other on white bread, coffee and candy.

A few months ago I was a guest at the home of a school principal on the Pacific coast. In came his eleven-year-old lad with many small sea creatures he had gathered from the ocean beach for his school work next day. His younger brother and the rest of us had great fun examining these creatures as the young "teacher" explained.

Dear Rabbit—

Once in a Cleveland school—it might also have been in Boston, Los Angeles or Fort Worth — I saw second grade children writing letters to the white rabbit that hopped leisurely about the room, the patient teacher helping each child to spell the hard words. Then they read these letters; it was their reading and spelling lesson.

Commendably, many young children at school today see a hen sitting on eggs and the chicks bursting through the shells. And white rats and rabbits breed at school. How careful and protective the child learns to be of the expectant pet mother!

U. S. Government Officials Discuss Situation in Event of War

Washington, Apr. 13 (AP)—High government officials met today to discuss means of keeping United States business "going as usual" in the event of a European war.

They said they did not, necessarily, expect war but felt it their duty to be prepared.

Those attending the meeting included Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Agriculture Secretary Henry Wallace, Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, President George Harrison of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, Securities Commissioner Jerome Frank, and Herbert Feis, Economic Adviser of the State Department.

It was learned that the group agreed that every effort should be made to keep American security, commodity, exchange and other markets open, regardless of European events.

It was learned the conferees reviewed their powers to stabilize conditions and help American business withstand the economic shock of a European crisis.

Presumably, they also discussed means of preventing sudden liquidation of the estimated $8,000,000,000 invested in the United States by foreigners, in case foreign governments should sequester these holdings from their citizens in order to obtain money to buy supplies.

BRITAIN WATCHFUL AS WAR CLOUDS GATHER OVER MEDITERRANEAN

Almost any one of the spots indicated on this map of Europe and North Africa may prove to be the necessary spark for the conflagration expected to ignite Europe into war. In the present crisis, England is closely watching the moves of Mussolini in the Mediterranean. Il Duce has aspirations to turn the Mediterranean into an Italian lake, but Britain is ready to combat these aspirations in order to protect the lifeline of the British Empire. Cannon shown on the map indicate the bases Britain has set up to defend her empire route. Also shown are the military, air and naval bases of France and Italy, situated at strategic points on the map.

Roy Conacher's Two Goals Sufficient to Defeat Leafs In Fourth Stanley Cup Game

Bruins Need Only One Game to Win World Honors

PLAY ON SUNDAY

Leafs Appeared Tired and Could Not Penetrate Sound Defence

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—Only the memory of previous series, plus a knowledge of what the breaks can do in hockey, seemed to confront Boston Bruins today as they headed home in eager anticipation of their first Stanley Cup triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Bruins, bearing all the marks of world champions, whipped the Leafs 2-0 last night on two pretty goals by Roy Conacher, a Toronto boy who came home to spoil the cup hopes of more than 14,000 attending fans. The National League champions have won three of the first four games and need only the fifth one at Boston Sunday to take the best-of-seven round.

On their side, the Leafs have the thought that they have met Boston in the playoffs four times in other years and have won every time. They know, too, that New York Rangers won three straight games from the Bruins in sem-finals this year before yielding the round.

Hopes Are Few

Added comfort can be found for the bruised and tired Leafs in the fact the Bruins have won the last two contests by getting a break and holding their lead. There remains the possibility Toronto might get early breaks in the next two games and backcheck hard enough to tie the round.

But beyond those, the rays of hope for the Leafs are few. Two of their forward lines are shaken and nearly spent, and the Bruins showed again last night how they can bottle up the high-powered line of Syl Apps, Gordon Drillon and Bob Davidson.

Manager Conny Smythe gave the tip-off on what he considers the odds are when he talked about next season. After paying tribute to Murph Chamberlain's fighting qualities, he spoke of Gus Marker, who came to the Leafs last fall from the defunct Montreal Maroons.

"Marker has given us wonderful service in this series," Smythe said. "He has earned his next year's contract."

Conacher, the youngest brother of three who have walked along hockey's high spots, zoomed in on a power play with only two minutes of last night's game gone. He lashed Mel Hill's pass into the rigging between goalie Turk Broda's legs and the Bruins were ahead to stay.

Kampman in Box

Bingo Kampman of Toronto was serving a penalty at the time for playing the puck after dropping his stick. That was the break of the game.

Again the Bruins checked and checked. Eddie Shore, hitting hard in the body contacts and stopping a host of shots with his stick and legs, was the bulwark of the defensive set-up. Gaining his first shutout of the playoffs, Frankie Brimsek had few really dangerous shots to block.

A penalty to Red Heron of the Leafs actually gave them their greatest opportunity in the second period. The Bruins turned on a power play and Bob Davidson broke away. He had trouble controlling the puck as he skated down on Brimsek and the goalie took the shot with a quick leg-stab.

Shore on Job

A penalty to Ray Getliffe of the Bruins a few minutes later brought a Toronto power play and a rapid succession of Apps-Drillon passes in the goal-mouth. Shore was always there, sliding across the ice or pinning the puck-carrier against the boards.

From that point on, the Bruins had just as many shots on goal as the frantic Leafs. They broke away from the Toronto attack frequently and made Broda hurry to save.

Nick Metz, checked by Hill at the Toronto blue-line, was trying to get the puck to Pep Kelly when Hill got a piece of it. The rubber got just a few feet on its course and Conacher dashed in, picked it up in stride and finding a corner behind Broda with seven minutes to play. There wasn't enough power in the Leafs to break down the Bruins then.

90 Scribes Pick Team to Win Pennant With Boston Second

New York, April 14 (AP)— If you're looking for a "sure thing" the major league baseball writers give you New York Yankees to win the American League pennant.

Of 90 scribes voting in the 13th annual Associated Press poll 78 picked the world champions to finish first for the fourth consecutive time and the other 12 saw them in second. The writers showed almost as much unanimity naming Boston Red Sox as the next best team in the league. They foresaw them nudging out the Yanks and 66 figured they would sew up second. ured they would sew up second.

DAZZLING FIGURE IS BILLY TAYLOR OF OSHAWA TEAM

Hockey Experts Amazed at Ability of This 19-Year-Old Boy

GOES TO LEAFS

Will Enter Pro Company Next Winter Fith Lots of Publicity

(By Elmer Dulmage Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—In all its 21-year history, or since the 1919 night when a young fellow named Dunc Munro plunged into the hockey picture, the classic Memorial Cup series probably has never had such a dazzling figure as Billy Taylor presents in the current bout.

Billy the Kid, 19 years old and marked for delivery to Toronto Maple Leafs, has the Edmonton Roamers and the paying clientele by the ears. The Roamers can't stop him and the fans can't get over him.

He's so amazingly good that Eddie Shore, Bill Cowley, Art Ross, Conny Smythe, Dick Irvin, Lester and the likes of these Stanley Cup characters, refuse to believe what they see. Billy has the National League nobility rubbing its eyes.

Just a Wizard

One N.H.L. star watched Billy and his Oshawa Generals beat the Roamers 9-3 and 12-4 this week, with Taylor scoring five goals in the first game and four in the second. He said: "There ain't no such animal."

Barring a tremendous upset, the Generals will be Canadian junior champions Saturday night after the third game of the best-of-five series. The Roamers have little hope that they can run down Billy the Kid.

There never has been his like in intersectional junior series and his two-game scoring record is second only to that of Murray Murdoch. In the 1923 series between University of Manitoba and Kitchener Greenshirts, Murdoch scored 10 goals as the Manitobans won a total goals round 14-6.

Has 14 Points

Taylor has scored nine goals and five assists in two games, taking part in all but seven of his team's scoring sallies. A dozen times he barely missed scoring. He has shot the Edmonton defence so full of holes it looks like a Swiss cheese.

Over the years since 1921 the Memorial Cup finals had such heroes as these: Dunc Munro of University of Toronto schools in 1919, Roy Worters and Lionel Conacher of Toronto Canoe Club in 1920, Butch Keeling and Cooney Welland of Owen Sound Greys in 1924, Mush March of Regina Monarchs in 1928, Harvey Jackson and Charlie Conacher of Toronto Marlboros in 1929, Bill MacKenzie of Winnipeg Elmwood Millionaires in 1931.

Many Became Stars

These young men all became N.H.L. stars so did one Howie Morenz of the 1921 series, Johnny Gottselig and Ken Doraty of the class of '25, Paul Thompson of 1926, Toe Blake of 1932, Pep Kelly, Nick Metz and Art Jackson of 1934.

A year ago the series between Oshawa and St. Boniface Seals brought out two great juniors — Walter Stanowski of the Seals and Taylor. Led by the hurtling Stanowski, who probably will make his N.H.L. debut next season with Toronto, St. Boniface won. Taylor led all series scorers.

This time there is no Stanowski— just Billy Taylor, the best junior of them all.

War Veteran Leads Horse in Race By 23 1-2 Miles

Edmonton, April 13—(CP)—R. Bower, 45-year-old veteran who wants to prove again that a man can beat a horse in an endurance test, stubbed his toe at 6 p.m. Wednesday and quit while leading his opponent, My Prince, by 23½ miles in their six-day race at Edmonton fairgrounds.

Bower, who had planned to run until 8 p.m., left the track after completing 66 laps on the half-mile track during the second day's running. The horse was taken from the track at 5 p.m. after having travelled around the oval 50 times since both runners began running at 10 a.m.

Tuesday Bower went around the track 95 times against the horse's 64 to gain a lead of 15½ miles. Bower's eight-mile gain Wednesday brought his lead to 23½ miles.

Mrs. E. O. Greening, owner of the horse, said she planned to keep the animal in reserve during the first days of the race.

GEHRIG ON FIRST FOR THE YANKEES ON OPENING DAY

Old 'Iron Horse' Has Slowed up Plenty Say Experts

BROODS A LOT

Lou is Not Hitting but McCarthy Will Keep Him in There

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, April 14 (AP)— The question most frequently asked of a correspondent just returned from the baseball training camps is "how does Lou Gehrig look?"

A few want to know if Cincinnati Reds really have the stuff to win the National League which the invariable answer is yes, providing their pitching lives up to promise. But more of the fans ask after the old "iron horse" and with mixed feelings.

New York Yankees supporters inquire hopefully, because many a one of them never saw the three-time champions play with anyone except Lou on first base and because they honestly dread the day when he must step down for a younger man.

The others—those who never have liked the Yanks much, anyway and would like to see their stranglehold on baseball broken—ask because they see in Lou's eventual retirement the beginning of the end for the Bombers. They probably are mistaken about this, for Gehrig's departure shouldn't make much difference to the Yankees one way or another.

To both camps the answer is that Gehrig, approaching 36, has slowed up plenty. He has been brooding for a month over his inability to hit as of yore. But for all that he will be on first base when the Yankees open the season next week and will remain there unless Manager Joe McCarthy absolutely has to take him out.

McCarthy, though he would deny it instantly, is a sentimental Irishman. He will be a sad man the day he doesn't write Gehrig's name on the slip he hands to the head umpire.

Nothing but an injury to Gehrig or a collapse of the Yankees such as is difficult to imagine, will get Lou out of the line-up this year. McCarthy will keep him in there as long as the club is in the race.

DUKE, DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER TO ATTEND GAME

150,000 Expected to View International Match on Saturday

SCOTS FAVORED

Weakened Lineups Will be Started in English Games

Glasgow, April 14 (CP Cable)—The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester and a crowd of 150,000 spectators are expected to attend the annual international soccer contest between England and Scotland at Hampden Park Saturday. If the weather is fine officials believe the all-time record of 149,547 set in 1937, will be broken.

In view of the battle no major league Scottish matches are carded and only 10 second division squads will be in action. South of the border, however, the 86 English clubs will adhere to their regular week-end schedule.

Victory for Scotland carries with it the International championship but if the visiting team is successful, England, Scotland and Wales will finish in a three-way tie with four points each. Ireland, fourth participant in the quadrangular series, met defeat in its three matches.

Scotland's selectors have chosen a strong team. The eleven has balance and skill and there is speed and executive ability in attack. The English defenders will need great resource and determination in order to keep their lines clear. England's team has won general approval, particularly the re-introduction of Goulden, West Ham's scheming inside forward.

Replace One Man

Beasley, Huddersfield Town left winger, will replace Brook, Manchester City veteran, on the English forward line. Brook suffered a groin injury in the match against Bury Easter Monday.

In 14 matches played by the two countries at Hampden Park, England has been successful only once —in 1927. Ten victories have been recorded for the Scots, the remaining games ending in Stalemates.

Seventeen of the 22 players chosen for the International tilt are from English clubs and weakened teams will lineup in many games in England. A long list of injuries during the three-game Easter series will also prove a real handicap.

Needing only three points to clinch the championship, Everton is host to Preston North End Saturday. The Lancashire clubs will both field at least two reserves but the league leader is expected to pull out on top. Chelsea, Leicester City and Birmingham, fighting to avoid relegation, face strenuous away games.

With Blackburn Rovers almost certain of promotion from the second division, chief interest lies in the Chesterfield-Luton Town fixture on the former's ground. If the visitors make a slip Sheffield Wednesday is likely to go into undisputed possession of second place at the expense of the low-placed Southampton eleven.

When the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association recently announced they intended to contract amateur players for the protection of the amateur clubs that might have developed the material in the rough. Just how the C.A.H.A. intend to make the idea practical may ultimately lead to complications, but on the surface the suggestion seems to be a fair and practical one. It simply means the amateurs developing hockey talent for the professional ranks in the future will have some protection and may receive financial return for their efforts. Perhaps the only drawback, that may lead to arguments, will follow in cases where a junior player has played for more than one junior club before being approached by the moneyed puck interests. In such cases the financial remuneration to the amateur clubs might have to be determined by the C.A.H.A. in the long run. However, the Dominion hockey moguls have at last made a move in the proper direction towards the protection of the smaller amateur clubs, many of whom have been raided by the pros with no chance of remuneration for their efforts.

When the Peterboro seniors of the old C.O.B.L. were afforded a grouping with the senior clubs from the T.A.B.A. recently, the Oshawa senior ballsters were not present to be included in the set-up. It is reliably stated that the General Motors are no longer interested in the sponsoring of senior baseball in the Motor City but we have it on good authority the Motors will turn their baseball equipment over to other interested parties and Oshawa may yet be accepted into the C.O.B.L.-T.A.B.A. axis. In commenting on the question the Peterboro scribe recently made reference to Belleville's baseball situation and still holds fond hopes of the revival of the old Central League in the near future. Fortunately he must have either a stronger baseball telescope than we have looked through, or his crystal ball is playing him tricks. Until the baseball clubs discontinue importations and gets down to the basic business of developing their own talent through the channels of minor league baseball in our towns and cities.

No wonder they have so many star basketball players in the ranks of the Peterboro girls' teams. At the conclusion of the L.O.B.A. season, when the Belleville "Y" lassies eliminated the Liftlock City feminine hoopsters, junior and senior girls' city cage loops were organized with three senior and four junior quintettes functioning. For the past two years two intermediate teams have come out of Peterboro in the L.O.B.A., but we would not be at all surprised if the Quaker Oats lassies are in the picture for 1940 provincial cage competition, the Quaker Oats Company having a senior and two junior teams now in the city series. Wonder why something along the same lines couldn't be established in Belleville?

Carl Hubbell, veteran of the New York Giants' staff, voiced what seemed to be the general opinion of most hurlers, when, commenting on the new rule on pitching, he declared: "That law was just like legalizing beer. Your fastball pitchers invariably took their back foot off the rubber anyway in order to get stuff on the ball. The new code won't change things much."

During last Tuesday Kiwanis Club banquet, at which the Belleville "Hi-Speeds" were presented with windbreakers, President Bill Cook, of the team, made a statement which in itself will substantiate our contentions pertaining to minor league operations. President Cook informed the Kiwanis that every member of Belleville's good junior team this year had come up through the ranks of the Belleville Ki-Y groups. These minor leagues pay great dividends if given the proper attention. One of the reasons softball is booming in Belleville is because of the sponsorship of the game through the channels of the Ki-Y leagues every summer. If the same provisions were made for baseball it would not have been necessary to disband the C.O.B.L. once the flower and pride and joy of all diamond game lovers east of Toronto. Down in Kingston last year the Limestone City moguls awakened to the fact baseball had to be brought up the hard way—through the minors, with the result a four teamed junior city league flourished and today is paying large dividends to the Kingston intermediates.

It begins to look as though the old Toronto Stanley Cup jinx over the Boston Bruins has worn out and is on his way to the discard alley. The Bruins went out and snatched an early goal last night and then laid down an invincible defence to ultimately win 2-0, Roy Conacher getting both goals. The series now stands three games to one for the Bruins and should end Sunday night in Boston. Last night's defeat must have been a bitter dose for Conn Smythe to swallow, Roy Conacher, a Toronto boy who Smythe paid no attention to, whipped home the only counters in a game that should prove the deciding one at this point.

Did you know that Tommy Farr is back in circulation, he soundly trounced Red Burman in London last night...."Hammering Hank" Armstrong watched Farr win prior to his coming fight with Ernie Roderick....Edmonton hockey fans want their pets home for at least one Memorial Cup game; nobody should object to that, especially not the Oshawa crowd, who have been clammering for a jaunt across the open plains......Tonight sees the opening of the 1939 Allan Cup playdowns at Montreal between Port Arthur and the Royals and we'll string along with the "pea-soupers." Should have some milder weather over the week end, because the major leagues open Monday.

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, April 15

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE astral influences ruling the affairs of this day point to much activity and progress, with matters moving in the direction of cherished objectives. It is a time for working toward these goals with tact, shrewdness and precaution. Ambition and personal gratifications seem slated for happy culminations.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which ambitions will be fulfilled and progress made toward high goals in both business and social life. All should expand and grow under splendid auspices, although there may be peculiar situations of a subtle phase calling for astuteness and caution. In personal relations there may be pleasure and gratification, with much festivity.

A child born on this day may have high personal aspirations as well as sound business or financial aims. It may be generous, friendly and sociable.

BASEBALL BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

Dayton, O.: Tommy Bridges, Detroit Tigers curve ball artist, attibutes his improved pitching to the return of the raised-seam baseball. Bridges is the only Tiger hurler who has won three exhibition games and he has been defeated just once.

Boston: Casey Stengel brought his Bees back to Boston today much pleased at their physical condition but mystified at the unsatisfactory exhibition record of eight victories in 21 games. Practice sessions were scheduled today and Monday with a meeting with the Red Sox Sunday.

Evansville, Ind.: Pie Traynor asserted today his Pittsburgh Buccaneers are ready for their opener at Cincinnati Monday even with two regulars in sick bed. Lee Handley is in a New Orleans hospital after having been "beaned" by a pitched ball while Johnny Rizzo has a blistered hand.

Richmond, Va.: Second baseman Sammy Hale, who went to Memphis a couple of days ago to consult a specialist about his ailing throwing arm was back with the Cleveland Indians today bearing a doctor's verdict the arm needed rest. Rookie Jim Shilling is likely to be at the keystone sack in the opening game.

POLICE COURT

Walter Asselstine, 24 of Belleville, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., on a charge of breaking, entering and theft. The case was remanded until Monday at the request of Chief Kidd.

Asselstine was apprehended by local police yesterday in connection with the entering of Carl Patterson's service station, West Dundas Street, recently during which a sum of money, gasoline and cigarettes were stolen. Two others were previously held on similar charges and are alleged by police to have been accomplices of the accused.

Norman P. Ferguson, Oshawa, appeared on a charge of perjury, arising out of the evidence submitted by the accused during a trial held before Judge Madden in this city some time ago. The defendant requested an enlargement until May 5th which was granted despite the fact Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., was not in accord with the request.

During the session of police court Chief Biddle of Picton approached the bench on business. Later it was learned that Chief Biddle was escorting Glendon Farrington, Picton, to the Portsmouth Penitentiary. Farrington received a three year term in that institution on a charge of jail breaking recently at Picton.

NO SIGN OF SUCKER AND PIKE RUN YET

Part time fishermen of the city patrolling the walls and banks of the Moira during the past few days have yet to report the first of the annual run of pike and suckers in the river. The fish are later this season by an estimated two or three weeks, it was reported by one local man. This morning the ice field which has been a short distance south of the car bridge for the past few days had undergone another shift, and is now well out in the upper bay.

Maj. W. E. Van Steenburgh Appointed In Charge of Harrow Labratory

Will Live at Kingsville a Short Distance from New Entomological Lab.

LEAVES MONDAY

Major W. E. Van Steenburgh, popular commanding officer of the 34th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, and assistant-in-charge of the Belleville branch of the Dominion Entomological Laboratories, leaves for Harrow, Ontario, on Monday where he will assume charge of the new Entomological Laboratory erected in the Essex County town. Major and Mrs. Van Steenburgh, however, will take up residence in Kingsville, Ont., a short distance from the locale of the new laboratory.

Arriving here in 1929 Major Van Steenburgh has been connected with the Department of Agriculture's Entomological Laboratory since its erection here.

Joining the 34th Battery R.C.A. as a second lieutenant, a natural aptitude for things military soon won him promotion, and within a comparatively short time he was promoted to captain, later attaining his majority and the command of the battery.

Naturally relinquishing his command of that unit, Major Van Steenburgh will be succeeded by Major J. W. McLeod, also a member of the staff of the Entomological Laboratory, who will assume command on July 1st.

Lab. Staff Presentation

Appreciation of years of happy associations was shown Major Van Steenburgh at the laboratory offices this morning when members of the staff presented him with a handsome "Dunhill" pipe and leather tobacco pouch.

The presentation was made by Mr. A. B. Baird, Entomologist in charge, who on behalf of the staff expressed their regret at the departure of an efficient colleague and their congratulations on well-deserved promotion.

Major Van Steenburgh, taken by surprise made suitable reply voicing his appreciation of the gifts, and of the splendid co-operation that has been a feature of his associations with the staff.

'Children of the Chapel' Canadian Premiere Sung in Belleville

An unusual presentation which bids fair to be of very great interest is in preparation for Belleville when an opera "The Children of the Chapel," will be performed in the third week in April. This opera, which is by Sir Sidney Nicholson of the School of English Church Music, England, portrays the restoration of the Chapel Royal Choir at the Court of Charles II in 1660 A.D. All the characters are historic people and among the choir boys depicted are such musical giants as Pelham Humphrey, William Turner, Michael Wise and a lad named Henry Purcell. All these were actually members as boys in the restored Chapel Royal Choir. The opera contains some original melodies by the characters presented, and for the rest is composed in the period style by Sir Sidney whose genius has seldom been equalled and much less excelled. Thirteen boys and two men will sustain the choral load—all from Christ Church Choir and a string orchestra and piano will supply the accompaniment. Appropriate scenery will be used and full costumes of the period simulated. Make a note of this unusual offering which is being produced for the first time in Canada at the Belleville Collegiate. The Musical Director is Mr. George Maybee and the Stage Direction is by D. C. Mackenzie Hume. Accompanist, Alec Gordon.

$6,053,038 Estate Is Left by Sir Joseph Flavelle

Toronto, Apr. 14 (CP)—The will of Sir Joseph Flavelle, noted Canadian banker who died recently, disposes of an estate estimated to value $6,053,038, it was disclosed when the will was filed for probate.

A trust fund of $1,100,000 and one-half of the residue were set aside for Sir Joseph's three children, Sir Ellsworth Flavelle, Mrs. Mina Barrett and Mrs. Clara McEachren.

A $900,000 trust fund was set aside for Sir Joseph's grand children and a $150,000 trust fund for Lady Flavelle, the widow. The Flavelle residence in Queen's Park, Toronto, was given to the University of Toronto.

Other gifts included $40,000 to Sherbourne Street United Church, Toronto and $32,000 to the maintenance and extension fund of the United Church of Canada.

A fund of $25,000 was set aside, the income to be used by Victoria College for the college library. University of Toronto will have the income from a $50,000 fund for graduate fellowships.

Toronto General Hospital will have the income from $25,000 for its training school for nurses.

The will instructs that a foundation be established to administer the balance of the estate.

MAYORS' CONVENTION LARGELY ATTENDED

"It was the largest attended, and we hope the most successful meeting yet held," commented Mayor Jamieson Bone back in his office this morning after attending the three-day convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities held in Ottawa this week.

On Wednesday evening Mayor Bone spoke over an Ottawa radio station on current events of Canadian interest, and though his address was heard by but few in the Belleville district, he was the recipient of many good-will telephoned and written comments from Ottawa district listeners following the broadcast.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

Dr. G. E. Eakins, of Port Arthur, has been elected president of the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons.

HARRIED STATESMAN

One of the most harried statesmen in troubled Europe is Rumanian Foreign Minister Gregore Gafencu, one of the leading proponents of Balkan resistance to Nazi expansion. Gafencu is reported to have completed negotiations with Turkey for the use of the Dardanelles in transporting material to Rumania in case of war.

UNCERTAIN SIGNS

Weather and weather notes continue to the fore across Canada, and at this time of the year particularly the differences natural in view of the great geographical extent of this Dominion are emphasized. Along such line is the observation of the Ottawa Journal that: "In Edmonton boys are playing marbles. In Ottawa they are still playing with snow-shovels."

However, the point arises as to whether or not the activities quoted by the Ottawa newspaper can be considered without fear of contradiction as certain evidence of either Spring or Winter weather. New Brunswick can afford many examples of where the weather does not agree with what the calendar would indicate, or where activities that might be classed as "unseasonal" can be carried out.

Marbles, of course, are often regarded as a sign of Spring. But it is not necessary to look any farther afield than this city to recall the sight in the preceding month of children playing this popular game on snow-covered streets. In this part of the Dominion at least marbles and snow-shovels can be coincident in time as well as space. —Fredericton Gleaner.

MAN HELD FOR TORONTO POLICE

Apprehended asleep in an automobile which is said to have been stolen at Toronto some time ago, a man who gave his name as Samuel Merko, Toronto, was taken into custody by Provincial Constable D. Carruthers east of Belleville, late yesterday. A parked automobile on Herchimer Ave., aroused the suspicions of residents of that neighbourhood after the vehicle had been parked for some time. Provincial Police were notified with the result Merko was found asleep in the rear seat.

Subsequent investigations by Provincial Police revealed the vehicle a 1936 Ford coach, to have been stolen at Toronto some time ago. The vehicle was bearing 1939 Ontario licence plates number 4-N-155 which are said by the O.P.P. to have been issued for another car. Also found in the rear of the motor car were two vaccum cleaners, said by the authorities to be the property of an Oshawa retail dealer. Merko was held for Toronto police on a warrant issued from that city.

ARMS USELESS ON A WET DAY

Rheumatic Pains Relieved by Kruschen

Here is a noteworthy instance of the manner in which damp weather can affect the joints of one who is subject to rheumatic pains.

"I had been suffering from rheumatism very badly," a man writes, "and had such pains in my joints that I could hardly bear it, on a wet day especially. It pained me terribly to use my arms, and I was hardly able to work. I tried two different remedies, but I was still as bad after the treatment.

"Then I was told to try Kruschen Salts, which quickly brought relief. So of course I have kept on with it, and I am now much better and have never felt so fit for years. I used to feel so miserable and sluggish, but now it is a pleasure to be able to work."—S.B.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are often caused by uric acid crystals in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating the internal organs to healthy, regular activity, and help them to eliminate excess uric acid.

paucity of signs of active collaboration with Russia."

"Only in answer to interruptions in the Commons did Russia feature in the Prime Minister's speech at all." The newspaper continued. "Without Russia, and without cross-agreements between constituent members of the peace front, the present arrangements cannot provide real collective security.

"All that we have at present is a series of bilateral agreements, and only in the cases of Poland and France does the agreement provide for aid to Britain."

The Financial News (Independent), taking the same tack, warned the Prime Minister that only active and full collaboration by Russia could make his guarantee a potent force for world peace.

'Staff talks with Russia and guaranteed states are surely inherent in the whole scheme," the financial organ said. "Without that cement, the peace front cannot be expected to hold together.

"Steps must be taken, however, to absolve these countries from the need to enter Germany's economic orbit; very much more rapid action must be taken that our dilatory trade approaches to Rumania."

The Daily Herald (Labor) urged a seven-power conference, including Russia, to stop the expansionist aim of the aggressor nations.

"The emergency measures are completed," The Herald said. "They should be followed at once by a conference of nations concerned in them and Russia—A seven-power conference of Britain, France, Russia, Poland, Greece, Rumania and Turkey.

"For only by such a conference held immediately can the work of creating a real defensive front against aggression be carried on and true collaboration among peaceable powers secured."

The Daily Mail (Independent) made the international situation the basis of a new plea for national conscription, declaring:

"Half-measures in raising an army are a poor advertisement for British resolution, an unconvincing way of showing our ability to fulfill our new commitments. But the only real, democratic way of raising a truly national army is by conscription."

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative):

"The greater firmness and vigor the ministers show, the more they can be sure of the unqualified support of all parties. The attitude of the cabinet is founded today on no illusion, but on cool calculation. While hoping and striving to avert the worst that may befall, they are reckoning with it. Private citizens should base his conduct, however he bases his hopes, upon a more comfortable view."

The Daily Express (Ind.):

"If the majority of the people desire and require commitments such as those to Rumania and Greece, then they must be undertaken. That is the principle of the democratic system. It is plain that the British public favors the course which Mr. Chamberlain is following. It is now for democracy, which has assumed those heavy responsibilities, to assure itself of the power to discharge them."

Cold and Snow Give Winter Look To Northern States

No Balmy Weather Yet Reported in Sight

Chicago, Apr. 13 (AP)—Snow and freezing weather gave a midwinter aspect to a large section of the United States today.

The Weather Bureau reported the worst of the cold snap was over but that no real balmy weather was in sight.

Extensive damage to budding fruit and some grain crops was reported in agricultural areas.

Smudge fires burned through the night in the Vincennes, Ind., fruit belt. Fruit farmers said the apricot, plum and pear crops in one county were almost a total loss.

Northwest Arkansas fruit growers feared apples, grapes and berries already in bloom had been injured by the unseasonably low temperatures. Big lettuce and onion crops on Long Island, New York, similarly were threatened.

More than a score of states shivered in freezing temperatures. Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas, with readings near zero, were the coldest spots. Snow fell in several states, notably Ohio, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Vermont and upstate New York.

Brief blizzards swept Pennsylvania. Winstead, Conn., reported a three inch snow fall. There were slight snow flurries in New York City last night.

BANDIT SLAPS STORE KEEPER

Toronto, Apr. 13 (CP)—Two armed men held up and robbed a west-end groceteria and escaped with $31 late last night. The men forced the store manager, Garfield Dottrell, behind a counter, slapped him when he attempted to "stall" for time and fled after taking the contents of the till. The gunmen were believed to be men who had a short time earlier robbed another groceteria in the district of about $50. Store manager S. A. Handsomb and Clerk Jack Vickers were ordered to the rear of the store while the gunmen scooped up the contents of the till.

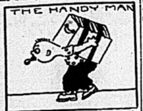
Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, Well Willyum the housecleaning is all over. I'm a wreck but I must say I'm a happy wreck, she said.

I dont like to brag, but I'm even more relieved than you, pop said. If there's one smell that I'm allurgic to it's that nice clean smell, that haunting blend of ammonia, soap and furniture polish, I think we've got a right to celebrate, I think we ought to go out and hit the high spots and throw care to the winds, he said.



Why Willyum how wonderful, do you mean a movie? ma said, and pop said, That's only a fraction of what I mean, I think we ought to take in one of the downtown movies and then repair for a snack and a gurgle amidst music and mirth in the Perrokay Room at the Stitz, or anything elts you want to suggest if you happen to have a better idea.

Well I do, just as it happens, Willyum, ma said. The one lonely thorn in my bed of roses is that old delabitated trunk up in the storeroom, it's just an empty eyesore in my otherwise nice clean house with every other bit of rubmidge gone, so Willyum if you carry it down for me and put it in the back street it will seem like a real celebration, and I really am tired so maybe I'd get more enjoyment out of your idea tomorrow night, she said, and pop said, What say, I'm afraid I haven't been listening. What movie did you say, The Old Trunk Mystery? Why yes, that sounds all right, where is it? he said.

O, all right, I'll get Mr. Seevers the handy ma nto take it down for me, I'll put my hat on and maybe change this dress, I mean are you really serious about the Perrokay Room, Willyum?

Wich pop claimed he was so she changed it.

Everyone to His Taste

By MARY C. BILLINGS

Sarah was very sure that the order was important and the customer rich and influential, just from the stationery. Thick, gray, scented with heavy perfume and post-marked Milan, the letter read: "I expect to sail Wednesday next. Please attend to planting my flower beds and boxes at Westlawn, as you did the last two years. My housekeeper and houseman are there now. Mrs. Van Gillett."

Sitting in the hall outside Uncle Bly's door, Sarah read the letter again, while the ten dollar a day nurse was taking her uncle's temperature and trying to quell one of his nervous tantrums. Uncle Bly had never been sick before in his sixty years of life, and it was hard for him to lie in bed at the busiest season of his florist and greenhouse business. It was worse because there was no one to run things for him but Sarah Fairchild, who had been a stenographer for a Boston firm for years.

"I hardly know a tomato plant from a Boston fern," Sarah had said to herself the week before, when news had come of his illness, "but I'm his only relative and I'll go down and stick around, anyway, so no one will carry off the hotbeds."

Now she would have liked his advice about filling the Westlawn order, but she was very sure that her questions would make him more nervous than ever. The very fact of her inexperience seemed to infuriate him, and he was certainly a master of denunciation when he got started.

The sensible thing to do was to go out to Westlawn and see the flower gardens which she was supposed to fill with plants. It was noon when she got off the trolley and went up to the enormous pile of red brick which the conductor had told her was the Van Gillett place.

The housekeeper was drinking tea and eating smoked herrings in the great tiled kitchen, where her long, pale face was reflected in rows of glowing copper kettles on the wall. The houseman was away, she explained.

Sarah was disappointed. She had counted upon getting helpful information about the gardens from the houseman. Never, she felt, could she ask advice from the housekeeper. Instead, she said, brightly, "Now if I might see the window boxes, please."

The housekeeper led the way through a hall to a boudoir. She opened casement windows there and in a long drawing room. Sandal-wood boxes and cut glass perfume flasks were on an inlaid table in the boudoir.

"I'll just look at the flower beds as I go out," Sarah announced, "and thank you for your trouble. Mine's just begun," she added to herself.

Back at Uncle Bly's she hunted up seed catalogues for descriptions. Fragrance, she decided, was the only requisite, for evidently Mrs. Van Gillett was fond of heavy odors.

She was not long making up her mind. "Here goes," she cried. "Angels' trumpets for the big beds, heliotrope around the borders, mignonette for the window boxes, flowering tobacco in a big bank by the garage. All these plants are in Uncle Bly's garden and labeled. By tomorrow night they will be at Westlawn, if I can hire a boy and a car to help me. I don't know how many I'll need so I'll take all there are."

The hot days of August were almost over before Uncle Bly was able to come out of the little office and talk business.

"You've run things better than I thought you could," he grudgingly praised Sarah. "Hope you haven't lost me all my best customers. Filled the Westlawn order, did you?"

Sarah nodded. 'Angels' trumpets, heliotrope, mignonette—" she began.

Uncle Bly groaned. "Purple and white and a red brick house. What a selection! Don't tell me it was red mignonette," he begged.

"I don't know about that," said Sarah. "The labels didn't say. But here is the letter she sent when she paid the bill. It just came yesterday."

She took a square gray sheet from the desk and put it on Uncle Bly's thin knee. A heavy perfume filled the office as he took up the letter and read aloud:

"I am sending a check for $180 in payment for plants. My garden has been wonderful this summer, much nicer than in previous years. Tonight it smells like heaven itself. I shall want plants next year for my place at Bar Harbor, as well as for Westlawn."

Uncle Bly grinned. "Her last year's bill was fifty dollars," he said. "Guess I'll have to offer you a job as salesman, Sarah."

"I would consider a partnership, Uncle," Sarah admitted. "This business is making more mon[illegible] every day."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 14—(CP)—Toronto market turned quiet in early afternoon today after a morning opening rally.

Weakness in London put a damper on action here. Senior golds held up while the big base metals, Nickels, Noranda and Smelters settled back to show losses of 1 to 1 1-2 points. Most of the secondary and junior golds posted moderate losses. In the western oil group declines of a few cents appeared for Home and Calgary-Edmonton. Royalite dropped a fraction.

Lower prices predominated in all industrial groups. Losses up to 2 points were showing in the steels.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, April 14—(AP)— The rallying urge faded from the stock market today and leaders fell one to three points at the worst.

Selling was exceptionally light from the start, however, and quotations, near the final hour, were above the forenoon lows. Transfers were about 700,000 shares.

County Sets 25c Per Hour Rate for Work on Roads

County workmen employed on the Hastings County Road system during the coming season will be paid wages at the rate of twenty-five cents per hour, an increase of five cents over the schedule rate of last year, members of the Roads and Bridges Committee in session at Shire Hall decided yesterday. The increase will take place immediately.

Cost of snow-removal for the season just past was double that of last year, and the highest it has been for some time, Road Superintendent W. H. Langlois told the committee. In view of the fact that nothing definite has been done about approval of the roads and bridges appropriation as yet nothing was arrived at in this respect.

DAUGHTER PROTESTS FATHER'S WILL

Peterborough, Ont., April 14 —(CP)—Mr. Justice Makins today reserved judgment in action by Mrs. Fred Seymour to set aside the last will of her father, Lorenzo F. Humber, who died July 2, 1938, leaving her one dollar of his estate valued at approximately $10,000.

This will was made on June 10 distributing his property, five houses and a cottage, and contents of his home, between his sister-in-law, Mrs. Emma Humber, and the wife of a tenant, Robert Snelgrove, and their son Dion Snelgrove. A prior will made by Mr. Humber in March left his entire estate to his only child, Mrs. Seymour.

In his last will, the father asserted that his daughter had said to and about him which a daughter should not say about her father, that she had not visited her mother during her illness and had not visited him.

Butter Price Eases On Toronto Market

Toronto, April 14—Another downward revision was made in butter prices to the wholesale trade during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Eggs remained steady.

Lack of demand coupled with some increase in fresh receipts caused the butter market to drift lower. Buyers paid scant attention to offering of the first grade Ontario product at 21 3-4c and business was meagre at the 21 1-2c level with the result that sales were barely sufficient to establish a definite market. While holders were still asking 21 3-4c in afternoon trading, the market for Ontario solids closed at 21 1-2c for No. 1 grades and 20 3-4c for 38 score.

The egg market maintained a steady tone Receipts showed an increase but offerings were clearing readily under good demand. Graded shipments closed out the day at 20c for grade A-large, 19c for medium, 18c for pullets and 17c for B and C grades.

Montreal, April 14 — Creamery butter improved slightly here yesterday. Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 3-4 to 23 cents a pound and solids for 22 1-4 to 22 1-2c.

Asks Chaplains Be Without Rank And Uniform

U. C. Board Reaffirms Opposition of Christianity to War

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—The Board of Evangelism and Social service of the United Church of Canada today reaffirmed "the fundamental opposition of Christianity to war" and decided to urge upon the church not to identify herself with the cause of militarism should war come.

The Board, at its annual meeting here voted to explore immediately "the disirability and possibility of arranging through the Federal Council of Churches shortwave broadcasts making known to the peoples of Germany and Italy in their own language the desire of North American Christians to be their friends and to settle our differences without mutual destruction in war."

The Board will ask the Department of Defence to make new regulations for appointment of chaplains to the force under which such chaplains would not be assigned military rank and uniform.

The Canadian government was urged to consider "only men with knowledge and understanding" of penal problems in setting up the new prison commission. A resolution was passed assuring Justice Minister Lapointe of the "fullest support of the United Church in putting into effect the recommendations of the Royal Commission which will relate to long-delayed reforms."

VISCOUNT HALIFAX

Before leaving for Chequers, the Prime Minister received J. P. Kennedy, the United States Ambassador, who congratulated him on his speech.

The pledges to Greece and Rumania met angry receptions from Italy and Germany.

While inspired German comment described Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech yesterday as "bluff" and Premier Mussolini declared Italy would "march straight ahead" these developments highlighted the sensitive European situation:

German Fleet Sails 4

1. Several ships of the German warfleet were reported to have left Kiel for manoeuvres in Spanish waters starting April 18 and lasting about a month. In British naval quarters the belief was expressed that submarines taking part in the games did not intend to return to Germany soon.

2. British authorities at Gibraltar, the fortress at the tip of the Spanish peninsula, set engineers to building barricades on the road to the "Rock" and refused to permit motor vehicles to go in or out.

3. This action followed reports of concentrations of troops and arms on the Spanish side of the Gibraltar boundary.

4. Shore leaves for British sailors at Malta, fortified naval base near Sicily, were cancelled.

5. Poland called additional men to the colors, swelling the army of 1,000,000 regulars and reservists already under arms, as large forces of German troops were reported in Warsaw to have been concentrated at three points along the Polish frontier.

Will Distribute Sand

6. The French war ministry announced it would resume immediately the distribution in Paris of sand for protection against incendiary bombs, a measure which was discontinued after the signing of the Munich agreement last September.

7. Reports in London said many Netherland's business men were trying to arrange to transfer business affairs from Netherlands to Lonmier Mussolini in a speech declar-

A crowd of 50,00f Fascists in Rome cried "on to Paris," as Premier Mussolini in a speech declared Italy would "march straight ahead" in the future as she had in the past.

Mussolini's statement, although not mentioning Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration of resistance by all Great Britain's power if Rumania or Greece find their independence threatened, followed the British Prime Minister's speech by several hours.

Another Step Onward

Some diplomats in Rome interpreted the Italian Premier's words as another step toward a head-on clash between the totalitarian powers and the anti-aggression bloc forming under the leadership of the two western European democracies.

In informed quarters it was expected Britain would reinforce her pledges to stop Hitler and Mussolini on a line running along the Polish, Rumanian and Greek borders from the Baltic to the Black Sea and the Aegean, with moves to include Turkey in her string of alliances. No official announcement was expected before Mr. Chamberlain addresses parliament again April 18.

Some informed sources also believed that by that date Yugoslavia might be sufficiently impressed to agree to accept protection.

Many observers in Britain felt the government might change its policy of "no conscription".

Although German official quarters said their fleet movement long had been planned and that the British and French governments had been informed, it was noted here that the German fleet "somewhere off Spain" would be in a position to menace Anglo-French communications lines through the Straits of Gibraltar and in the South Atlantic.

Naval experts have pointed out that if German vessels were able to use Spanish ports in the Canary Islands they would be in a position to attack British shipping around Africa and to South America.

But since Britain holds a superiority of three-to-one over the Germany navy, informed quarters were not unduly disturbed.

The preparations at Gibraltar resulted after large quantities of war material and thousands of troops were reported being massed at La Linea just over the Gibraltar boundary.

Scores of tanks, field guns and mortars were said at Gibraltar to be arriving at La Linea daily from Cadiz and Algeciras.

(At Burgos, the capital of Nationalist Spain, reports of additional Italian troops sent to Spain were characterized as erroneous.)

Spring Tips For Motorists

1—Be sure and change from light oil and grease to heavier grades for warm-weather driving.

2—It's simple to prevent your car's cooling system from over heating this summer. Drain your anti-freeze and have your garageman pour a can of corrosion preventive into the radiator. Car manufacturers say radiators should be rust-proofed now.

3—Check your brakes now after a long Winter. Remember, even with good brakes, a car travelling 40 miles an hour can not be stopped under 115 feet. Have your garageman "Pull the wheels" to ensure proper check.

4—Do you know that almost 60 per cent. of fatal accidents occur at night, although there is only one out of every four cars on the road. Have your headlights checked for correct focussing and the reflectors cleaned. Replace worn-out or dim headlight bulbs without delay.

POLICE DETAIN PAIR ON SUSPICION

Held on suspicion two men, who gave their names as Ernest McLarren, 26, of Quebec City and William Whitehead, 34, who gave Halifax, as his home address, were apprehended on Front Street by Plainclothes Constable Fred Izard today and detained on a charge of vagrancy. Following information received by the police that two men were attempting to sell a valuable $15.00 fountain pen desk set at a ridiculously low figure, the above men were apprehended and held at noon. The fountain pen set is being held by police, while the men were remanded to the cell block for further investigation, city authorities announced. No reports of such a pen set having been missing in the city were received by the police, however.

MAN'S BEST AGE

Many lists have been drawn up to show that all men are not useless when they reach mature years. The Commentator, a New York magazine, offers the following: Between the ages of 70 and 83 Commodore Vanderbilt added about 100 million dollars to his fortune. Kant at 73 wrote his Metaphysics of Ethics, at 74 his Anthropology. Tintoretto at 74 completed painting the vast Paradise, a canvas 74 by 30 feet; while Verdi at 73 produced his masterpiece, Otello, at 79 Falstaff and at 85 the famous Ave Maria. Cato at 80 began the study of Greek; Goethe at 80 completed Faust. At the early age of 80 Tennyson wrote Crossing the Bar, while Titian topped all the boys by painting his historic picture of the Battle of Lepanto as a youngster of 98.—Edmonton Journal.

BILL MAKES HIM LAWYER

Aurelien Belanger, M.P.P., for Prescott, was given authority to practice law today by the private bills committee of the Ontario legislature, without a dissenting vote. The action was opposed by the law society "in principle."

CURSE RECALLED

The curse of the Pharaohs was recalled when Dr. Jean Brochet, a member of the Lord Carnarvon's Tutankamen expedition, was killed in a motor accident at Los Angeles. More than a score of persons who have entered the tomb of King Tut have died sudden deaths.

John Shaw of Prince Edward County Sustains Fractured Arm

Picton, April 14 (Special)—John Shaw, well known farmer of Hallowell township, suffered a fractured arm on Wednesday. He was driving a team of colts on a wagon when the animals took fright and bolted. Mr. Shaw was thrown from the wagon, sustaining the injury.

W. E. Miller of Kingston gave a talk on the work of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind at the Kiwanis Club on Thursday. Burton and Leona Pickering and Miss Jean Wood, who were winners in the recent amateur show at Belleville, will be given a trip to Toronto on Saturday, where they will receive a special audition with Ken Soble. If they are accepted, they will appear on the air at a later date.

Fast Service

Due to the fast service given by the air lines, Miss Edith Mallory was able to reach Bloomfield yesterday in time to attend the funeral of her sister, Miss Florence Mallory who died suddenly on Monday. The trip from South Pasadena to Belleville was made in just 27 hours.

Miss Mallory received word of her sister's death at six o'clock on Monday and boarded a plane at nine o'clock the same night. She was in Chicago at ten-thirty the next morning and took another plane to Buffalo. From that city she took a train to Belleville, arriving at midnight on Tuesday.

Miss Mallory died very suddenly as she was preparing to come to Picton to attend a show. Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard conducted the funeral at her late home yesterday afternoon.

COUNCIL COMMITTEE ADVOCATES RACEWAY BY RIVER BE FILLED

Authorization will be asked of city council at the regular meeting on Monday evening next by the special Parking and Improvement Committee to proceed with the filling in of the entire raceway, which extends from the Fruit Machinery Company on the north end to the vicinity of the City Hotel on the south, following a recommendation to this effect passed at last evening's committee meeting of council.

The committee will ask also that the work include the clearing and levelling of the island adjacent to the raceway, and the planning and construction of a thirty-foot driveway, the location and places for which to be prepared by the city engineer, all of which has been set forth in the engineer's reports of March. Cost of the work will be limited to $1,000 under the recommendation.

Council will be asked to approve also the re-appointment of George Wilder as caretaker of the tourist camp for the season of 1939 date of opening for which will be left to the decision of the chairman of the camp.

One other recommendation to be presented will ask authority for the city engineer to prepare a survey of city-owned property on Ridley Street for council.

Police Blotter

Answerng the call of its master, a dog owned by H. C. Seldon, 238 East Dundas Street, was run over by an automobile and killed yesterday. Charles Doran, 127 Station street, was driving his automobile along Dundas Street, when the dog darted in front of his moving vehicle to return home. The matter was reported to police without further incident.

Increased numbers of transients continued to pass through Belleville this week, as can be seen by the influx of weary knights of the road applying for shelter at the police station of a recent date. Last night 25 crowded themselves into the cell block seeking adequate shelter for the night.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine today announced the Department of Highways had instructed all officers of that department to check thoroughly on the matter of individual driver's permits.

Motorcycle Patrolman H. C. Hatch, formerly stationed at Marmora, recentl was moved to an Ottawa detail. No replacement of the officer was announced as yet however.

ALL MAIN PROVINCIAL HIGHWAYS NOW OPEN

All main highways through the Province have now been cleared of ice and snow, and traffic is possible without detours, it is stated in the latest road report received by the Belleville branch office of the Ontario Motor League. The section from Toronto to Montreal is fairly good to Kingston, with rough spots from Kingston to Montreal. The road from Port Hope to Peterborough is "good". The Huntsville to Algonquin Park road is very soft, and the trip is not recommended at present.

HIGHLIGHTS

the simple reason that no nation on this hemisphere has any will to aggression, or any desire to establish dominance or mastery.

The American peace which we celebrate today has no quality of weakness in it. We are prepared to maintain it, and to defend it to the fullest extent of our strength, matching force to force if any attempt is made to subvert our institutions, or to impair the independence of any one of our group.

Should the method of attack be that of economic pressure, I pledge that my own country will also give economic support, so that no American nation need surrender any fraction of its sovereign freedom to maintain its economic welfare. This is the spirit and intent of the declaration of Lima: The solidarity of the continent.

Beyond question, within a scant few years air fleets will cross the ocean as easily as today they cross the closed European seas. Economic functioning of the world becomes increasingly a unit; no interruption of it anywhere can fail, in the future, to disrupt economic life everywhere.

The truest defence of the peace of our hemisphere must always lie in the hope that our sister nations beyond the seas will break the bonds of the ideas which constrain them toward perpetual warfare.

INTEREST WIDER

stated that the United States would join in defending Canada were she ever attacked from overseas. Again at Lima, in December, 21 American nations joined in a declaration to defend the integrity of their institutions from any attack direct or indirect.

"Measures of this kind," he said, "are taken as guarantees, not of war but of peace, for the simple reason that no nation on this hemisphere has any will to aggression or any desire to establish dominance or mastery."

Interest Beyond Continent

As if in reply to proponents of American isolation, the President said:—

"The American family of nations may also rightfully claim, now, to speak to the rest of the world. We have an interest, wider than that of the mere defence or our sea-ringed continent. We know now that the development of the next generation will so narrow the oceans separating us from the Old World, that our customs and our actions are necessarily involved with hers.

"Beyond question, within a scant few years air fleets will cross the ocean as easily as today they crossed the closed European seas. Economic functioning of the world becomes increasingly a unit; no interruption of it anywhere can fail, in the future, to disrupt economic life everywhere.

Would Live Together

"The past generation in Pan-American matters was concerned with constructing the principles and mechanisms through which this hemisphere would work together. But the next generation will be concerned with the methods by which the New World can live together with the Old.

"The issue is really whether our civilization is to be dragged into the tragic vortex of unending militarism punctuated by periodic wars, or whether we shall be able to maintain the ideal of peace, individuality and civilization as the fabric of our lives. We have the right to say that there shall not be an organization of world affairs which permits us no choice but to turn our countries into barracks, unless we are to be vassals of some conquering Empire."

Britain and France Cheered.

London, Apr. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt's Pan-American Day speech was welcomed widely today by Britons who heard it by radio. Although officials of the Foreign Office declined to comment, they apparently were pleased.

Paris, Apr. 14 (AP)—Sources close to the French government said today they considered President Roosevelt's declaration that the new world could help Europe avoid war to be an avowal of support for anglo-French efforts to halt aggression by collective security pacts.

Rome, April 14 — (AP)—Fascists charged today that President Roosevelt's address was new evidence of what one official called "provocative meddling" of the United States in Europe. They cited Premier Mussolini's request last night that the world "leave Italy tranquil in her hard and daily tasks."

ANOTHER PREDICTION TO BE CHECKED ON

"No growing weather until the first full moon after Easter".

That was the interesting prediction of an agricultural official this morning who recalled humourously that this maxim was one of the older, nearly-forgotten ones of weather lore. The prediction, however, is not of official nature.

The first full moon after Easter will be on May 3. There should be some warm and favorable weather between the present date and then, it was explained, but there is not likely to be any real growing weather till then, according to the old maxim.

DENTON MASSEY

Commons yesterday, and one Liberal member said the government apparently lacked the "courage and boldness" needed to meet the situation.

The keynote speech was delivered by Denton Massey (Con. Toronto-Greenwood) who spoke nearly four hours concluding a speech to which he devoted another hour on March 15 when the resolution preceding the annual relief bill was presented by Labor Minister Rogers.

Pressed For Source

Mr. Massey described the government's record on this problem as "blank, bleached and barren," and declared thousands of transients had died "as a result of exposure, illness, starvation and lack of care."

Pressed by the Labor Minister and several Liberal members to state the source of his information, Mr. Massey refused to do so but defied the Minister to prove him wrong.

The bulk of Mr. Massey's speech was a criticism of the government which he said had failed completely to offer any permanent solution to unemployment. He presented a great volume of figures and statistics bearing upon the problem and the government's measures to meet it.

Mr. Massey said he was not in a position to make a declaration of policy for the Conservative party but would make some suggestions on his own initiative, to cope with unemployment. He presented an 11-point program as follows:

Program Outlined

1. Development and opening up of the Northwest Territories and the northern parts of Quebec, Ontario and the Western Provinces by providing roads to mineral areas. This would open up new and permanent work on mine developments for "hundreds of thousands."

2. Extensive and intensive nationwide program of afforestation and reforestation. At the present rate Canadian forests would be completely exhausted in 30 years.

3. An extended program for water conservation and flood control.

4. A nationwide program to make Canada more attractive and accessible to tourists, involving construction and extension of national highways and protection of game and fish resources.

5. A co-operative, nation-wide housing plan, sponsored by the Federal and Provincial governments designed particularly to remove slums.

6. A youth re-establishment program "commensurate with the size of the problem." If the present youth training scheme was successful it should be enlarged.

Camps For Young Men

7. Establishment of construction camps for young men along the line of the civilian conservation corps in the United States.

8. Government employment bureaus throughout Canada under federal administration as recommended in the report of the national employment commission.

9. Leadership from the federal government in cooperation with private capital in internal economic adjustment to meet "our own shifting economies and new world economies."

10. An intensive nationwide campaign under such a heading as "Canada's prosperity year" using press and radio in a publicity drive to help restore confidence in business and create a public interest in the purchase of Canadian made goods.

11. A Dominion-Provincial-municipal conference to be presided over by some outstanding empire statesman such as Lord Willingdon, former Governor-General of Canada, to seek a cooperative plan for coping with economic problems so that the parliament of Canada, the provinces and the municipalities may "work together to the end of putting our social system on an equitable and fair basis."

Only Stop-Gaps

Mr. Massey said that the government's schemes to relieve unemployment were only stop-gap proposals holding no hope of a remedy.

"The situation in Vancouver last May and the situation existing in Toronto at the present time indicate that no permanent plan has been evolved since transients to the number of thousands upon thousands beg here and there in an effort to keep body and soul together and thousands have died as a result of exposure, illness, starvation and lack of care."

Mr. Rogers asked: "Where does my honorable friend get that figure"

"I have had experience dealing with young men," Mr. Massey replied.

"There is the charge that thousands have died?" Mr. Rogers pursued.

Repeats Charge

"I say thousands have died," the Toronto member said. "Does the Minister say thousands have not died?"

"Absolutely," the Minister retorted.

Mr. Massey said he stated what he felt was true "and what the Minister cannot prove is not true."

"I most certainly do challenge the figures," said Mr. Rogers, "there is not a province or municipality in which provision is not made for the care of transient men and if any cases of death from starvation, lack of care or exposure occurred they would be on record. I think my friend on reflection will withdraw the statement."

"I won't withdraw it because I think my opinion is as good as the Minister's," said Mr. Massey.

Would Not Reveal Information

Mr. Rogers asked if Mr. Massey had the facts of any cases and Mr. Massey said he had. Asked to produce them he said he would not reveal confidential information.

Speaker Pierre Casgrain said if Mr. Massey's statement was based on facts in his possession he should produce the facts or withdraw the statement.

"I have not categorical facts before me to prove it is true," said Mr. Massey.

He added there were no authoritative figures but the Minister could not prove the statement was untrue.

"Are the other statements in my friend's speech as accurate as this one?" asked Justice Minister Lapointe.

Mr. Massey said every other figure he had given was on the authority of either the Labor Department or the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

"Why does my friend omit the authority in this case " asked Mr. Rogers.

Admits No Authority

"Because there is no authority," said Mr. Massey. Liberal members laughed and applauded but Mr. Massey declared the single unemployed men throughout the country who were suffering would not join in the laughter.

In its three and half years of office the Liberal government had undertaken nothing but palliative measures in relation to unemployment, Mr. Massey claimed. It had done nothing to provide permanent employment or to deal with the problem as other than a temporary one.

The government had ignored the admirable recommendations of its own creation, the national employment commission. It was following along the same methods used by the previous Conservative government which were of a temporary nature and all of which had been condemned by the Liberal party.

Forestry Program

A few minutes after Mr. Massey resumed his seat, announcement was made by the Labor Department of a $1,000,000 national forestry program of which $600,000 will be spent on a dollar for dollar agreement with the provinces and $400,000 on Dominion parks and experimental forestry stations. It is designed to combine training and employment of young men with protection and development of forests, and wild life conservation.

Brilliant speeches would not cure unemployment, said R. J. Deachman (Lib. Huron North), who followed Mr. Massey. "It is an old disease of the human race. Jesus mentioned it when he said 'the poor ye have always with you.'"

Unemployment had been a problem down through the centuries, he said, and "strange as it may seem, every time there occurred the same remedy to cure the disease. Always something happened to cause an expansion of trade.

"When trade grew unemployment ceased. With more employment came expanding markets to take up the slack of unemployment and the nations once more moved forward to a period of prosperity.

"I confess that with that long record of 2,000 years I have not complete faith in the capacity of any party in this House of Commons to solve the problem today."

Outlines Policy

Social Credit parties advocated "scrip," Mr. Deachman said. They were "the scrip-tease artists of Canadian politics." The C. C. F. party advocated higher wages | and government control of business and industry "and let father bountiful pay it all." The Conservative cure was that "old stuff" high protection.

"Then there are my Liberal friends. They have a remedy which they have applied in part, but I must confess that sometimes I feel they lack that sufficient boldness and courage to put it to the real test.

"They need what has been defined in England as 'the Nelson touch.' I feel that if they had the Nelson touch of courage and boldness this problem would be solved and there would be a victory in the economic field equal to that of the Nile or Trafalgar."

Mr. Deachman said lower tariffs offered the best hope for improved conditions and was the Liberal way to achieve that end. He had little faith in Mr. Massey's suggestions for development of northern lands and urged greater development of the resources close at hand.

AT THE BELLE

"HUCKLEBERRY FINN"

"The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," Mark Twain's sequel to "Tom Sawyer," with Mickey Rooney in the title role, playing his first solo starring part in a dramatic story of life on the Mississippi, is the next attraction at the Belle.

Familiar to millions of readers, the Mark Twain story presents Mickey as the river lad who seeks to aid a runaway slave to escape up the river to a free state. Their raft is invaded by two comical swindlers, "The King", and "The Duke," who give bogus Shakespearean plays, plot to sell the slave back to slavery, and are about to defraud two girls of their father's estate when Huck exposes them and precipitates a dramatic climax.

Much of the action was filmed on the Sacramento River, which did service as the Mississippi, and where one of the last old river steamers still in service in this country staged the dramatic race to rescue the slave from a lynch mob.

Richard Thorpe, who filmed "The Crowd Roars" and other hits, directed the ne wpicture. The cast includes Walter Connolly as the "King" who, with Mickey as Juliet, stages an absurd "Romeo and Juliet" performance in a river village. "The Duke", second of the swindlers, is played by William Frawley, veteran of stage and screen, and the kindly Wido Douglass, benefactress of the boy, is enacted by Elizabeth Risdon. Jim, the runaway, is played by Rex Ingram, the negro actor who scored as "De Lawd" in "Green Pastures."

The two heiresses whom Mickey rescues from the swindlers are played by Lynne Carver and Jo Ann Sayers, and the remaining supporting roles are filled by Minor Watson, Victor Kilian and Clara Blandick.

Dramatic highlights include the boy's attempt to run away to save the widow from paying blackmail, his discovery of the runaway slave, their raft trip up the river with frequent narrow escapes, the encroachment of the swindlers, the absurd Shakespearean performance and the plot to swindle the girls. The negro carrying the boy, bitten by a snake, to medical aid, knowing it means return to slavery, and the mad dash of the steamer to save him from the lynch mob, are other dramatic thrills.

2 Grand Features

Romance, adventure, danger and thrills abound in the grand two-feature program now at the Belle. Ray Milland, Olympe Bradna and Irene Hervey are featured in "Say It In French."

George Brent, Olivia de Haviland and John Payne share honors in "Wings of the Navy." An interesting and entertaining vitaphone film "Robbin Good" completes the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"STAGECOACH"

A chapter out of the making of the west is unveiled on the screen in Walter Wanger's "Stagecoach" which is now playing at the McCarthy. This new production, an epic of frontier life and courage, concerns the adventures of a band of men and women in the days when America was young. The production co-stars Claire Trevor and John Wayne, with prominent roles played by Andy Devine, Louise Platt, George Bancroft, Donald Meek, Tim Holt, Thomas Mitchell and John Carradine.

The picture opens as the Overland Stage is about to leave Tonto for Lordsburg. Driving it is Buck Rickabaugh, who is accompanied by Curly Wilcox, travelling with the coach as shot-gun guard. One by one the passengers board the stage; there is Lucy Mallory, going to join her army officer husband before she becomes a mother; Mr. Peacock, a clerical-looking whiskey drummer; Doc Boone, a dipsomaniac doctor; the mysterious Hatfield, a notorious gambler; and Dallas, played by Claire Trevor, an unfortunate lady of the town who is being forced to leave by the members of the law and order society. This heterogeneous group is joined at the outskirts of the town by Banker Gatewood, with the funds of his bank nestling in his heavy valise, and, a few miles further on, by the Ringo Kid, played by John Wayne, a young fugitive from justice who is on his way to Lordsburg to settle a feud of long standing.

Thrown together by the exigencies of stagecoach travel, this strange assortment of passengers soon finds itself involved in a series of dramatic adventures. Lucy's child is born en route. Dallas and Ringo fall in love. Finally, as the stage is crossing a plateau, it is attacked by a ferocious band of savage Apaches. This scene of the Indian attack, which furnishes the climax of the film, is one of the most thrilling sequences to be seen on the screen for many seasons.

When those passengers who have survived the attack at last reach Lordsburg, still further adventures are in store, and in a suspenseful denouement they find the happiness or tragedy that has been waiting for them.

Dudley Nichols has prepared an excellent screenplay from the story of Ernest Haycox which appeared in Collier's as "Stage to Lordsburg" and John Ford has directed the production with his usual pace and conviction. Congratulations are also due Bert Glennon for his splendid cinematography of the Arizona mesas and plateaus.

Will Leave Tuesday

The naval force will leave Tuesday from the Kiel and Wilhelmshaven bases, it was announced. Reports some vessels already had left Kiel and were en route today for a rendezvous off Spain's Atlantic coast were said to have resulted from "confusion" over the status of the manoeuvres.

Ports in Spain, Portugal, Spanish Morocco and Tangier will be visited, the communique said. The force will include two battleships, two cruisers, six destroyers, 15 submarines and auxiliary craft.

Paris and London were said to have been advised of the manoeuvres.

Britain Assailed

Plans for the exercises were carried forward while the German press assailed Great Britain anew for her policy of guaranteeing eastern European nations against any aggression of the Rome-Berlin axis. Commenting on yesterday's guarantees to Greece and Rumania, the newspapers said Britain was bluffing.

Although in official comment the British policy had been described as driving Europe toward a new "people's murder," unofficial but authoritative quarters interpreted the naval movement as a sure sign the German government did not regard the present European situation as critical. If it were, informed sources said, Germany would not permit the war vessels to go so far from home.

Say Guarantees Useless

The press said the guarantees such as Britain has given to Poland, Greece and Rumania—the Greek and Rumanian commitments were given yesterday—had not been asked for by "the small nations" and were worthless.

Chancellor Hitler's newspaper, The Voelkischer Beobachter, headed its report and commentary with, "British bluff against European reconstruction" and "Greece and Rumania are proteges against their will."

The newspaper said Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration in the House of Commons revealed the "sterility" of British political thinking.

"It seems as if the traditional umbrella hinders the view of these people upon those actual happenings around them," it commented.

No Cause For Fear

Deutsche Diplomatisch—Politische Korrespondenz, semi-official mouthpiece of the foreign office, said Greece had no cause to fear attack and "as concerns Rumania, there is every reason not to believe that England would be willing to protect Rumania against Russia who does not recognize the territorial integrity of Rumania but with whom England stands in the most intimate contact—with the same determination as against Germany."

(Rumania acquired Bessarabia from Russia in the Great War.)

Will Have 100 Subs

Paris, April 14—(CP-Havas) — Germany will have more than 100 submarines in the Mediterranean when the units that left Wilhelmshaven last night arrive in Spanish waters, Genevieve Tabouis reported today in L'Oeuvre (Radical Socialist).

Mme. Tabouis also said that Chancellor Hitler had summoned all generals of the regular army to meet in Berlin today, for final orders for completion of military preparations along the Polish frontier between dusk tonight and dawn tomorrow.

Action for recovery of Danzig and Pomorze is immediately in prospect, this commentator said.

In addition to the squadron of six cruisers and two pocket battleships whose departure was officially made known, secret orders sent 32 submarines along with the fleet to join the large number already in Mediterranean waters bringing the total to more than 100, Mme. tabouis said.

DUCE DECLARES

Premier Mussolini's declaration that Italy would "march straight ahead."

Some thought that a vague answer may have been supplied by the Fascist throng of 50,000 which heard the Premier speak last night from the balcony of Palazzo Venezia and responded with shouts of "Tunisia!" and "On to Paris!"

Tunisia is a French North African protectorate which, with Djibuti, French Somaliland port and gateway to Italian Ethiopia, and the Suez Canal, has been specified by Mussolini as a "problem of a colonial character" between Italy and France.

No Apparent Notice

Mussolini took no apparent notice of the Anti-French clamor that welled up around the Palazzo Venezia balcony.

"This historic events of recent days are the result of our will, of our faith and of our force," he said. "We go toward friendly peoples in an attitude of friendship; against hostile peoples we will have a clear, decisive, resolute attitude of hostility.

"The world is asked to leave us tranquil in our great and daily task. In any case the world must know that tomorrow, as yesterday and always, we will march straight ahead."

Il Duce spoke while almost 1,500,000 Italians were under arms, through recent calling of reservists, and only a few hours after the British and French governments had made plain they also were marching straight ahead—with plans to halt any further eastward expansion of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Diplomats pointed out that save for the figurative "tomorrow" Mussolini did not say when nor toward what Italy would march.

POLISH ARMY

The reports of German troop movements said large forces were gathered at Lauenburg, facing the Polish port of Gdynia but a few miles from the Free City of Danzig in the Polish Corridor; at Schneidemuehl, opposite the Polish town of Bydgoszcz on the Vistula River in the Corridor, and in Silesia, opposite Czestochowa.

There were reports Chancellor Hitler had made known through his representatives in Berlin that he would like to enter Danzig on his birthday, April 20.

Families of members of the British, French, Belgian and some other embassies were preparing to leave Warsaw by special train for their homes. Families of Polish embassy and consular officials in Germany were reported instructed to come home.

British and French guarantees of Rumanian and Greek independence, similar to the guarantees extended Poland, were warmly welcomed here.

Trustees Turn Down Teaching of French In English Schools

Toronto, April 13—(CP)—Proposals to facilitate the teaching of French to English-speaking school children, defeated by an approximate vote of 10 to 1 by the Trustee and Ratepayers' Department of the Ontario Education Association, provided the sharpest debate at the annual convention of the organization.

The proposals were contained in a resolution brought before the Trustees' section yesterday by the Prescott and Russell Trustees' Association. So bitter were the arguments French-speaking Trustee A. Vincent of Kapuskasing expressed the hope he never again would "be a spectator to such things."

The resolution said it was "absolutely essential" that English-speaking children become bilingual in predominately French sections of the province. Children speaking only one language would be handicapped in business. The resolution proposed a petition be sent to the Department of Education to take measures to remedy the situation.

The motion was defeated after Trustee C. W. Carrie, Toronto, termed it "an ecclesiastical movement." He added: "It is a dead set to make Ontario a bilingual province. This has become a fight to maintain our Anglo-Saxon citizenship and every red-blooded citizen should oppose it."

FIRE DESTROYS MINE BUNK HOUSE

One Employee in Serious Condition from Burns Received

Sudbury, Ont., Apr. 13 (CP) — Cecil Marsh, an employee of Lebel Oro Mine, 15 miles southwest of here, was brought to hospital here today in serious condition from burns suffered when fire destroyed the mine bunk house. Two other miners were also burned, although less seriously, while five others escaped injury.

Brought here by automobile, Marsh is confined to hospital with serious burns to his face and body. Dr. S. S. Polack left by airplane for the mine to attend Pat O'Leary and Ben Kiazick, each suffering body and face burns.

Cause of the fire, which destroyed the bunk house as if it were a "match box", according to observers who brought March here, was unknown. They said it started downstairs below the sleeping quarters. Those who escaped with singed hair and faces were Jimmy Davidson, Harry Leaney, Jack Dever, William Borman and Otto Chattenard.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Transpiration! When water is carried up from the roots of plants to the breathing pores of leaves and other vegetal surfaces and then evaporated, it is called "transpiration". Weather elements affect the amount of water transpired, which may vary, according to the crop, from four to ten inches of depth over the entire area occupied by the crop, and this is taken into account by flood engineers. The higher the temperature and wind the greater the amount of water transpired as both increase evaporation and plant activity is increased with higher temperature. Plants use less water when the humidity is high and transpire more freely with increased sunlight and soil moisture.

PREVENTION WORK IN FLOOD AREAS IS NOW PROPOSED

J. R. MacNicol of Toronto Says Work Will Help Unemployed

RELIEF PROBLEM

Seven Provinces Deny Statements Made by Denton Massey

Ottawa, April 15—(CP)—A long range, comprehensive scheme of flood prevention is one of the many proposals now before the government to provide employment and create public assets.

This was laid before the House of Commons yesterday by John R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto-Davenport) who has made an exhaustive study of flood losses, their cause and cure. He warned that there might be disastrous floods in Canada, which would cost far more than permanent preventive works.

Announcing that he had withdrawn a resolution standing on the order paper in his name calling for a flood prevention program, Mr. MacNicol said he would now make the arguments he had intended to make if the resolution had been reached.

RELIEF DEBATE

Toronto, April 15—(CP)—A full debate on relief matters generally was promised the Ontario legislature yesterday when Premier Mitchell Hepburn said opposition complaints could be fully dealt with when welfare estimates are being considered.

Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, said in the House yesterday that the charge of Denton Massey, made in the House of Commons at Ottawa, that thousands starved in Canada was "absolutely untrue" insofar as Ontario was concerned.

Ontario relief scales were the highest in Canada, said Mr. Cross. Premier Hepburn later said they were the highest in North America with the exception of New York City. Higher scales might remove the inducement for people to seek work.

"I'm not surprised at the charge that thousands die, considering its source," said Mr. Hepburn. The Welfare Department knew of not one case of malnutrition in Ontario, nor had doctors working under the medical relief plan reported any malnutrition cases.

Ian Strachan (Lib. Toronto- St. Georges) said it was distressing that many men thought, that if the Schooner Reports Submarine Seen Near Ship Lanes off N. S. Coast

Lockeport, N.S., April 15—(CP)—This south shore fishing town of 1,000 persons hummed today with the report a submarine had been seen 10 miles off the coast.

Captain Vernon Goodick, skipper of a small fishing schooner, came back to port yesterday with the report an unidentified underseas craft had appeared briefly between his vessel and another. He said the crews of three schooners could confirm his report.

Major D. H. Sutherland, Supervisor of the Eastern Division, Department of Fisheries at Halifax, declined to comment on the report. Assistant Commissioner F. J. Mead, officer commanding "H" division of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, said he had heard of Goodick's story but had "nothing definite".

Another official, H. G. Locke, Inspector of the Fisheries Department here, also said he had heard of the report and that the schooner men had reported seeing the submarine.

Adjutant Frizzell, officer in charge of a Royal Canadian Air Force plane which arrived from the eastern passage base, near Dartmouth, N.S., shortly after the report became know, said "we looked over the area this afternoon but we saw nothing."

Goodick said he saw the submarine clearly as it was quite close but when he changed his position for a better view it submerged. The rails of the craft were clearly discernible, he said. He said it was about 4 a.m.

Position of the craft as reported by Goodick would place it close to the steamship lanes. Lockeport is about 40 miles from the southwestern tip of Nova Scotia.

Ottawa, April 15—(CP)—Defence officials here declared today they had no statement to make with regard to reports a submarine had been sighted by a Lockport fisherman 10 miles off the Nova Scotia coast.

While the limit in which national jurisdiction may be exercised for customs and anti-smuggling purposes is up to 12 miles offshore, the three mile limit constitutes the internationally recognized boundary of territorial waters. A submarine 10 miles offshore would still be in the international zone.

Strengthening of Empire Defences Under Way in Many of Far Parts of World

London, April 15.—(AP) — The War Office announced today that the first battalion of the Welsh Guards regiment would be sent to Gibraltar "on or after Apr. 22" to strengthen the defences of that key centre of British defences in the Mediterranean.

The announcement coincided with Anglo-French diplomatic consultations said to have arisen from anxiety over reported concentrations of Italian troops in Spanish Morocco and of Spanish troops and war material on the Spanish mainland near Gibraltar.

British diplomats sought further extension of the grand alliance against totalitarian expansion sponsored by Britain and France by efforts to enlist Soviet Russia's huge air force.

Charles Corbin, French Ambassador in London, believed the reports about Morocco were serious enough to ask for an interview at the foreign office this morning. In the absence of the Foreign Secretary, Viscount Halifax, he saw Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Advice to Yugoslavs

It was reported reliably, meanwhile, that British and French envoys in Belgrade consistently have counselled the Yugoslavs to patch up their internal quarrels in the hope of staving off any possible Italo-German attack on their country.

At Gibraltar defence booms to both entrances to admiralty harbor were swung into position.

POLAND, RUMANIA MAKE PLEDGES OF UNITED DEFENCE

Military Missions of Two Countries in Close Contact

RUSSIAN CO-OPERATION

(By ROBERT PARKER)
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Warsaw, April 15 (AP)—Poland and Rumania united today against any German drive into Eastern Europe and drafted strong defence plans.

The two nations, formally allied since 1921 to protect their eastern frontiers against Russia, exchanged pledges to unite in armed resistance to aggression by Germany or a possible German satellite nation.

Permanent military missions in both Warsaw and Bucharest were in close contact. It was understood that Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, Polish strong man, would become supreme commander of both armies in case of war.

Mutual Pledges

Mutual pledges were exchanged orally between Foreign Minister Joseph Beck of Poland and Richard Franasovici, Rumanian Ambassador in Warsaw, and Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu of Rumania and Count Roger Raczynski, the Polish Envoy in Bucharest.

Russia, against whom the original Polish-Rumanian alliance was directed, is expected to send aid, should Germany attack—for the rich Russian Ukraine is frequently regarded as one of the German goals.

Russia, approached by France and Great Britain to join some aspect of a "grand" European alliance against aggression, would be expected to pledge airplanes, tanks, guns and other equipment. Both Poland and Rumania would rather not have Russian troops on their soil, for they fear the possible spreading of Communist propaganda.

New Guarantees Significant

General Johan Laidoner, Commander-in-Chief of the Estonian army, was expected to arrive in Warsaw tomorrow for talks with Marshal Smigly-Rydz.

Toronto, April 15 (CP)—Protest against "wet" canteens operated by the Canadian Militia was made today by the Board of Evangelism and Social Service of the United Church of Canada. Defence Minister Ian MacKenzie was asked in a resolution to abolish the canteens.

The resolution stated: "We are of the opinion that when young men voluntarily give one or two evenings a week to military training, they should not, under government auspices, be exposed to temptation to indulge in Alcoholic beverages."

The Board decided to urge the Dominion government to refuse Ontario's request for repeal of the Canada Temperance Act.

DANZIG AS GIFT TO ADOLF HITLER IS NEW RUMOR

Germany Denies Any Plan to Send in Troops on Wednesday

HITLER 50 ON APRIL 20

Anti - German Incidents Reported in Polish Silesia

Berlin, April 15—(AP)—The official German News Agency renewed today publication of dispatches recounting purported anti-German incidents in Polish Silesia, strengthening rumors steps might be taken to absorb Danzig as a present to Chancellor Hitler on his 50th birthday next Thursday.

The plan, according to these rumors, which official quarters denied, is for German troops to march into the free state from East Prussia by Wednesday.

(Officials in the London foreign office said they had heard rumors of a German plan to take Danzig, that any such attempt would be "extremely dangerous," that if Poland "chooses to resist this is a threat to her independence" and Britain would be obligated to go to Poland's aid in accordance with Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration of March 31.)

By entering Danzig —German until 1919—from East Prussia the troops could avoid touching Polish territory. (Danzig is a free port, has a Nazi-dominated Parliament but is in the Polish Customs Administration.)

New Turn is Forecast

Foreign observers felt that, despite official assurances that issues with Poland were being settled amicably, publication of the dispatches indicated a new turn in developments. The Agency reported from Gleiwitz that anti-German excesses in Eastern Upper Silesia were "increasing in an alarming manner."

Usually there is a purpose behind publication of stories of this kind. Events in Sudetenland and later in Czecho-Slovakia and Memel were preceded by reports of anti-German excesses in the Reich press.

The military strength of Poland and the Balkan countries became a vital topic for Nazis with the publication in Chancellor Hitler's newspaper of estimates that five eastern European countries could send 7,350,000 men to war.

SPECIAL GUARD TO BE PLACED ON PUBLIC UTILITIES

Considered Necessary to Take Protective Steps at Once

USE WAR VETERANS

Toronto, April 15. — (CP)—Several hundred war veterans will be enlisted in Ontario cities next week for special guard duty on Public Utilities and buildings and industrial plants, it was learned today.

The National Veterans Security Committee for Ontario, composed of officials of ex-service men's organizations, has requested various branches of the Canadian Legion to recruit able-bodied veterans to start guard duty within a few days.

It was stressed here that no emergency had arisen but that at some points in the province it was considered imperative special protective steps be taken at once.

Comment Refused

The Canadian Legion at Niagara Falls was asked to enroll 253 men for special constables' duty on the Welland Ship Canal and Power houses operated by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

It was understood the enrollment was proceeding at the request of the Power Commission. Hon. W. L. Houck, Commission member, refused to comment. The Ontario Attorney-General's office also declined to discuss the matter.

The steps are understood to be regarded by official circles as preparatory to more extensive mobilization of guards in the event of a serious turn for the worse in European affairs.

SPRING WEATHER SENDS BRITONS TO BOATING, CAMPING

International Crisis Fails to Dampen Ardor of British People

CELEBRATE CENTENARY

(By Guy Rhoades)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 15—(CP Cable)—Advent of spring weather and the blooming of flowers has sent Great Britain's outdoor sports participants back to their hiking, cycling, boating and camping.

International crises fail to dampen the ardor of British young men and women who tramp across the country carrying their baggage in rucksacks, pedal barelegged down the highways, sail or paddle over the country's rivers and canals.

Cyclists are celebrating this summer the centenary of the invention of pedal bicycles by Kirkpatrick MacMillan a small blacksmith of Penpont, near Dumfries, Scotland.

MacMillan took an old "hobby horse" machine which was propelled by pushing along the ground with the feet, and fixed pedals to the front wheel. He produced the ancestor of the modern bike.

Some observers estimate Britain has 10,000,000 cyclists but that figure probably is far too high in view of the country's population of

New York Times Urges Repeal of Section One of U. S. Neutrality Act

New York, Apr. 15 (CP) — "The moral which President Roosevelt meant to imply yesterday in his Pan-American Day address was that good will is a source and sign of strength, not of weakness," said the New York Times (Independent) in an editorial today.

And of the European situation, the paper, urging repeal of section one of the United States Neutrality Act, said the risk of war "is very real".

"In this risk our own interests are involved," the paper added. "The best hope of peace for the United States does not lie in attempting to make ourselves immune to the effects of war after it has started, but in doing what we can to make the outbreak of a general European war less likely.

"We can contribute to this result by repealing section one of the Neutrality Act; a section, which, as it stands, would forbid the sale of American arms and ammunition in time of war to nations in self defence no less than to nations guilty of unmistakable aggression."

The Herald Tribune (Republican), while expressing sympathy with the President's Pan-American Day speech and Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy, regretted the language he used

"Because we believe the United States does have a direct interest in the European complex and ought not to be afraid to recognize the fact, it seems to us the more regrettable that the President should have wrapped up his contribution in language perilously close, in many passages, to bombast," said the paper. "His account of the peace-loving and idealistic American community of nations verges upon the absurd when one remembers all the blood with which American history has been drenched . . .

"In facing the dictators it is not desirable to intimate their mystic romanticism and exaggeration . . . in trying to exert American influence for stability and the maintenance of peace, it is necessary, if the unavoidable dangers of that course are to be minimized, to stick to the hardest and most practical realism."

Asks Assurances Of No Attacks On 31 Nations

President in Message Speaks of Conference Table as Place to Settle Differences

WAR MEANS WORLD RUIN

Roosevelt Offers to Act as Intermediary in Bringing Question Before Nations of World

Washington, April 15—(AP) — President Roosevelt has urged Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini to assure peace for a period of at least 10 years.

Mr. Roosevelt disclosed at an unusual Saturday press conference today he had transmitted messages to Hitler and Mussolini offering to act as "intermediary" in communicating any offers for peace by Germany and Italy to other nations.

Assurance Not to Attack

The President asked specifically whether Hitler and Mussolini are willing to give assurance that their armed forces would not attack a score of now-independent nations.

"Such an assurance clearly must apply not only to the present day." Mr. Roosevelt's message said, "but also to a future sufficiently long to give every opportunity to work by peaceful methods for a more permanent peace.

"I therefore suggest that you construe the word 'future' to apply to a minimum period of assured non-aggression—10 years at the least—a quarter of a century, if we dare look that far ahead.

"If such assurance is given by your government, I will immediately transmit to the government of the nations I have named and I will simultaneously inquire whether, as I am reasonably sure, each of the nations enumerated above will in turn give like assurance for transmission to you."

Names 31 Nations

The President specifically asked Hitler and Mussolini whether they would give assurances that their armed forces would not "attack or invade the territory or possessions of the following independent nations:

"Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Spain, The Netherlands, Belgium, Great Britain and Ireland, France, Portugal, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Luxemberg, Poland, Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Russia, Bulgaria, Greece, Turkey, Iraq, The Arabias, Syria, Palestine, Egypt and Iran."

The President said he would act as a "friendly intermediary" in transmitting peace assurances from Hitler and Mussolini to other nations.

He added that if reciprocal assurances for peace were given, then the nations of the world can begin discussions looking toward disarmament and the opening up of trade channels.

Mr Roosevelt said the United States would participate in a conference on these two problems. Nations other than the United States, he said, could "undertake such political discussions as they

Hitler Hurries to Munich on Receipt of Peace Appeal of President Roosevelt

MEETS VON RIBBENTROP

Hitler's Chief Collaborators Have Also Gone to Munich With German Chancellor for Meeting

Berlin, April 15—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler was reported tonight to have hurried from his Berchtesgaden mountain home to Munich on receipt of President Roosevelt's peace appeal today and to have summoned his Foreign Secretary, Joachim von Ribbentrop, to meet him there.

Telephone calls to Berchtesgaden also disclosed that Hitler's chief collaborations, incuding Otto Dietrich, Reich press chief, had gone to Munich with him.

Before Germany will make known its reactions to the Roosevelt appeal, a Wilhemstrasse spokesman said, "we must first confer with our axis partner."

Dictators to Confer

In informed circles it was assumed that Hitler and Premier Mussolini had been or soon would be in telephone communication with each other concerning the appeal, with Hitler's chief lieutenant, Field Marshal Hermann Goering, probably sitting at Mussolini's side. (He is in Rome for conferences with Il Duce).

It was learned recently that telephone arrangements had been set up so that Hitler and Mussolini could reach each other at any time within three minutes.

Diplomatic quarters inclined to the belief the two dictators might give a joint reply to President Roosevelt. At any rate it was certain their rejoinders if separate would nevertheless be closely attuned to each other.

It was learned the messages to both Hitler and Mussolini were transmitted directly to them. Neither the United States Embassy here nor the German government press department had received the message directly.

"We have every hope that it will have a useful effect in preventing war," one source close to the Foreign Office said.

LT. CALNAN TO SPEAK AT MARINERS' SERVICE

Featured by addresses by former Lieut. L. B. Calnan, who served with the Royal Navy during the Great War, and other prominent marine officials of the province, the annual Mariners' Service of the district will be held in Cherry Valley United Church tomorrow night.

Visiting marine captains of the county and district are attending in a body to the service which is annually featured with prayers for those that "go down to the sea in ships."

OPEN WATER HALF WAY TO MASSASSAGA

Following a further break-up of the ice in the Bay of Quinte last night open water now reaches from the second north span of the bay bridge, south to the north shore of Prince Edward County and half way the distance to Massassaga Point. Ice has shown rapid disintegration during the past day or so, and first boats of the spring "frostbite regatta" have appeared on the bay.

TRANSIENTS HIKE FOR MONTREAL

If transients now passing thru' the city in increasing numbers daily, carried a sign on their backs showing their destination at the end of their eastward hike, the single word "Montreal" would describe it.

Nearly all unemployed now passing through Belleville are headed east to that city in expectation of getting work on some of the Atlantic freighters or cattle boats, eventually in the hope of making their way to England where a strong demand at present reportedly exists for labor, one of the wandering fraternity stated this morning.

OTTER BELIEVED SEEN NEAR SHANNONVILLE

The rarest of animals in this section, an otter, was observed on the banks of the Salmon River near Shannonville this week. It is the first time in the memory of the oldest residents that such an animal has been reported in this section.

Bert Spencer and Percy Howard of the village, while trapping muskrats in the creek made the discovery. They observed the otter making its slow way along the icy banks, apparently unmindful of the men nearby. The two did not attempt to molest the animal, but managed to obtain a perfect closeup view.

Recently a fine specimen of red fox was also observed by the men near the village.

RECKLESS MOTOR BOATING PROHIBITED ON INLAND WATERS

Regulations describing the manner in which speed boats may be operated on certain inland waters of the Dominion have been received from Ottawa by Charles Jeffs, secretary of the South End Athletic and Yachting Club and have been posted for the benefit of club members.

"No person shall drive or operate a motor vessel on any waters forming part of the minor waters of Canada recklessly or in a manner or at a speed which is dangerous to navigation or to life or limb.

"Anyone who contravenes the provisions of the regulation shall be guilty of an offence, and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars," the notice informs.

LOW PRICES PAID FOR FRESH SUCKERS

Suckers have entered the Bay of Quinte marshes this week, but their tardy arrival this spring has been too late to be of much benefit to local fishermen. This season hopes of having the annual spring "run" of the fish coincide with the New York holidays failed to materialize, and instead of an expected six cents per pound for the fish which would have been paid during the holidays, a price of only one cent per pound is now being paid fishermen by local wholesale houses.

ENTRANCE TO STORE IS FRUSTRATED

A futile effort to gain entrance to Campbell's grocery store, 105 Station street, was made during last night, Mr. Clarence Campbell, local letter collector and proprietor of the establishment discovered when he was about to open the premises early today. A broken key in the lock of the front door revealed the unsuccessful attempt to enter the store. Later Mr. Campbell entered the store from the rear, notified the police and later revealed nothing had been disturbed. Some time ago Mr. Campbell lost a set of keys, which were never recovered. The key found broken off in the lock of the door last night is believed to have been one of the missing keys, Mr. Campbell informed police.

ORCHARDS REPORTED IN GOOD CONDITION

The spring blossom date will be later in the section this year, it was stated by C. T. Stevenson, local chief inspector of Eastern Ontario district of the fruit and vegetables branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Orchard conditions are satisfactory at present ,however, even in spite of the lateness of budding, and little if any winter killing has been reported this Spring.

TWO LITTLE MAIDS FROM SCHOOL EXPRESS DELIGHT

Found Right Answer in Belleville to Life Problem

Following are excerpts from letters received a few days ago at Ontario Business College from two young ladies who have recently gone from the College to good office positions.

The first wrote: "My application has been accepted and I am to commence my new duties next week. I thank you for recommending me to this position. I also thank you and the staff for the wonderful training I received while attending O.B.C."

The second: "I am greatly indebted to the training received at O.B.C., which has aided me in securing such a good position. I regretted the day I had to leave the College. I wish you continued success and extend very kindest regards to all the staff."

This shows how young ladies are profiting from the O.B.C. courses. There is no set time for starting. Students may enter the College at any time now.

TO REMOVE MACHINERY FROM PROPERTY OF WELLINGTON BRICK CO.

Dismantling of the machinery of the Wellington Brick Company, that has been sold to Montreal interests will take place next week according to an announcement from the lakeside village today.

Workmen will arrive on Monday to begin operations. The plant manufactured sand-brick for some time, but closed its doors some years ago.

Foibles of Human Nature Revealed in Licence Office

Motorists Have Many Reasons for Wanting Certain Figures on Plates

NO. 13 UNPOPULAR

Odd numbers on motor licence plates are more popular than even numbers. It may be that even numbers are more difficult to remember, which has its implications—but the fact remains, it was revealed following a check up of the fads and foibles of the local motoring public.

Motorists who this year have purchased their 1939 plates have displayed all the superstitions, likes and dislikes, and sometimes eccentricities, of those in past years, and just about the same number of requests for "different" licence plates have been made.

Nowhere else but in the office of the issuer of motor vehicle licences may human nature be seen in its more open mood. Fancies strangely confined and inhibited elsewhere range open and free when it comes to a matter of purchasing the new markers for the family car.

Most Are Particular

There has always been the driver who has walked into the office of the issuer on Front Street, plumped down his money and walked out with the new plates tucked securely under his arm without caring what number or combination of numbers he received, but take it from clerks of the office, his kind is rare. There is the larger number of his fellows who are very particular and fastidious. Some of them have sent in their requests earlier asking for certain distinguishing numbers, and waiting for them to turn up on the list. They want odd numbers. There are others who want even ones....and there are the supertitious who will not under any circumstances take a plate in which "13" appears, or a plate in which by some alchemy strange to their notion, the series of number add up to "13".

There is the "sporting" set, the motorists who ask for poker hands like "five of a kind" or a "full house". There are a number of these poker players and they come back year after year.

Street Number in Plates

Many of the drivers like to have their street number or telephone number included in the combination on their plates. Or the date of their birth, or the date upon which they were married. Some insist, or would insist, it rules lately have become less flexible, that their numbers read either way like "1-2-3-2-1". Still others like them all in a row. Mr. S—— wants "seven" in his and if Mr. B—— got one he wouldn't be able to drive his car for thinking of it. So-and-so met Sally on a certain date and that date would like to be included in the list of numbers on his new plates. "Get me a plate with "16" in it," he will ask.

There are others who buy new plates for friends as birthday or Christmas gifts. There are yet others who wish to take out plates on a time payment basis. And a few who would like to get their plates and come back later and pay.

Age of Drivers.

But not to the issue of the plates alone is all the novelty and humour confined. There is the matter of signing the necessary information for the renewal of driver's licence. The average feminine applicant may protest strongly against the indictment, but this is one counter where "truth is out" when it comes to supplying this information for the issuer and the Department of Highways.

For it has long been well known that this province is a province of youthful—extremely youthful—feminine drivers. On that little line on the blank where the question of age appears . . . does the average feminine applicant give her true number of birthdays?

"Not one in a carload . . . in several carloads" comment the clerks a bit wistfully.

"All our drivers are 'over twenty-one'. At least that is the way they sign the application. And who are we to differ with them So far as we know there is no law which compels them to give their exact age, as long as they come close enough to it."

And, it was pointed out, it would be an extremely brave parliamentarian who would thus seek to change this.

POLICE COURT

A special session of city police court was necessary in Belleville this morning and His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., graciously agreed to preside.

Two alleged transients, who gave their names as Earl Hughes and William Hayes, no address given, were arraigned on charges of violation of the Liquor Control Act. The pair were apprehended on Market street enroute to the police station where they had expected to seek a night's lodging. They got it.

Police said they found a portion of a bottle of native wine in the men's possession. They were remanded in custody until Monday, while two Kingston youths, who had imbibed freely, but not well, admitted to a charge of drunkenness and paid the minimum fine assessed.

Mayor Cory Officially Opens Trenton's New Public School

Chief Inspector Greer of Toronto is Principal Speaker

1,200 ATTEND

Trenton, Apr. 15 (Special)—Marking a new era in local educational circles with more than twelve hundred parents and other adults making up the audience, Mayor H. R. Cory officially opened the new $120,000 College street public school at an impressive ceremony in that building last evening. Included in the list of dignitaries present were Chief Inspector V. K. Greer of the Department of Education of Toronto, Inspector H. J. Clarke of Belleville, Mayor Cory, members of the town council, members of the Public School Board, teachers of College Street School, and others.

Chairman of the evening was H. Sager, chairman of the Public School Board, who introduced the various speakers of the evening. Rev. G. D. Campbell, pastor of Grace United Church, offered prayer as the program was begun; and this was followed by a very delightful vocal number when members of the girls' public school choir under the direction of Miss Nora McLellan rendered very delightfully Handel's Largo and the Blue Danube Waltz.

Called upon to officially declare the new edifice open, Mayor H. R. Cory declared that the new school was a credit to the town and would long be considered one of the finest examples of the builders' arts in the province. He outlined the difficulties that had arisen in the matter of securing the school, particularly along financial lines and made some comments regarding the present status of the town and its standing among the other towns of the province. Trenton's school children will now be afforded the very latest in educational facilities, he said, referring to the "unbelieveably unsanitary and unpleasant conditions which have for so many years been so evident in the old outdated school. The old building has been in use from the time of many of the fathers and grandfathers of the town, and nothing could be more indicative of the new era than the acquisition of a fine new and wholly up-to-date building, which will give young Canada a fair and square chance to develop along normal lines.

Board Complimented.

Inspector of Schools H. J. Clarke of Belleville in his remarks complimented the School Board and the parents of the town on their new school, spending considerable time in a description of the old building, now happily to go into the discard. He pointed out that Trenton's educational institutions are now on a par or even above those of other towns and cities of the province and he spoke of the many educational advantages which will now be available to students which were not before possible. In both the matter of health and the consideration of academic progress he showed clearly that pupils cannot fail to benefit by the change; and the results over a period of many years to come will be so great as to be past computation.

Introduced by Inspector Clark, the speaker of the evening, Chief Inspector V. K. Greer of Toronto, expressed in no uncertain terms his pleasure at being present. He remarked that on all too few occasions he was privileged to be on hand at such events, and he mentioned the pleasure of all concerned, pupils, teachers, parents, and members of the council and of the school board, on such a happy occasion. Referring to the new building he praised it as being one of the finest and most up-to-date schools in the province. He made it quite clear that taking into consideration the cost of the school including its equipment which is of the latest design and pattern, Trenton's new College street school is "economically the finest and best of its type in the Province of Ontario."

Warm in Praise

Inspector Greer spent some time discussing conditions in public schools throughout the province and on several occasions convulsed his audience with laughter as he related incidents chosen from his long and varied career as teacher and inspector. He was warm in his praise of the new institution and of the initiative and energy of those responsible for its erection here at Trenton.

One of the highlights of the programme was the presentation to Principal V. P. Carswell of the gold key emblematic of his position as chief custodian of the new school.

Following the actual opening ceremonies and the addresses by the various speakers, parents and friends took advantage of the occasion to carefully inspect the new building. It was truly a red-letter day for the residents of the east side of the Trent river in more senses than one, and when school reopens on Monday next there will be a definite thrill for the five hundred and more College Street pupils in going to the new quarters where they will be treated to ideal conditions.

Classrooms Airy

Class rooms are large and light and are designed along the very latest educational styles. Venetian blinds are fitted at windows throughout, and indirect lighting is applied in places where possible. Cloak rooms are large and airy, and there are even rooms, where on wet days children my deposit clothing to find it thoroughly dried in a short time. Teachers also will be more comfortable with private rooms for relaxation and basements allow full scope for play on dull days and for work at various projects.

The former College Street school was built almost three quarters of a century ago, and long since passed its stage of usefulness. During recent years pupils and teachers have been subjected to almost unbelievable conditions. On many occasions some rooms and sometimes even the whole school were dismissed after only a few hours of classes because coal gas escaping from the old-fashioned furnace filled the entire building and made study and tenancy impossible. Sanitary conditions were impossible, and almost beyond belief. No finer gift could be given to the younger generation than the addition of this new school which has been so badly needed for years past.

The official move from the old to the new building takes place on Monday as classes reassemble after the Easter holiday. Two new teachers are being added to take care of the over-crowding, these in the persons of Misses Irene Vanderwater and Mary Beal, both Trenton girls. A total of eleven classes will be in use, and upwards of six hundred pupils will be accommodated.

TWO CARS SUSTAIN PROPERTY DAMAGE

Considerable property damage resulted to two automobiles on East Dundas Street late last night when a motor car, said by police to have been driven by Ernest Cain, Kingston, collided with a parked motor car, the property of Sergeant H. E. Thompson of the Ontario Provincial Police. Cain was proceeding easterly when the car he was driving sideswiped Sergeant Thompson's car, which was parked on the north side of the street. The left front fender, running board, a rear door and other parts of the parked vehicle were badly damaged during the impact. Cain's car was also badly damaged. Charges are pending police revealed today.

LOCAL ENGINEER GETS PERFECT BRIDGE HAND

Local engineers and trainmen who have long gathered at the Canadian National Railways terminal at Brockville during brief stopovers on their regular runs have participated in an odd game of bridge to while away hours. But it remained for Samuel L. Cherrie, local Canadian National engineer this week to hold the perfect bridge hand. He bid a grand slam in spades and made his redoubled contract with the hand of thirteen spades.

Railway Employees Present Gift to Retired Car Checker

Upwards of fifty members of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad employees paid tribute to a highly efficient member of their organization last night when they presented retiring car-checker Herbert Wesley Larry, Trenton, with a splendid gift at a party held in his honor at Engineers Hall, Pine Street.

The presentation was made by Past President A. G. Meagher, who expressed the congratulations of the brotherhood on the attainment of Mr Larry's majority, and the appreciation of the many years of happy association spent during his tenure with the company.

Brief addresses were given by Yardmaster Robert Johnston and retired Yardmaster Robert Redner. Mr. Larry thanked his colleagues for the splendid token of appreciation and in turn voiced his regret at leaving such a splendid company of fellows.

A splendid musical program was one of the highlights of the gathering included in which was Miss Bolte, vocal, Mrs. G. Lehman, piano, Jackie Marsh, vocal and harmonica trio; Bruce Sills, musical saw and piano accordeon with piano accompaniment by Miss Pidgeon and Messrs. Sullivan and Rogers, piano accordeon and banjo. A delicious lunch was served at the conclusion of the festivities.

Mr. Larry who retired from the service on April 7th when he reached his sixty-fifth birthday joined the old Canadian Northern Railway staff at Rosedale on November 18th., 1905. Transferred to Trenton in October, 1911 he remained there until January 1933, when he was sent to Belleville, where he remained until the time of his retirement.

OBITUARY

MRS. B. C. MINER

(Formerly of Cannifton)

After a lengthy illness Mrs. B. C. Miner passed away at the family residence in Summitt, N.J., Friday evening, April 14.

The late Mrs. Florence Miner was born in Rawdon Township, near Stirling, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Anderson. For some years she resided at Cannifton and for the past thirty years she had made her home in the United States. When a young woman she graduated as a nurse from the Clifton Springs Sanitarium and later engaged actively in nursing in New York City. In religion she was a member of the Methodist Church in the United States and when able she took an active part in church work. She was a member of the Daughters of the British Empire in the United States. Old friends in this district will regret to learn of her death.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Benjamin C. Miner, and one sister, Mrs. Henry Farnham, Cannifton.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

Police Blotter

Charges of obstructing a police officer while in the pursuit of his duty may subsequently be preferred against a local citizen, following altercations at Quinte Inn last night.

Provincial Constable Alex. Stark investigated what was said to have been disturbances at that point late last night. In his effort to quiet some, who are alleged to have imbibed too freely, one of the persons concerned is said to have taken physical exception to the intervention of the law, but his exception was directed in the wrong channels, as Constable Stark experienced little trouble to putting the offender in his proper place.

The matter of charges is being taken up by the officer with B. C. Donnan, K.C., Crown Attorney, today.

City police yesterday recovered a bicycle that had been stolen some time ago. The "bike" was discovered hidden in an old deserted building on Frank Street and taken to the police station for safe keeping.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine announced today it had been necessary to close the centre lane of the new highway immediately east of Belleville. The spring thaws have raised havoc with the new stretch of Highway No. 2, east of Gibson's Crossing, during the past two weeks. On several occasions large trucks have become mired and yesterday it was practically impossible to permit a smaller motorcar passage ,necessitating the closing of the centre lane. Otherwise motorized traffic is being advised to proceed with the utmost caution while traversing that part of Highway No. 2 east of Belleville, Constable Ervine stated in warning.

Cheesemakers Request Part of Bonus to be Paid by the Gov't

Also Ask That Farm Inspectors be Named for Ontario

Two important resolutions which received unanimous endorsation and will be referred to the respective departments were passed at the closing session of the two-day short course for cheesemakers of the Central Ontario district which was terminated with a banquet in the United Church at Selby on Thursday evening.

The first resolution will ask the appointment of farm inspectors for the benefit of the cheese industry of the province, men who will be employed by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association for the purpose of tracing down or forestalling trouble in connection with the milk supply on farms. The number of these instructors will be left to the decision of the Ontario Cheese Producers, which association will be charged with the maintenance of this department.

The second resolution which will be presented the Dominion Department will ask that twenty-five per cent. of the new bonus expected to be paid on cheese by the government this year, if the bill is ratified, be paid by the cheese factories to the makers.

REMEMBER WALPOLE

Dr. Ley is trying to make the Germans stop smoking and drinking. He should remember Walpole, our first prime minister. Walpole reigned for over 20 years. Protests against his bribery went unheeded. His power seemed absolute. But once he proposed a new excise tax on wine and tobacco. Immediately there was an uproar. Mobs rioted. There was talk of restoring the Stuarts. It was even feared that the army would revolt at the threat of dearer tobacco. Walpole had to climb down, for the first time. Hitler will find that there are limits to the extent to which any dictator can interfere with his subjects' pleasures. He can oppress them, cut down their food, make them fight and die for him. But he must leave them to smoke their pipes in peace.—London Daily Express.

BEAUTY OF RURAL LIFE

Boys and girls in rural primary schools should be taught the natural advantages of rural life, to observe the beauties of the things that surround them, said the Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture to the rural trustees at the Ontario Educational Association.

In these days it would seem that it would be unnecessary to stress for the young in the schools of the countryside, how fortunate they are in their close contact with the soil and in the surroundings of nature in which they live. Dwellers in cities and country know how much of the progress of the state is due to the farm and the agricultural class.

In speaking of technical agriculture teaching Mr. Dewan expressed doubt whether it could be taught in any great detail with success in the primary schools and expressed the view that "probably in this regard we have gone a little too far in recent years."

There are however many subjects, such as rural drainage of which the rudiments can be taught in primary rural schools, according to Mr. Dewan. He also ventured practical farm arithmetic — the cost of building a hen house and so on, which could be taught.

Certainly today the rural school teacher does not encourage the clever boy and the clever girl to leave the farm and train for one of the professions so-called — as if farming were not a profession, as Mr. Dewan said was invariably the case in his young days.

Today with agriculture based more and more on a scientific basis not many look forward to that future when they can leave the farms. In the cities there is seen more of a desire to gain some knowledge of country life and there is some evidence of a trend to the countryside. Motorcars have brought the farm close to the city markets and business, a distance of ten or twenty miles meaning nothing with modern transportation.

WRITER OF DETECTIVE STORIES

Detective story writers enjoy fame. It is in human nature to love suspense and mystery. But the writers stay behind their stories, while their name at the head of a story is the all-in-all to the reader who knows the type of work a man has written and will write. Naturally the reader is more interested in the yarn than in the writer.

There has just passed away the creator of Philo Vance, the writer S. S. Van Dyne. But even that name is fictitious, for his name was Willard Huntingdon Wright.

Wright began his career as art critic and had a dozen books to his name before he essayed the detective story. His first novel, which was published after his illness, brought him more money than all his works on art, philosophy and Nietzsche. Thence his fame was made in story and in film. His books had sold more than a million copies before 1936.

His life had its incidents. Working in 1910 on the Los Angeles Times, when twenty-two years of age, he went home early one night from his work because of a headache. That night there was an explosion in the plant, killing twenty-one men, including the man whose desk was next to his. He worked on various publications and heavy duty broke down his health and in 1923 he took to his bed and was kept there for two years with a nervous breakdown. He was resigned to death but took up light reading of detective yarns. He had always loved Sherlock Holmes, Conan Doyle's unfailing sleuth. In January 1926 he started to write. "The Benson Murder Case" was an instantaneous success and he went forward with "The Canary Murder Case" and "The Greene Murder Case". Many other stories followed.

Naturally there was a reaction in Wright over his success as a writer of detective thrillers as compared with his work in art and philosophy. He was dryly amused at the irony of this situation. He said he was "shunted by a crazy twist of fate" into fiction.

Readers will be interested to know that he was a lover of dogs, chess and horse racing.

The detective story has a large following. Movies of such stories draw large crowds because mystery attracts. Doctors are said to be avid readers of such fiction as a relief from the routine of their heavy work. It is doubtful if reading of this kind will ever pass, for it is essentially plot and plot has the chief hold on the public as reader and movie fan.

NOCTURNE

Father, Thy flowing purples fall
At dusk to limn the hills with fire;
The lowlands hold Thy blooms in thrall;
Thy silences fulfil desire:
I thank Thee, Lord, that evening brings
Thy presence in familiar things.

Thy mothering rivers speak to me
When I am bowed with deep despair;
The whispering leaves of every tree
Give voice to my untutored prayer:
I thank Thee, Lord, that evening brings
Thy presence in familiar things.

Thy white stars burn to lift mine eyes
From maimed and broken things to Thee;
This world of fields and purpurate skies,
These vistas all, in their degree,
Give thanks, O Lord, that evening brings
Thy presence in familiar things.

JACK BENNY WORKS ONCE A WEEK ON THE RADIO, draws down $12,000 for one half hour. He is fined $10,000 for smuggling, which makes a big hole in his weekly pay envelope for one half hour's work. The woman in the same smuggling case gets imprisonment on the ground that this was her second smuggling offense. The fact that she is the wife of a high court Judge did not help her, in fact her social position aggravated her offense for she should have known better. Ignorance of the law is no excuse, but she couldn't even plead ignorance. Still, and all, smuggling never seems to be regarded as a crime, it is more of an adventure, and the fact that outside of the instigator of this bit of smuggling for gain, the two prominent men involved were given their liberty while the woman in the case goes to gaol besides paying a large fine, just seems a bit thick.

GENIUS IS GENIUS, WHETHER ENCASED IN WHITE, BLACK, OR RED SKIN, and entitled to all honour. The fact that a talented singer of the United States, Marian Anderson, is colored of skin has created a very distressing state of affairs in Washington, the capital of the United States. Miss Anderson was to give a concert in Washington in a hall controlled by the Daughters of the American Revolution, and was refused permission to appear in that hall. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, promptly resigned from the Daughters, who thus exhibited a perverted rash of what they considered Southern sentiment, but which real Southerners would no doubt be quick to disavow. Since that time Marian Anderson was privileged to sing to the largest open air audience ever gathered in Washington, to the great delight of thousands. Now it is proposed to ask Miss Anderson to sing before King George and Queen Elizabeth when they visit the White House on their overseas visit. That would be very nice and Their Majesties would no doubt be delighted to hear this talented young woman, but for one thing—the British Royal Family will never lend themselves to anything which has any tinge of controversy, especially that of race prejudice — parochial quarrels are as far beneath them as the earth is the heavens, and they will never be drawn into the impossible position of seeming to take sides in a dispute between social bodies.

BACK IN THE OLD DAYS WHEN NEWSPAPERS WERE PRINTED BY HAND POWER, elbow grease and back bending on a Washington press, where a man put the sheets of paper on the tympan and applied the power of his muscles to give the necessary impression after an assistant had run a handroller about five feet long over the type, 50 printed papers an hour was good going and circulations of 500 were printed and mailed after much perspiration and many grunts. Then came the cylinder press with man power, and sometimes mule power, and printing speed crawled up to 500 an hour. Then mechanical power was applied and the great speed of 1,000 copies an hour was attained. Later came the folding machines, and the stepping up of power in the newspaper office. The death recently of Henry A. Wise Wood recalls how he stepped up the speed of newspaper printing presses from 24,000 eight-page papers an hour to 60,000. That surely is a striking evidence of how the speed of the world is stepped up. People used to be content with papers printed once a week at the rate of one a minute, now they must have a new paper every day, printed at the rate of from one hundred to one thousand a minute. Going some, eh, what? Figure it out in seconds.

Flight of the Blue Goose

For more than 300 years men have studied, worked and wondered to bridge the gaps in our knowledge of geese. Particularly is this true in the case of the Blue Goose—a species at once so common and yet so rare that comparatively few people have seen them. This paradox is explained by the fact that the birds have an extremely circumscribed wintering area and a narrow migration path; so much so, that while there are literally millions of birds within these bounds, outside of the limits the birds are known only as rare stragglers indeed.

The nesting place of the Blue Goose was a complete mystery until ten years ago, when it was discovered on Baffin Island, and in that discovery Hudsons Bay men played an important part. Though the nesting grounds have been found, we have big gaps in our knowledge of the route the big flocks of geese take between their wintering grounds in the Louisana salt marshes and their Summer homes on the islands on the north side of Hudson Bay.

x x x

The saga of the Blue Goose's wanderings begins in the neighborhood of the mouth of the Mississippi river. If you look on a map, west of the river delta you will see Marsh Island, and eighty-five miles farther west, the Mermentau river. In this section of the Gulf of Mexico, Blue Geese are to be found all Winter long in incredible numbers. It has been estimated that seventy percent. of all Blue Geese are here from October to the end of March, feeding on wild millet and grass roots.

The numbers of geese in the flocks may be judged by this story from E. A. McIlhenny, through whose generosity thousands of acres of marsh lands are now sanctuaries for the birds. In 1930, Mr. McIlhenny brought a boatload of coarse gravel, 120 tons of it, and spread it for the use of the birds. Geese of course, require gravel for their gizzards to grind up the woody grass roots on which they feed. When Spring came, Mr. McIlhenny went over to take stock of his gravel pile and found that the geese had consumed all but ten bushels of it during the one Winter!

During the depths of Winter, the geese spread out along the Gulf shore line in search of food. But by mid-March they begin to congregate in three huge flocks which Mr. McIlhenny estimates as high as 3,500,000 birds. One of the flocks gathers on the flats of the east side of the mouth of the Mississippi, the others on Marsh Island and in the vicinity of Bayou Constance. The Marsh Island flock alone covers a space from three to five miles long and from half a mile to a mile deep.

For several days and nights the geese stay in these compact bands, choosing their mates and preparing for the long trek to the sub-Arctic. They become extraordinarily tame and permit horsemen to walk their horses through the flocks. The birds do not take wing, just walk out from under the horses' feet and close up again. Their gabbling is so noisy it can be heard for miles and continues unabated day and night.

x x x

About the last week in March the flight for the north begins, not in one huge mass-movement, but in many small flocks rarely numbering more than a hundred birds. For days the birds have been courting and filling the air with the tumult of their love-making and quarrelling. Suddenly there is silence. The geese seem restless, anxious and vaguely disquieted. Then up goes a small flock and, without circling or turning, heads straight north. Every few minutes another flock takes off. The geese start off irrespective of whether it is day or night, until the marsh which had held up to two million birds is deserted save for the croaking of frogs and the quacking of the few ducks that have not fallen victims to the surge of Spring.

For years it was generally supposed the geese flew a non-stop compass course for the marshy prairie lands of southern Manitoba, but in fact, they stop for rest and food at several places in Iowa, Missouri, North and South Dakota. The general trend of their migration is first confined to a narrow band along the Mississippi River Valley. By the first week of April, the first flocks are in Manitoba and by mid-April huge flocks, aggregating millions, are to be found in certain sloughs on the prairies west of Winnipeg.

In past years there were as many as 50,000,000 geese, principaly Blue Geese and Lesser Snows on the prairie, and I have no reason to believe that this estimate is too large. I have spent many days and nights in the area, travelled by car, canoe and airplane over the district many times since 1927, and I felt that the task of correctly numbering the birds, even approximately, is as difficult as counting the blades of grass in a meadow.

By early May, there is a gradual lessening in the numbers of the geese. By analogy with the flights from Louisiana, the birds must take of in relatively small flocks for Baffin Island, and here is the beginning of the trackless passage the Blue Geese make from Manitoba to James Bay. For 1,000 miles roughly they pass without trace.

x x x

Three reasons may be advanced why the birds are not seen during the thousand mile flight in the Spring from Manitoba. The first and most obvious one is that they steer a course over almost unbroken wilderness. Save for a Hudson's Bay post or a mine the country is much the same as when Prince Rupert became the first governor of the Company. Secondly, the geese are in flight at a time when travel is virtually impossible because of Spring thaws. Even airplane travel is temporarily halted. Thirdly, it is quite possible the geese are flying at tremendous heights and thereby escape detection. In support of the last supposition, it is interesting to know that an astronomer in India, engaged in photographing the sun, obtained a photograph of geese flying at an altitude of 29,000 feet.

The Fall flights of the geese brings them back to Hannah Bay, in the extreme south of James Bay, by mid-September. The Fall flights are more spectacular than the Spring flights, it is said, because of the larger size of the flocks and the fact that the old birds are argumented by the young birds of the year. Then, after feeding until early October, the geese leave before freeze-up and largely lost sight of until they reach as far south as St. Louis.

Of course, it is entirely possible for the geese to cover these thousand mile gaps in one long sustained flight. They can average fifty miles an hour with a favorable wind and the jump would last twenty hours, which may be the explanation of why they are not seen. If they took off late in the afternoon in either May or October they would have at least ten hours of darkness to hide their movements; and the other ten hours they might be travelling too high for human sight.—Bert Gresham in "The Beaver" Hudson's Bay Co. publication, Winnipeg.

BIG BUSINESS

Speaking on big business, I ought to tell you about a shop I went to in a little country place not far from London.

I went inside, but there was nobody in the shop. So I waited.

Well, after awhile three other customers came in, but still nobody arrived to serve us.

I heard voices at the back, so I went through the door, and came into a sort of parlor where I found two blokes playing cribbage.

"Who's the boss?" I asked.

"I am," said one of the blokes.

"Well," I told him, "there's three customers in your shop."

"Sah! Dont make a noise," he said, "and they'll go away again."—London Sunday Dispatch.

BRIDGE STREET W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church was held in the Ladies' Parlours, April 5th., Mrs Browne presiding.

Miss Hazel Denike sang very beautifully a solo "Oh Canada" using the version written by Mr. McKay for use in the "Church of All Nations" in Toronto. Mrs. Deacon led in prayer.

Mrs. Cook and her group gave a synopsis of the 4th chapter of our Study Book using the questionnaire method also maps and blackboard illustrations.

Those taking part were Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Farley and Mrs. Semple who also read a paper prepared by Miss Anglin, Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Shortt, Mrs. Mosher, Mrs. Buchanman, Mrs. Truman and Mrs. MacMartin.

Mrs. Moore took charge of the devotional service and led in prayer. Miss Browne read from the Scriptures Luke 10th chapter verses 25-37.

Mrs. Ross read a prayer for unity and fellowship composed by a Roman Catholic priest, a Jewish Rabbi and a Protestant minister.

THE TYPICAL BOY

Twenty - five thousand boys entered a contest, sponsored by an organization of the sort that would sponsor such an idea, to discover the typical American boy. The prize — $1,000 and prerequisites — went to Karl McCready, 13.

Karl lives on a farm near Louisville, Ky. He gets up at 5 a.m. He eats his breakfast, feeds the cows (number not stated) and then bicycles seven miles to school. He owns a pony and a hog, belongs (of course) to the 4-H club and (somewhat unexpectedly) to an organization affiliated with the National Federation of Junior Music Clubs.

Karl is obviously a mighty fine lad. But is he typical? We rather venture to doubt it. The typical American boy, in the first place, no longer lives on a farm. More probably he lives in or near a small town. Hence he doesn't milk cows, or not more than one, anyway. If schools start at nine, the chances are that he gets up seven minutes before the school bus is due at the corner, 200 yards away, and that he crams his breakfast into his mouth with one hand while he smooths his hair with the other, while his harassed mother yells at him from the door to hurry.—Baltimore Sun.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Treatment of Constipation

It is now known that there are many individuals who have three bowel movements daily and others who have a bowel movement about once in two days, yet both these groups of individuals enjoy good health.

Because many animals and the members of some more or less wild native tribes have a bowel movement after each meal, some may think that this should apply to all men, but Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, was able to show a few years ago that an individual could remain healthy with a bowel movement just twice a week.

However the general opinion that the normal individual should have at least one bowel movement daily is held by most physicians. The constipated individual is, however quite common and constipation slows him up both mentally and physically.

After mentioning, the forms of constipation due to obstruction, to a sluggish gall bladder with lack of bile, to anaemi, to ptosis of the abdominal organs, to painful piles or tiny tears at lower end of bowel, Dr. T. F. Reuther, Chicago, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, gives the following common sense suggestions to prevent constipation.

1—Arise one-half hour earlier than usual.

2—Drink a glass of warm or hot water.

3—Spend ten minutes doing exercises that will exercise chest and abdomen—bending and twisting exercises, keeping knees straight and deep breathing exercises.

4—Eat a good breakfast including fresh or stewed fruits. The undernourished patient should take cream and butter with the meal.

5—Sit down and read for a while. This gives time for desire to go to stool to occur before going to work.

6—Take a lunch and dinner with fresh salads or cooked vegetables or fruits.

7—Go to bed one-half to an hour earlier to make up for getting up earlier.

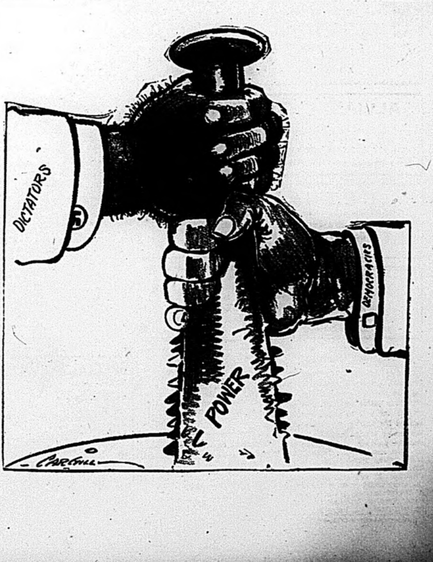
8—If a small amount of paraffin oil is to be taken or put up into rectum, this is done at bedtime.

9—So live during the day that there is no 'constant' worry or mental strain or excessive physical fatigue. Don't take an hour or more of hard exercise one day and no more for a week. Spasmodic exercise and late evening engagements are unwise.

Constipation is an ailment which lowers vitality and requires the same patient treatment as other ailments.

HOPEFUL HIKERS

Somewhere south of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a couple of hitch-hikers thumbed hopefully as they displayed a large sign, "Atlanta." Which raises the question: Why not require all motorists to display signs indicating their destinations? You know — like the street cars. Then the hikers could relax and be comfortable until the right car came along. It would be so in keeping with the spirit of the times.—Business Week.



"DAUGHTER" OF THE REGIMENTS!

The Crimean War introduced cigarettes to Englishmen. Some tales have it that the soldiers were so badly off for everything, including pipes, that they rolled in cartridge paper any tobacco they could beg, or any dried leaves that would smoke. Certainly they were in a desperate plight. Legend has it that Florence Nightingale, as she walked the hospital wards, lamp in hand on her ceaseless errand of mercy, would light the cigarettes of the sick and wounded.

But it was the Great War which taught the world the convenience of the cigarette and made it everybody's smoke. One army commander reported to his war office, "Tobacco is as indispensable as the daily ration; we must have thousands of tons of it without delay".

To supply the demand for cigarettes and other forms of tobacco, Canada has built up a great industry—tobacco growing, manufacturing, distributing—an industry which is a vital factor in this country's progress and prosperity.

Capital Close-ups of Week

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, April 15—(CP)— Widespread trepidation is apparent in the capital over business uncertainty resulting from the international confusion but there appears to be an impression in government circles that this lag may be dissipated by a combination of domestic and foreign circumstances.

Indications on Parliament Hill point to business stimulus through the high-geared armament program and through the public works program. Rumors still persist that the works program will be enlarged by further supplementary estimates or a works bill.

Financial experts here are convinced that the field for foreign investment in Canada is improving and it is felt that more money from Britain and abroad will find its way into Canadian industry as a direct result of recurring European crises.

The anticipated revival in United States business is another optimistic feature which, it is contended in lobby gossip, will go a long way in restoring business confidence.

Man of The Week

J. S. Woodsworth has achieved one of the sweetest triumphs of his 19 years in parliament. It also is a victory for the working man whose rights and cause he has espoused during his entire public life.

But the C.C.F. leader and member for Winnipeg North Centre happened not to be in his seat in the Commons to enjoy personally the climax to his years of work when Justice Minister Lapointe told the Commons the Criminal Code will be amended to make it unlawful for employers to interfere with workers joining trade unions. Session after session Mr. Woodsworth has battled for legislation of this type and finally the government adopted it on its own authority.

Labor Minister Rogers is reported to be the cabinet member who complioned the amendment in council. It is interpreted as an indication of the trend of government relations towards labor and the growing recognition of the place of trade unions in modern economic life.

Political Straws

The Senate will launch into the trade treaty debate as soon as it reconvenes next Tuesday evening, but little trouble is anticipated by the government....Sir Lyman P. Duff, who will serve for several more years as Chief Justice of Canada despite the fact he is 74, works daily at his office with youthful enthusiasm. At present he is preparing his judgments on 20 important cases before the high court. One close friend applauds him: "Sir Lyman is a Canadian legend, a national institution."....

The much-discussed Gardiner-Euler feud about overlapping jurisdiction of their departments seems to have been settled amicably once and for all. The Agriculture Minister and the Minister of Trade and Commerce work together on the new deal farm program....

It is rumored Finance Minister Dunning will accept the Liberal nomination in Carleton, instead of his Prince Edward Island constituency, if he decides to remain in politics after dissolution of the present parliament. Doubts are expressed again that he will stay in public life. His tangle with the Social Crediters on the government's borrowing bill appeared to take a lot out of him. After hours of difficult debate, he finally asked the Speaker's permission to remain seated while he talked. Seldom has this been done in the Commons.... Conservative leader Manion is considering running in Fort William, Ont., his long-time seat before he was defeated in 1935. At present he represents London....

Defence Whispers

The National Defence Department will establish an air base probably this year on strategic Anticosti Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Several young Royal Canadian Air Force Pilots, winding up their training at Trenton, Ont., air station, expect to be assigned to the new base.... Substantial deliveries of new aircraft will be made to the Department within the next six weeks....Somewhat ahead of schedule, production of completed Bren guns will begin in Toronto in the fall....

A new angle in the neutrality controversy has cropped up in corridor gossip. It is pointed out that Newfoundland is a British crown colony and if Canada should remain aloof from a war involving the Empire Britain's enemies might conceivably seize the island and establish air bases in Newfoundland and prove a menace to continued neutrality of the Dominion....

Red Chamber Bustle

The Senate is not sitting these days but there is plenty of activity in the Upper House as preparations are made for the greatest spectacle seen in the Chamber—the King giving royal assent to bills or possibly proroguing parliament. The throne of the Princess Louise, presented to Her Royal Highness when she was in Canada from 1878 to 1883 with her husband the Marquis of Lorne, then Governor General, has been brought from the Archives and placed on the dais for the Queen to occupy. The King will sit in the Speaker's chair also on the dais.

Demand for seats in the small galleries, is tremendous. It will be a silent show as far as the King is concerned if he gives royal assent for he does not say a word— the Senate clerk does all the speaking for the Governor General or King on such occasions, using the first person. In the event of prorogation His Majesty will read the Speech from the Throne.

Capital Cuffnotes

The national war memorial is propably the world's only steam-heated monument. It was erected on the site of the old post office in downtown Ottawa and the heating plant, part of the government's central heating system, was left intact in the excavation. The heat is turned on for chilly days to warm the workmen completing the elaborate base of the monument. When the memorial is completed the heating system will be dispensed with.

There is some doubt now whether the original plan to bring several thousand refugees to Canada from Central Europe will be fully undertaken due to the German invasion of Czecho-Slovakia......Trans-Atlantic demonstration passenger flights from Montreal to London and return might be made this summer, sponsored by Imperial Airways and Trans-Canada Air Lines. ....Grote Stirling (Con. Yale) bears an amazing resemblance to the late Woodrow Wilson, United States President. But he does not carry the torch for the League of Nations.

The King's Grandfather "Shoots" the Chaudiere

Having fulfilled an important purpose of his visit to Canada in 1860 — the cornerstone of the new House of Parliament in Ottawa "well and truly laid"—H.R.H. Albert Edward, first Prince of Wales to visit Canada, turned to lighter things. Fêtes, entertainments and receptions were climaxed with a descent of the Chaudiere Falls on the Ottawa River.

The Royal party, some twenty people, embarked upon a crib, part of a large lumber raft, which floated down slides or inclined planes adjoining the Falls to the smooth water below. The whole slide was divided into sections, some much steeper than others, by "floating aprons" of timber to break the speed. The trip was found "very exciting".

The year 1847, thirteen years prior to this historic visit, witnessed the birth of the Canada Life, the first Canadian life insurance company. In 92 years of progress, the Company has grown to be one of the strongest of co-operative organizations, and now distributes an average of approximately five hundred thousand dollars each week to those it serves.

Horse's Lameness Turns Out to be A Broken Leg

Disdaining a slight lameness of his horse when one mile of his mail route near Eldorado had been completed, James Holland stared in surprise when examination, undertaken after the animal was unable to start after stopping at a mail-box, revealed a fracture of the animal's leg, just below the stifle-joint, according to the North Hastings Review.

Forced to leave the injured animal on the spot, Holland returned home for another horse and completed his route, later returning with neighbors who assisted him in splintering the animal's leg, and loading it into a truck for conveyance to its stable.

For distribution "by mail only," a consignment of beautifully lithographed books, 'Canada Calls You' has been received by the local Chamber of Commerce from the Dominion Tourist Bureau, Ottawa, and will be issued from the office.

The tourist season if off to a good start it is reported by the office with numerous visitors in cars and trailers now passing through the city from points south of the border. Numerous enquiries have also been received lately from intended vacationers asking information on county resorts.

On Tuesday, April 4th., a shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boulter Johnston, Harold, for Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Johnston.

A great many neighbours, relatives and friends from the surrounding district were present to enjoy the programme, and the delicious lunch.

Rev. Mr. Walker took charge of the programme, which was as follows:

Recitation by Della McMaster.
Community singing, with Miss Irene Tucker at the piano.
Piano duet, by Misses Laura and Irene Tucker.
Vocal solo by Miss Mina Dracup.
Chairman's address.
Address to the bride and groom, read by R. Sine.

The gifts, which consisted of a rocking chair, a coffee table with table mirror and silver flower dish, were then presented and the bride and groom responded in suitable words.

Following this, the crowd sang "For they are Jolly Good Fellows" and speeches were given by Mr. Tucker, Mr. Sarles and Mr. Donald.

The programme closed with a verse of a hymn and the Benediction. Several other gifts were received by the young couple. The lunch served was delicious, and provided an opportunity for a social get-together.

The address read to the bride and groom was as follows:

Harold, Ontario,
April 4, 1939

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Johnston:

Dear Lorne and Marian:

We, your community friends and neighbours have assembled in your home this evening to bring to you our sincere good wishes for a very happy married life together.

Although a stranger to us now, Marian, we hope that you will find among us many friends to replace those whom you hold dear and from whom you are separated in your former home community. We are more than pleased to offer our best wishes and high hopes for a sunny and happy future.

We need no better proof than the number of friends present, Lorne, to show how you rank among us. At public and high school, in the neighbourhood and especially among our young folk, you have made friends right and left, and we know that as you continue along life's path with your partner to guide and cheer you, this friend-making merit will stand you in good stead.

We have been proud of your records in school and of your growing success as a teacher. We welcome your bride to our midst and congratulate you on your good fortune and obvious choice.

As a token of our esteem and good will, we ask you to accept these gifts, hoping they may serve as pleasant reminders of your community friends.

Signed on behalf of the community,—Roy Sine, Ivan Sarles, Earl McMaster, Murney Kirkey, Leslie Thompson.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Racing Lady"

"The Higgins Family"

A young girl gives a smug automobile magnate a lesson on sportsmanship in Damon Runyon's thrilling story of the turf, 'Racing Lady' produced for the screen by RKO Radio and coming next to the McCarthy Theatre. Ann Dvorak, Smith Ballew and Harry Carey are co-featured.

An automobile manufacturer played by Smith Ballew engages a young girl, Ann Dvorak, steeped in the fine traditions of "The Sport of Kings", to train his string of thoroughbreds. To him, his horses are nothing but a publicity aid, and he cares only about "winning."

The girl is finally caught by his mania for the spectacular, until the financier wants to keep out of the running the horse she has raised from a colt because he is not sure it can win. She then rebels.

Recognized as one of the greatest American sports writers, Runyon has fashioned a throbbing story about a subject which has long been a favorite with him. Other angles are adapted from the story "Odds are Even" by J. Robert Bren and Norman Houston.

Miss Dvorak, Ballew and Carey are supported by Frank M. Thomas, Berton Churchill, Ray Mayer, Hattie McDanels, Willie Best, Lew Payton and others. Wallace Fox directed.

Many of the exciting racing scenes in the photoplay were filmed at the famous Santa Anita track.

Companion Feature

An honest, human down to earth story of everyday people as they really are—and packed from the very first minute that it flashes on the screen with laughs that will make your sides ache, is the second feature attraction "The Higgins Family" featuring a cast of the most lovable characters ever selected to bring a family picture to the screen, James Gleason, Lucille Gleason, Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport, Lynn Roberts, plus a score more. It is a picture straight out of the old family album of typical home-spun likeable people of yesterday, today and tomorrow. Do not miss this comedy—rated the maddest to ever flash across a motion picture screen.

"Stagecoach"

Rated four stars by Liberty magazine and raved about by the large audiences who have already seen it at the McCarthy Theatre, "Stagecoach" is now being presented for the last times at the McCarthy theatre. Every movie-goer should see this massive production —it will thrill you as never before has any picture ever made, has done.

AT THE BELLE

"HUCKLEBERRY FINN"

Mickey Rooney is the attraction now on the Belle screen in his first solo starring vehicle, Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn", successor to "Tom Sawyer". The new picture tells the story of a Mississippi River boy and his adventures, dramatic, comical and patriotic, while seeking to aid a runaway slave to escape to a free state in the days before the Civil War.

Much of the picture was filmed on the Sacramento River, serving for the Mississippi, where the raft trip of Huck and the runaway slave, the invasion of the swindlers "The King" and "The Duke", and the race of a steamer to save the slave from a lynch mob, were staged.

Richard Thorpe, director of "The Crowd Roars" and other hits, filmed the new picture. Mickey plays the title role, with the rascally but comical "King" played by Walter Connolly and his fellow crook by William Frawley. Lynne Carver and Jo Ann Sayers play the heiresses whom Huck saves by exposing the crooks. Jim, the slave, is played by Rex Ingram, noted Negro actor who played "De Lawd" in "Green Pastures", and Elizabeth Risdon is seen as the Widow Douglass, the boy's benefactress.

Highlights include the absurd "Romeo and Juliet" performance with Connolly as Romeo and Rooney as Juliet, the negro's rescue of the boy when he is bitten by a snake, the steamer race up the river and accident on a sand bar, and the lynching sequence, with other details taken directly from the pages of the original book.

"Wanted No Master" is the title of a refreshing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer miniature introducing a group of highly trained canines. The Belle Newsreel with its newest in World News Events, and "Cairo" a delightful traveltalk in color completes a splendid program of screen entertainment.

The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, April 16

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds augury of many interesting occurrences, with much moving about or short journeys, probably in the pursuit of pleasure. All pertaining to the social, spiritual or intellectual life flourishes, but be alert to some peculiar, subtle or treacherous situations or persons.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very active and interesting year, with much developing in the personal as well as business affiliations. However, there may be certain threatening circumstances which should be wisely sidetracked by vigilance, sound judgment and precaution lest there be some peculiar reactions.

A child born on this day may be energetic, industrious, original and inventive. It also may use shrewd or crafty ways of exploitation. Its social life should be eventful and happy.

For Monday, April 17

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a very interesting and eventful one. There are auguries of much sudden and far-reaching activity, both of a business and financial nature, in which high objectives may be attained by drastic management of dubious situations. Be cautious with writings or documents and seek support from superiors or important personages, who will be friendly and generous.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a very important year in which definite progress may be made in the direction of high ambitions and desires. This may come with drastic or dramatic action, and with the endorsement of influential persons. But be careful with papers or writings lest an adverse predicament cause loss or misunderstanding.

A child born on this day may be alert, clever, versatile and progressive, with probably some revolutionary ideas of reform.

UP IN SMOKE

With the exception of Virginia and Turkish brands, most popular cigarettes contain from twenty-three to twenty-seven kinds of tobacco, blended scientifically. So-called cigarette paper is manufactured from bleached linen rags and old ships' cordage gathered in the ports of the wide world. It is treated with a solution of salt-peter to make it burn at the same rate of speed that occurs in the combustion of the tobacco.—Bob Davis, in New York Sun.

PLAINFIELD W.I.

The April meeting of the Plainfield Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Beatty on Wednesday afternoon, April 12, with an attendance of 24 adults and 8 children.

The meeting opened with community singing led by Mrs. E. Denyes, followed by the ode and the Lord's prayer in unison. The roll call was answered with "Maple sugar and its value". The correspondence was read and a number of business matters discussed.

Letters of thanks were read from members who had received fruit and flowers during illness.

Mrs. William White, district president from Roslin, addressed the meeting.

Her address was very interesting and was enjoyed by all present. The program was as follows:

Solo, Mrs. Moore; topic, "Industries of Hastings", Mrs. E. Denyes; reading, Mrs. H. Harrison; reading, Mrs. J. Colden.

A contest on "best maple sugar" was held with Mrs. D. Hall winning first prize and Mrs. E. Denyes second. Collection was taken by Miss Isabella Elliott. The meeting closed with the National Anthem after which lunch was served and a vote of thanks tendered the hostess for her kind hospitality.

FOXBORO GUILD

The April meeting of the Guild and W.C.S. of the Presbyterian Church was held in the Sunday school room with the president in the chair and in absence of the president of the W.M.S., Mrs. Lake took both meetings opening by the singing of hymn 214. Rev. Mr. McDonald read the Scripture lesson and also led in prayer. Roll call was answered with a verse of Scripture starting with the letter "A". A reading "The Strike" bl Mrs. McDonald was much enjoyed. Business was discussed and it was decided to hold a quilting. Miss Hamm gave the treasurer's report for the W.M.S. A reading, 'It's in Your Face" was given by Miss Watt. Collection was 73 cents. Hymn 431 and the Lord's prayer closed the meeting.

AIKEN'S W. M. S.

The Women's Missionary Society of Aiken's United Church held their April meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. Thos. Irwin.

The opening numbers were piano music by Mrs. Perry Hamilton and an Easter poem "Thirty-three Years" read by Mrs. Irwin. A hymn was sung.

Easter thoughts were given in answer to the Roll Call. Letters of appreciation were read from Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Saylor, Mrs. Ross McNary and Mrs. Finkle, for cards sent them during illness and bereavement. Mrs. Urvan Perry expressed gratitude for remembrance sent Mr. Perry and also her mother, Mrs. George Parry.

The last chapter of the Study Book "Beckoning Frontiers", was presented by Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton, assisted by Mrs. Leon McMullen, Mrs. S. Westover, Mrs. U. Perry, and Mrs. A. Saylor.

The purpose of this chapter was to challenge each member to face her own responsibility in "Making Canada Christian" and realize the unfinished task of the United Church of Canada.

The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Urvan Perry with a reading on the Scripture by Mrs. S. Westover, followed by prayer by Mrs. S. Spafford. With many members absent through illness at the Mar. meeting, it was decided to hold over the Presbyterial report until the April meeting. The delegate, Mrs. Fred Moon, then gave a full and interesting report of sessions held at the W. M. S. Presbyterial in Picton.

At Mrs. Moon's request, Mrs. Spafford reviewed the address, "Our funds and what they mean" as given by Mrs. Thompson, of Dominion Board, (Secretary of Christian Stewardship and Finance). Mrs. Carroll's address, "New Life in China" as given at the Presbyterial, was reviewed by Mrs. E. Hubble.

Appreciation was expressed for these reports, and the meeting was closed with singing the Hymn, "From Ocean to Ocean" and the W. M. S. Watchword.

Tact is Your Ally

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Now that we are getting a little older he is always talking about marriage. I've known him for six years. I'm not ready to marry, and this eternal talk about wedding bells bores me to tears. Please tell me how I can politely tell him I don't want his friendship any longer.

Doubtful

It would be pretty hard for even the most experienced diplomat to tell a person politely that his friendship is no longer desired. You could say that, of course, but it wouldn't be tactful. And you might turn an admirer into an enemy. Better try a little tapering off. Decline dates from your admirer, and when he starts talking about marriage, talk about the weather, although not about the flowers that bloom in the spring.

Our Melting Pot

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My daughter is very much in love with a man and they are trying to get my consent to marry. And while I like him very much, in spite of the difference of nationality, yet my husband and friends think I do wrong in consenting to the match.

She is of age, doesn't require my consent. Yet I feel she will be influenced very greatly by my feeling in the matter. The man in question comes from a good family, has character and personality, and is very much my ideal of a good husband. Still, I know if the marriage takes place, my entire family will never forgive either of us.

To me a difference in nationality doesn't count, if the individual is in every way worthy.

A Perplexed Mother

Considering that this country is a melting pot, and has had many splendid citizens of the nationality to which your husband and family object, I think their point of view is not broad-minded.

It seems strange that we have so much racial intolerance and religious bigotry in a country where all of our ancestors were immigrants.

Mutual Faith and Love

Dear Miss Fairfax

Please let me differ with you concerning a recent article "Mutual Interests Make for Successful Marriage". You speak of the necessity of husband and wife having congenial tastes. Our story was different.

When I met my wife, I was in the Navy. She was a small town girl, bound by religious family bigotry. I had few religious or other inhibitions. In spite of these difference, we had a wonderfully successful marriage. I realized the things I liked best in my wife were the things that atracted me during our courtship, so I never tried to change her. And she was satisfied to leave me as I was when we met. Our sons loved and respected us.

Our life was one continuous honeymoon. It was always a thrill to turn the corner of our block and know that I was home again. When I lost her, the sun seemed clouded over, and there isn't any aim to life.

I turn a deaf ear to my friends' suggestions that I marry again, and I wonder if God did not break the mould when he fashioned her.

R. P.

It's good news to hear of at least one perfect marriage in a day's batch of letters. I still maintain that mutual interests make for successful marriages. And certainly this sailor and his wife had plenty of mutual interest. They had faith in each other, they believed in love, their children had a happy home life,— what better definition of mutual interests can be given? She was intensely religious and he was not, but they did not nag each other which is certainly wise.

The Way of a Man and a Maid— And the Wedding Budget

Romance is in the air these bright Spring days. And along with starry-eyed romance come earth-bound questions about wedding budgets. What are the wedding expenses paid for by the bride's family? And what details of the wedding are the financial responsibility of the bridegroom? It's very important that the ones most concerned with the wedding plans should be thoroughly familiar with these responsibilities.

Let's list them:

These are the expenses paid by the bride's family:

The bride's trousseau

The bride's wedding costume, dress, veil and so forth

Usually the household linens.

All expenses connected with the wedding invitations, cards, and announcements

Bouquets of the bridal attendants; maid of honor, bridesmaids and flower girls.

Presents to the bridal attendants

All expenses (with the exception of the minister's fee) connected with the church: decorations, music fees, the carpet from church to door, the awning, and so forth.

Transportation of the bridal party to the church and reception

All expenses connected with the reception or breakfast, whether this takes place at the bride's home or in a hotel or assembly room or club: decorations, music, food, service, boxes of wedding cake and so forth.

The bridegroom's expenses are

The bachelor dinner

The marriage license

The wedding ring

The bride's bouquet

A corsage to the bride's mother, and a corsage to his mother.

The clergyman's fee

Gifts to his best man and ushers, besides their ties, gloves and boutonnieres.

He also provides the car in which he and his best man come to the ceremony, this car often being used by the married couple when they leave the church for the reception and when they depart after the reception.

Wedding present to the bride

The expenses of the wedding trip.

Manners of the Moment

When you are talking with someone show your knowledge but don't show it "off". There's a great difference here.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infectious Period of Whooping Cough Starts with First Symptoms

Common colds are the only infectious diseases the Dionne Quintuplets have had. I sincerely hope they never get whooping cough. The prospect of the whole five whooping at once is a little upsetting.

I don't suppose many infectious diseases have longer courses or more far-reaching effects than whooping cough. It is very common in temperate climes, and although it doesn't come in epidemics, it is usually present in every city at almost any time of the year.

I have always felt that it is much better for children to have whooping cough in the spring. If they do, then they have the whole summer to recover. But if they catch it in the fall, they usually wind up with bronchitis and cough most of the winter.

The incubation period —the time between exposure and the first symptom—varies greatly. Sometimes it is only a couple of days: sometimes two weeks. It is reassuring to know that during this period of incubation, the person doesn't pass the germs on to others. But the moment the first symptom appears, then the disease is highly infectious.

Mostly it is spread through direct contact with an infected person, but it can also be spread by a carrier. It is also carried by handkerchiefs and clothing, and great care should be taken to destroy materials that have been exposed to cough.

Whooping cough gets a good chance to spread because your child won't start out to whoop right away. Usually it starts with a head cold, accompanied by quite a severe cough. In this stage, it is very infectious, and it may be ten days before the whoop appears. In fact, I've known children to have the disease and never whoop at all.

Once you hear the whoop, there isn't any mistaking it. In fact, an old grandmother who has heard the same cough many times can diagnose the disease as well as many a young medical student who is trying to relate the spasms with what he has read in his medical text books.

The term "whoop" is very descriptive of the cough. It is derived from the fact that at the height of the illness, the child will give a series of explosive coughs that follow each other in such rapid succession that he cannot get his breath. At the end of the spasm the child is blue in the face, and as he exploded that last cough, he sucks in his breath with a whooping sound.

Children are given to whooping more at night than in the daytime with the result that no one in the house gets much sleep. I think this is partly due to lack of fresh air. A child will be out in the fresh air and sunshine all day and will whoop very little. But when he is brought indoors and goes to bed in a room not properly ventilated, then he begins to whoop. I say I think this is the reason because it seems to me that in recent years, with people more or less reconciled to fresh air in bedrooms, there isn't as much whooping as formerly.

THE GOLDEN GIRL

CHAPTER I

Miss Harriet Endicott sat very erect in her high-backed chair and slowly crumpled in her hand a letter which she had received in her morning mail. A faint, unwonted flush showed in her cheeks, and her thin lips were set in a straight line.

At a small table near the window her secretary waited in silence, notebook ready and pencil poised. Spring came in at the window, delicate and gay, and Gloria Staunton had maneuvered her chair as close to it as possible. She stole a glance at the loveliness outside and wondered how much longer she would have to sit there pretending that she didn't notice anything, and what dynamite there could be in that letter. Perhaps Jack Moreland had at last tried his aunt's patience too far, but if it was another bill it must be a stiff one to make Miss Endicott look like that. She seemed actually proud of the way he threw money around. Gloria wrinkled her nose faintly, and then smothered an honest sigh.

Her roving glance drifted out of the window again. She wondered idly what it felt like to belong in a place like this—really to belong? To have everything one happened to fancy promptly bought and handed over, practically on a silver tray? And a generous allowance thrown in! Never to worry about tomorrow or next week, or rent or jobs or bargain sales, or runs in one's stockings, or—

"You may write to Mr. Pritchard, of Pritchard and Ames."

Gloria nearly jumped. The pencil scrambled into action.

"Tell Mr. Pritchard that I am obliged to him for his advice, but see no reason to alter my decision to sell the Cheriton County fours. Also that if he does not care to handle the matter according to my wishes I shall be obliged to find another broker to look after my affairs."

Silence again. Gloria made swift notes, and waited. The erect old figure did not move. The unwonted flush had died, but the lips still held their uncompromising line.

So it wasn't Jack Moreland, Gloria reflected. The senior partner of Pritchard and Ames had presumed to give Miss Endicott some advice that she hadn't liked, and was to be taken down for his pains. What an old autocrat she could be when anyone questioned her wishes.

That was a warning to Gloria Staunton, if she wanted to keep a good job.

A vagrant sunbeam slanted through the window and found the brightest spot in the room, which was Gloria's taffy-colored head. A pale taffy, warm with gold. Outside, a tall young man in white flannels came across the lawn and stopped to look up at the second story window where the shining head showed. A mildly bored expression disappeared; he brightened perceptibly. From the tail of her eye Gloria caught sight of the loitering figure, and from that moment the framing window showed no more than a cool profile and dutifully lowered eyes.

Miss Endicott spoke suddenly. "You may write also to the Benham and engage rooms for next week. I shall arrive on Tuesday, and be sure that they give my usual suite. There was trouble about it the last time and it was very annoying."

"I can telephone and make sure of it."

"Very well. That will be all this morning, Miss Staunton."

At the door Gloria stopped abruptly. She had to, as someone else was occupying most of the available space there. Jack Moreland grinned down at her engagingly from a shade under six feet.

"Good morning, Miss Secretary."

"Good morning, Mr. Moreland."

He showed symptoms of lingering, but she whisked past him and down the hall, her cool greeting crisp in his ears. There could be no doubt that his aunt's pretty secretary intended to keep philandering nephews in their place. A lively light danced in the young man's eyes and he made a half turn to follow her. Then he remembered Aunt Harriet and went in.

"Through for the morning, Aunt Harriet?"

"Yes, Jack."

Some magic smoothed out the lines of lingering annoyance from her face. A willful old woman, spoiled and quite unreasoning in her demands on the rest of the world, Harriet Endicott had one passionate and selfless devotion, her love for her dead sister's son.

Meanwhile the young man was nearly five years out of college and cheerfully devoting himself to the job of having a good time.

She patted his arm, hard and muscular under her old fingers.

"I thought you would be going back to town. It's not very amusing for you here with only an old aunt for company. If you weren't starting off with the Selwyns so soon I should invite some people out for the week end."

"Oh, there's plenty to do without having a crowd around." He wandered idly around the room and came back. "I've decided not to go with the Selwyns. I've done the coast to coast trip several times anyway, and this would mean three cars eating each other's dust all the way from New York to Los Angeles. You don't want a mob on a trip like that."

Jack did not usually explain his motives in quite so much detail. Miss Endicott gave him a sharply curious glance, but accepted the decision without comment. She was always glad to have Jack stay at home.

When she spoke again it was to introduce a new subject.

"I understand that Frances Payne is back."

"So I hear. I must look her up some day." He subdued a lively twinkle at Aunt Harriet's somewhat obvious diplomacy, and neatly changed the subject.

"I suppose there's nothing doing today that you'd like me to hang around for? I'm off for a sail. If I go over to the Point I may not be back for lunch."

When he had gone a certain rigidity of the straight old figure seemed to relax. The fingers of one hand moved nervously on the arm of her chair.

"I wonder if Frances has had anything to do with his giving up this trip?"

She frowned. Her thoughts came jerkily.

"They say that Dick Payne ran through all of his money and most of hers before he died. I wonder if Jack knows that? He would be capable of marrying her just for that reason—if she tried to get him back. He has always had that streak of sentiment. Just like his father...... None of the Endicotts were soft. It won't do. Jack must not marry a penniless girl."

Once in the room which served her as office and sitting room in one, Gloria dropped her notebook on the desk with a comforting bang. She was not naturally a noisy person, but there were times when youth and abounding energy were nearly choked in the smothering decorum which Miss Endicott required of her social secretary. And Gloria could not afford to be discharged. Not in these times! Nevertheless her smooth brow clouded as she looked out at the tempting morning.

"Now Glory," she admonished herself. "What are you glooming about? Isn't this one of the very things that you've worked and clawed and fought for? Didn't you practically run away from Uncle Robert because you were sick of being a poor relation and wanted to run your life for yourself?"

She turned away from the open window with its enticing view of spacious lawn and old elms and the distant flash of sails on the waters of the Sound. She sighed a little and turned back to humdrum work. The call to the Benham was put in. Then the typewriter keys clicked briskly. "Mr. William R. Pritchard——" a pucker came between Gloria's brows.

"I wish she wouldn't do this. It's a nasty letter, anyway. She's angry at him because he presumed to advise her against selling those Cheriton County fours, and I don't wonder that he did. That's the second time in the past four months that she has sold gilt-edged bonds without letting them reinvest the money. If she were playing the market through some other broker I'd probably have found out about it. That means she's spending her principal."

Gloria's reflections did not interfere with her nimble fingers. Miss Endicott's curt instructions were translated into a letter, softened as much as her secretary dared. The sheet came out of the machine with a brisk whir.

"Any callers allowed?"

A neat movement of wrist and arm turned the letter face downward on Gloria's desk.

"No," she said calmly, "I'm busy."

"With Aunt Harriet's mail? I don't believe," Jack observed, "that my dear aunt writes three letters a year which couldn't go out tomorrow or next week as well as today. And it's an absolutely perfect morning for a sail."

"Then you'd better start," she said pointedly. "It's nearly eleven now and I must finish these letters. There—that's a long-distance call. Please go."

The telephone whirred insistently. Gloria turned to answer it, and became the absorbed secretary.

"Room Clerk at the Hotel Benham? I am speaking for Miss Harriet Endicott. Will you please reserve—"

She evidently meant to ignore his existence. The young man in the doorway looked plaintive and then amused. For a moment more he lingered, and then with a faint shrug of resignation turned down the hall. A few minutes later Gloria heard his clear diminishing whistle from the lawn below.

She put the telephone down with an exasperated sigh. Much Jack Moreland knew about business of earning a living if he thought that a secretary could walk out on her work at that hour of the morning! But it would have been fun....

CHAPTER II.

If Frances Payne's affairs were really in the precarious condition that Miss Endicott surmised, no one would have guessed it as she entered the lobby of the Benham, slim, poised and perfectly turned out in smart black and silver fox. Frances had good looks and knew how to make the most of them.

Impulse had made Frances turn toward the Benham that morning. A glimpse of its imposing facade had reminded her that this was the time when Miss Harriet Endicott usually spent exactly three weeks in town. At least she had always done so in the days when Frances Varden had been a young girl running in and out of Beechwood, and when Miss Harriet once established a custom it could be counted on to endure. A funny, stiff old thing, Frances reflected, and not any too agreeable to people she didn't like, but Beechwood was lovely, and terrifically respectable, and if Jack was home there would be plenty of amusing things to do. Jack simply must be home.

It was this last which had turned impulse into brisk purpose. A bit of personal contact would be much more helpful in renewing old acquaintance than a note or a telephone call. Miss Harriet had always detested telephones. A very useful instrument for making Pullman reservations or communicating with tradesmen, but socially impossible.

"Miss Endicott has not yet arrived." The clerk at the desk was politely regretful. He volunteered a little more, before the faint lift of beautifully curved brows. "We are expecting her, but not until next week. I have just received a telephone call that she will be here on Tuesday. Will you leave a message?"

"No, it's not important."

Frances was thoughtful as she turned away, her lids drooping for an instant over a flash of annoyance. The desk clerk had been more enlightening than he knew. There were only four places where Miss Endicott ever went, and the Benham was one of them. She was not here, therefore she must be at Beechwood, for if she were still in the South, where she frequently went for the winter, or in Washington, where she would certainly stop on her way north, she would have made the reservation by letter. And if Miss Endicott was at Beechwood, why, Mrs. Payne asked herself, had no invitation come, or even a suggestion for dear Frances to run out for a visit? Time had been when Miss Harriet had lost no opportunity to throw Dick and Frances Varden together. There was food for some hard thinking in that. It might be because dear Frances was no longer a prospective heiress—although heaven knew the old Endicott ought to be rich enough herself—or perhaps some wisps of gossip had blown back across the ocean about the crowd that she and Dick had run with. Or it might not mean anything in particular.

At the other end of the desk a man had lingered, unobtrusively attentive. He turned and looked after her with speculative interest. He knew that slightly arrogant profile and the clipped speech which argued an expensive finishing school and could slide so easily into insolence. A beauty, he reflected, with those brilliant dark eyes, and a temper back of them, too. Streamlined and dressed like a million dollars. The Dick Paynes had always put up a good front and had left a trail of unpaid bills behind them, if the rumors he had heard were true.

He made a quick decision and followed her, taking a short cut to intercept her at the door.

"Mrs. Payne, surely! This is great! I thought you were in London."

"I was until recently. One does come home occasionally, you know. You're Wayne Gorham—but of course you are! I didn't expect to see you here."

Frances was not sure that she wanted to see him at all. All that she really knew of him was that he had been a casual friend of Dick's and had been at their apartment two or three times. Events had proved that some of Dick's friends had been decidedly queer, but these he had seldom brought to his home. This one was at least presentable and might be amusing, and knew how to choose the right tailor. She put him in his place with that half doubt of his identity and tempered the snub with a smile.

Gorham understood her perfectly. He threw in a careless explanation.

"I came back eight months ago. My London connections didn't seem to be developing into anything more than a life line, and I decided that things were picking up here. So here I am, back in the old game. W. Gorham, Investment Securities. Modes, but my own. However, these are minor details. The big thing is that I'm in luck to see you again. How about having a bit of lunch with me and telling me all the news I've been missing? If you're not all dated up we could take a run out of town and find a good place along the way."

"That sounds rather nice. What happens to the busy broker's office when he runs off like that?"

"What are clerks and telephones for?" he countered. "Besides, I can take business along. I put through a little flier for a fellow not long ago, and if it wouldn't bore you I could stop at his place after lunch and have a chat with him about it. Name's Moreland, Jack Moreland, and he lives with an aunt who has a lot of ancestral acres up along the Sound. I hope she doesn't throw me out. I've heard she's a haughty old dame."

Frances listened, black lashes veiling bright, reflective eyes. So that was why he wanted to run out of town. She laughed.

"That's really funny. I used to live near Beechwood, and I've known them both for ages. I'll have to go with you just to show you that poor Miss Harriet isn't as alarming as you think." She looked at a platinum wrist watch. "Suppose I meet you here. Say in half an hour."

"Good. I'll be on hand."

x x x

It was only a little after three, and Gloria was free for the day. She had heard a car drive up a few moments before. Perkins had come upstairs, undoubtedly to announce callers, and presently Miss Endicott had gone down. That meant that this would be a good time to slip out for a walk through the woods. Perhaps she could coax Kelly, the Boston terrier, to go with her.

Upper and lower halls were both empty. She ran lightly down the long stairs, slowing up decorously as she neared the bottom, bright eyes alert for a chance to slip unnoticed to a side door.

A murmur of voices came to her, a man's, full and agreeable and faintly familiar. Then Miss Endicott's thin precise tones: "I am always glad to meet any of my nephew's friends." The low murmur came again, and a woman's voice. A throaty, thrilling voice. "Oh, yes, I've been back for nearly two weeks. It's lovely to be home again."

Gloria had a glimpse of a man a little beyond the archway to her left and in full view of the stairs. He was tall and well dressed and good looking in a ruddy fashion. She recognized him with a feeling of surprise that he should be calling here. He did not seem like the rest of Miss Endicott's friends.

His office had been in the same building as those of the firm of public stenographers where she had been employed before coming here. "Investment Securities" was the neat gold legend that she remembered seeing on the door, but it hadn't seemed to be a very important office. He had sent in several times to have special work done and Gloria had been detailed to it. She hadn't liked him very much. He had tried to make a dinner date with her the very first day, but Gloria was getting used to gay clients by that time, and apparently he had taken refusal good-naturedly. Then she had left to come to Beechwood and had not thought of him again.

Gloria thought that she saw a fleeting recognition in his quick glance, but it went no further. Already she was turning the corner of the stairs with demurely lowered lids, and a moment more was out of sight and slipping through an inconspicuous side door in the older wing.

In a few moments a mass of screening shrubbery lay between her and the house, and her brisk pace slackened. She skirted the edge of the grounds turning her steps toward a summer house sheltered by a riot of vines and seldom used now, where she sometimes tucked herself away for a lazy hour not wildly exciting, but at least her own. She had left a book there the day before, a rather dull book from the solemn Endicott library, and she must retrieve the poor thing before some gay little shower danced over it with irreverent feet.

From somewhere ahead of her an excited bark came. Kelly came scurrying around the summer house and halted in front of her with bright expectant eyes and a vibrating tail. She snapped inviting fingers at him.

"Come, Kelly! Come boy!"

Kelly said "Woof!", dropped his nose on his paws, wriggled from nose-tip to tail and dashed off again, joyfully out of reach.

"Oh, you darling! Come along with me. Come, boy!"

"Say that to me and see what happens," said a cheerful voice.

Gloria whirled about hastily. The summer house was empty, but on its far side Jack Moreland was leaning comfortably over the railing, looking across at her.

CHAPTER III.

"Oh!" said Gloria in a startled tone. "I just came——"

"I thought you would if I waited long enough," said Jack. "Yes, lady, the book is here, and pretty stodgy reading if you should inquire. Kelly and I have been standing guard over it for a good half hour. Ever since the typewriter stopped clicking. And if you don't think that's devotion, try it yourself. There's a bush here with a million claws on it. Yes, thanks, I'm coming in."

He gave a light spring and swung expertly over the rail.

"I thought I'd better do my scouting from the outside," he confided. "If you'd seen me first you'd have discovred that you were a Busy Secretary and marched off again. Now that we're here let's sit down and be chubby. We ought to have a lot to say to each other."

It wasn't possible to be angry with anyone so cheerfully good-natured. A dimple quivered at the corner of her mouth. He'd lay traps for her, would he?

"I'm afraid you won't have time" she said sweetly. "There are some people up at the house waiting to see you. They arrived just before you came out."

"Not for me. When any of my little playmates arrive anywhere they make themselves heard. It's probably a couple of nice old ladies who have come to see Aunt Harriet."

"One of them is a man. I saw him as I came down the stairs and I heard Miss Endicott say that any friend of yours was welcome."

"Persistent woman! We'll settle this right now."

Tall shrubbery hid the lower part of the house from their view, but two easy steps took him up on the railing where, by canting himself outward by one hand, he had a clear vista with a patch of drive at one end. He dodged back under the clematis and swung down again.

"It's a snappy car, but they're no friends of mine. I know my license plates and that one doesn't run with my mob at all. Probably some bright lad crashing the gates with a subscription list. I like it better here, thank you. See here, just beyond those evergreens, standing in front of the garage, there's a new roadster. I've had my eye on it for weeks and now it's mine and waiting for you to come along and help me try it out. We'll buzz up the road and stop off at Scarlotti's, and when we're tired of that we can hit the road again and pick up another place for dinner and—oh, well, just have a good time. Come on! I dare you!"

Gloria shook her head—rather fast because she was afraid she might weaken. This was simply a ghastly bore, being prim and dutiful Miss Staunton who mustn't allow herself to take a ride with her employer's nephew—or any other man, probably. And to stop at Scarlotti's—she'd never even seen Scarlotti's—and maybe dance or go in swimming, and have something jolly to eat and see a lot of pleasant and gay people, just having a good time. She was almost tempted to go anyway. No she'd never dare. Something else came edging into her mind, an irritating imp popping up to spoil everything. Cheriton County fours.

Miss Endicott was selling her gilt-edged securities, dipping into her principal, and Jack Moreland, who had never earned a cent in his life, had added a super-charged roadster to his string. Just like that.

"Sorry," she said coolly. "I couldn't possibly go."

"So that's that." He looked puzzled and a little dogged. "All right, let's get down to cases. Why is it that you won't ever go anywhere with me and always get so darned busy the minute I come around? No jealous fiance in the background is there?"

Gloria said, "No!" rather shortly.

"Well then," he argued, "what's the matter? Here we are, two people, a girl and a man, more or less marooned in a dullish country place and logically intended to keep each other amused. Nobody else in sight, time on our hands, places to go and things to go in, and what happens? Nothing! Not even a bit of light and airy chit-chat by the way. What's wrong?" He hesitated, frowning slightly. "If it's anything I've done, I'd like to know."

Gloria smothered an exasperated sigh. "You make it sound terribly serious!" She opened innocent eyes at him. "It isn't anything like that, really. You're exaggerating. I'm just—busy, that's all."

"Sorry, but it won't wash." He shook a reproving head at her. "I forgot to mention that I've caught sight of you several times just sitting by your window after dinner looking as lonesome as a lost baby. It's none of my business of course, but—see here, what's it all about? I like you awfully, Glory. Why can't we be friends?"

He leaned forward, his easy flippancy gone. His voice was warm and urgent. Gloria drew a long breath and glanced away.

"No," she said flatly, "we can't be friends. You ought to know that."

"Why on earth not?"

"Do I have to tell you?" She blazed out at him defiantly. "I happen to be your aunt's secretary and I need the job. Have you any idea how long I'd last if I started playing around with you—or even went out with you once or twice? Do you know what it would mean to be fired for a reason like that when I started looking for something else? Do you know what it is to tramp the streets hunting for a job, when you have to work or stop eating? No, of course you don't! You've never had to earn a cent in your life."

"I'm sorry," he said slowly. "I'm frightfully sorry. I never thought of it that way."

He reached across the brief space between them and closed his hand over hers. It was a rather surprising hand, firm, supple and strong.

"I didn't know I was making things hard for you here. I wouldn't do that—not for worlds. And I do think you're mistaken about Aunt Harriet. I know she has some stiff ideas about a lot of things, but she isn't a tyrant."

"Oh, isn't she!" thought Gloria wrathfully. She pulled her hand away. "I didn't say that she was. But I'm not taking any chances if you don't mind."

"I can think of one chance that you might take."

His tone was elaborately casual, but he kept that brightly intent look on her.

"Suppose you break that rule just once and we'll go off and have a party. A nice party. Not today because it's too late to start, and there will be a lot of things to do. We'll have to find the right place, get a license and hunt up a minister. Then we'll telegraph home for Aunt Harriet's blessing and be off to——oh, Canada, or somewhere, as long as we like. How about it?"

Gloria sat up very straight and stared at him. He wasn't joking. He looked serious, almost embarrassed—and rather nice. It was sweet of him in a way, and completely insane. Could he possibly be so blind as to think that he would get any "blessing" from Aunt Harriet Endicott if he eloped with her secretary? Merely because a doting aunt had never refused him anything before?

"Is this," she demanded, "supposed to be a proposal?"

"That was the general idea. You're a sweet kid, Glory. You're lovely, do you know that? And I'm completely sunk about you. I think I must have been all along, or I'd never have hung around this practically dead and buried place for weeks on end, but it wasn't until today that the whole of it struck me."

He was waiting, looking at her anxiously. She drew a long breath and shook her head.

"Thanks for all the nice remarks, but it really wouldn't work. Ever. Please let's forget about it."

He looked at her oddly, a puzzled line between his brows.

"You're awfully definite about it, aren't you?" he asked slowly. "Do you mind telling me—just by way of giving the knife a nice twist—how you're so certain I'd never make the grade with you? Not that I rate my charms so high, but——I just wondered."

Gloria wished he wouldn't. Why did he have to spoil things by asking so many questions?

"Do we have to go into all that? Oh well, if you want it. I think you'd be awfully nice to go places with and I'd probably like you a lot on those terms. But when it comes to marrying——that's something else. He'll have to be somebody who can stand on his own feet. I couldn't be happy with a man who didn't try to do something in the world or make anything of himself."

CHAPTER IV.

"Oh——I see." Jack spoke softly, straightened up and leaned back against the rail. "Just another playboy! I suppose I ought to be an Earnest Young Man bounding up the ladder of Success? But why be a money-grubber when you don't have to?"

"You don't see at all!" Gloria flung it back at him hotly, hesitated and went hurriedly on.

"It's silly even to talk about it. We look at everything differently, and we'd be fighting over it in six weeks. Or less. Things have always come hard for me, and for you they've always been made smooth and pleasant. You don't know what it is to be a poor relation and to know scrimping poverty, and then grudging help and petty tyrannies. I even had to fight for the right to get away from that kind of family charity and make my own living. That's why keeping my job means more to me than having a good time, and it's why I couldn't, even if I were crazy about him, marry a man who hadn't any ambitions at all except to play around—and live on an allowance from a woman."

He reddened slightly under the tan; his mouth tightened. "Thanks. At least you've been frank."

It was Gloria's turn to flush. She knew that she had been more than frank, she had been unsparingly personal. It was the kind of thing that Morelands and Endicotts did not say at all.

"I'm sorry. I didn't mean to say that last. But it is true."

"Perhaps. In part, at least." He conceded it somewhat stiffly, with an impatient movement of his shoulders. "But sometimes things can be true in one way without being quite true in——well, in spirit. So far as my living on an allowance from a woman is concerned, I might point out that Aunt Harriet and I are the last of the family and I am the logical heir to the Endicott funds, so I don't feel as much like a tame gigolo as you might think. I've always had an allowance, first from my grandfather and then from Aunt Harriet, ever since I was a kid and it came in dimes and quarters instead of a quarterly check."

He stopped abruptly and frowned, and for some reason that slight flush came again. He went on doggedly.

"And I still can't see why making money is the only thing a man ought to care for. Especially when there's no real necessity for it. Why shouldn't he do the things he enjoys instead of plugging away at a desk and making more than he's likely to need? The only kind of work I care a nickel about is messing around with the insides of engines when they go bust, and why should I take that up for a career and shove some decent garage hand out of a job?"

"Maybe not," she insisted, "but a man ought to have some aim in life. Suppose that I had agreed to marry you. And suppose your aunt had been terribly angry and had cut you out of her will. And you didn't have any allowance, or prospects, or anything. You needn't glower at me; it's happened to other people, plenty of times. Or suppose she lost all her money and had nothing, not even her home here. What would you do to support your wife and you aunt too—and pay her back for what she's done for you?"

"You make it sound extremely unpleasant. I'm not exactly an invalid, you know, and I have a few friends. I know it's no easy matter to land a decent job, either, not after you're down. And you've never tried to make a stingy little salary stretch for two people, or three, nor known how it could hurt when you couldn't give somebody else the things they ought to have. Oh, what's the use!"

She jumped up, furious at herself for having said so much, but he was on his feet swiftly, following her to the door and down the secluded path by which she had come. They walked in silence until they reached the point where the shelter of shrubbery dwindled and ran out into open lawn.

"You mustn't come any further."

Port Arthur Bear Cats Salt Away First Game of Series With Royals by Overtime Win

Winners Showed Amazing Stick Handling and Shifty Skating

SCORE IS 6-5

Pete Jokus Helped in All Goals Scored by Royals

By ROBERT CLARKE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Apr. 15 (CP)—Montreal Royals took to the fastness of a mountain retreat today to overcome an attack of what Coach Frank Carlin called "staleness" and to ponder new means of stopping the Allan Cup rush of Port Arthur's flying Bear Cats.

The Bear Cats, showing none of the effects of a long journey from the west which landed them in Montreal Thursday morning, skated to a 6-5 overtime victory here last night over Royals in the first game of a best-of-five series for the Canadian senior amateur hockey crown. Second game will be played here on Monday.

So completely mystified were the Royals by baffling stickhandling and shifty skating of the Cats, that Carlin said afterwards that a new system would have to be evolved to hold the westerners in check in the remainder of the series.

Even with the game advantage, Coach Eddie (Jazzy) Manahan of the Bear Cats refused to predict a Cup victory for his team, but sounded the note that Royals were "not beaten yet and they have a darn good team".

Couldn't Use Weight.

But 11,000 fans watched last night as the team which pounded out a five-game victory over the Toronto Goodyears in a battering eastern final seemed unable to use superior weight on the flying Cats. The Royals defence of Janke, Herman Murray and Bill Davies managed only one solid body check—and that in almost the first minute of the game by Janke.

Only little Morin, suffering from a heavy cold and a sore throat, matched their pace and was the individual star of the game with three of the Montreal goals. Pete Jotkus was high point-getter of the night, though, helping in all but one of the Montreal Tallies.

Defenceman Hugh O'Leary and Edgar Laprade, slender centreman, led the Ports with two goals each while Bones McCormack and Joe MacArthur got the other scores. Besides Morin's three, Johnny Acheson and Gerry Heffernan scored for the Royals.

Both of O'Leary's scores came in the extra session, the first on a long shot on which Goalie Patsy Seguin's view evidently was blocked and the second on a breakaway. The best Royals could do in reply was Morin's third goal in the last minute of the overtime period.

ROAMERS HOPE TO WIN ONE GAME

Edmonton Must Win or Oshawa Team Will be Junior Champs

Toronto, Apr. 15 (CP)—Backed against the wall, Edmonton Roamers go out tonight in a last effort to stem Oshawa Generals in the Memorial Cup series that has turned into a rout of the western champions. There has been nothing to indicate Roamers can win.

Despite the records showing two straight and convincing lickings, Roamers were hopeful of extending the junior hockey classic to another game at least. All Oshawa has to do to succeed St. Boniface Seals as Canadian champions is to win one of three available games.

Neither coach planned drastic chances. Tracy Shaw of Oshawa picked the same lineup as won the first game 9-4, with Les Colvin replacing Dinny McMannus in the regular turnabout of goal-keepers. For Roamers, Cliff Kilburn will take over in goal from Bill Drever, who was beaten 12-4 Wednesday night.

JERSEY CITY TO PARADE ENTIRELY NEW BALL TEAM

Only Seven Players Left That Performed Last Season

TERRY TO HELP

General Manager is Sending Large Contingent Down from Giants

By FRANK DUNHAM

Jersey Journal Baseball Writer

Baton Rouge, La., April 15 (AP)—Making his managerial debut in the International Baseball League ,Bert Niehoff will parade to the post opening day with a Jersey City entry composed, for the most part, of new faces.

So thoroughly did general manager Bill Terry dismantle last season's seventh place club that the new pilot was greeted this spring by only two pitchers, an outfielder and an infielder who had seen regular service with the 1938 outfit.

They were Roland Stiles and Roy Joiner, right-hand and left-hand twirlers, respectively; Ray Honeycutt, shortstop, and Lincoln Blakely, an outfielder. In addition ,his initial squad embraced four other hurlers who had been in and out of Jersey Giant uniforms at one time or another during 1938. They were Johnny Hubbell, Bob Carpenter, Tom Ferrick, Johnny Meketi and Lin Watkins.

Niehoff was handicapped during most of the spring training by the absence of players he had been promised by the parent club. Among the original batch sent to replace players disposed of during the winter only three had class "AA" experience, 38-year-old pitcher Bill Harris, last season with Buffalo Bisons and Boston Red Sox; Johnny Mihalic, veteran American Association second-baseman, and Sambo Leslie, bench-warming first-sacker from New York Giants.

Then Terry returned Tom Padden, last season's first-string catcher, and followed up with Tommy Hafey, a third sacker from New York Giants' camp, Lou Chiozza, versatile performer with the Polo Grounders since 1936, and Johnny Dickshott, slugging outfielder, purchased from Boston Bees.

Prospects soared still higher with the announcement that Terry would bolster Niehoff's pitching with a right-hander from his own roster, and another southpaw, to be purchased outside.

MONTREAL CAGERS LOSE TO WINDSOR

Teams Playing for Eastern Canada Title in Basketball

Windsor, Ont., April 15 (CP)—Windsor Alumni held a one-game edge on Montreal Dominion Douglas today in their best-of-three series for the Eastern Canadian senior men's basketball championship. Windsor led virtually all the way in last night's game here, but barely beat out a closing drive by the Montreal cagers to win 44-42. Second game will be played here tonight and a third game, if necessary, will be played Monday.

Edgar Lanthier, Montreal centre, scored 17 points and was leading a Montreal comeback during the final three minutes of the game when he was banished with four personal fouls.

Three minutes before the game ended, Windsor led 42-32. Ferraro scored a field goal, Lanthier added another field goal and George Jackman another. Lanthier fouled Jack Blair as he scored a field goal to bring the Windsor score to 44. Harry Easterbrook shot from far out and scored to make Montreal's total 42 and Montreal had the ball as the game ended.

Boston Bruins Hope to Defeat Leafs and End Series Sunday

Toronto Will be Forced to Use Two Rookies in Game

TO GET TROPHY

Boston, April 14 (CP)—Having buried their Toronto jinx by gaining their first two consecutive playoff victories in history over the Maple Leafs, Boston's jubilant Bruins returned home today, proclaiming that Sunday night would mark the end of this year's Stanley Cup hockey play.

The Bruins, now leading Toronto three games to one, need but one more triumph in the best-of-seven games series to win the prized hockey trophy for the first time since 1929. At full strength they appeared capable of upholding their boast that they would make it three wins in a row over Conn Smythe's Toronto Blueshirts.

As was the case in Toronto Thursday, the Leafs will be forced to use their two latest rookie additions, Don Metz, out of the amateur ranks less than a week, and Red Heron, recalled from the Leafs' Toronto farm team after Busher Jackson went out of commission with a dislocated shoulder.

"It's no use deceiving ourselves," Smythe said, enroute to Boston.

"We haven't got a great hockey team. We can't play a team like the Bruins and win two or three in a row. Winning one takes so much out of us that we're off the next time we start."

Meanwhile, Frank Calder, National Hockey League President, was en route to Boston with the Stanley Cup. If the Bruins win Sunday, Calder will present it to Manager Art Ross, President Weston Adams and the Boston players as soon as they gain the fourth victory that is required for possession.

WINDSOR SCHOOL WINS TROPHY

Defeats Glebe School to Annex Canadian Basketball Title

London, Ont., April 15 (CP) — Windsor Vocational School, the team which played all season with only one substitute in its lineup, still is the best of Ontario's schoolboy basketball quintets.

Successfully defending its title in the Canadian Secondary Schools Athletic Association tournament which concluded here last night, Windsor took a 29-23 decision from Ottawa's powerful Glebe Collegiate entry which in the semi-finals trounced Kirkland Lake 74-13.

Kirkland Lake lost again last night, dropping a 36-12 game to Niagara Falls in the consolation round.

The sharpshooting of Scott and Dawson helped Windsor to maintain its lead. Both men had seven points while Bruegemann and Zepka tallied five. Kenny, with seven points, and Munro with five, were Ottawa's leading marksmen.

TONY GALENTO IS 'BOINED UP' OVER DEMPSEY'S QUIP

Manassa Mauler Number One "Bum" of Those He Can "Moider"

WANTS TO BET

Walking Beer-Keg Says He Will Defeat the Brown Bomber

By SID FEDER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Apr. 15 (AP) — Tony the Terrible Galento is "boined up" —all the way up to his second chin, in fact—at his old pal Jack Dempsey.

So steamed is the walking beer-keg over some remarks Dempsey passed in Kansas City the other day concerning the Galento ring ability —or lack of it—that Two-Ton Tony has now nominated the old Manassa Mauler as No. 1 on his list of "bums" he can "moider".

What's more, Tony thunders that any time Jack finds himself in the neighborhood of Main and Dey streets, Orange, N.J., he'd better walk with his guard up.

"Because as soon as I see him around my neighborhood," the Galento man said today, "I'm gonna start swinging at him".

This, Tony was warned, may not be so successful a manoeuvre . . . Dempsey still possessing two fists and all.

"What do I care," he countered, "I'll molder da bub."

Once Managed Tony.

There was a day, some five years ago, when Galento and Jack were all palsy-walsy. That was when Jack managed Tony and they were just as close as your next breath. But Dempsey's statement the other day changed all that. It seems Dempsey was quoted as saying Tony, who tangles with Joe Louis in Yankee Stadium June 28, wouldn't have as much chance against the Brown Bomber as the aging Jack Roper will have against Joe in California Monday.

"He's more than a 1000 to 1 shot," Jack contended.

"Well," Tony shouted for one and all, "I'll tell Mr. Dempsey what I'll do. I got 1,000 bucks right here to bet. And he won't have to give me 1,000 to 1. I'll take 10 to 1 on myself to beat Louis. And what's more tell that bum if he gives me the right odds, I'll bet him I kayo Louis. Now let Jack put up or shut up.

"Y'know, it looks to me like Jack is just talking for the newspapers again. It's funny, whenever he comes around my home state, New Jersey, he always roots for me."

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Two weeks from today one of England's glamour sporting events —the English Cup final brings together the Wolverhampton Wanderers and Portsmouth at Wembley Stadium. More than 100,000 fans fro mall parts of Great Britain will "go up to mighty London" for the "cup tie", while the story of the battle will be flashed to all parts of the Dominions. Gayly bedecked in the colors of their favourite team thousands of fans will jam Picadilly and the Strand in a wild hilarious day and night. Wolverhampton has won the "old mug" on two previous occasions, but Portsmouth has never been successful in lifting the final soccer honors as yet. Back in 1929 the "Southerners" retired defeated 2-0 by the Bolton Wanderers and in this year's contest face a team that has been called to win the honors since the early rounds of the competition.

The supporters of "Pompey", as the Portsmouth team is known, hold higher hopes for victory than they did in 1934 when their favourites bowed to Manchester City in the English Cup final by a 2-1 count. Since clinching a berth in the "Cup finals" the "Wolves" have not been any too impressive during First Division games, as in the Easter holiday games they only obtained three of a possible six points available. It will mark the sixth appearance of the "Wolves" in the cup final. As far back as 1893 the Straffordshire club won the trophy, defeating Everton and eighteen years later obtained a 3-1 verdict over Newcastle United. In the "Wolves" last appearance in the final cup game in 1921, they were beaten by the then famous Tottenham Hotspurs one to nil.

Not since 1934 has southern England displayed so much interest in the 'cup final' and even that year "Pompey" bowed to Manchester. This year Wolverhampton has a Canadian lad playing for them, Douglas McMahon, young Winnipeg centre-forward. Regarded by Skipper Frank Buckley of the Wolves' squad, as one of his best players on the reserve list, no doubt McMahon will view the great English football classic from the sidelines. The Canadian youngster joined Wanderers early this season coming directly from the Winnipeg amateur ranks and he gave a splendid accounting of his ability in a recent league game. Their Majesties, the King and Queen, will make their last public appearance at this year's English Cup final before sailing for Canada, it is thought. The Wolverhampton team is the youngest team playing in the major division of the English League, most of their roster being composed of players in their early 20's, while two wingers are in their teens.

Contrary to the general proceedings of major league baseball, when the Washington Senators conventionally open the major league 24 hours ahead of the other clubs and the President of the United States tossed out the first ball, this year both the National and American League will open with a one-game stand on Monday, the champion New York Yankees meet the Senators at Washington where President Roosevelt will toss the first ball and officially open the 1939 major league seasone. Over in the National League, however, the Cincinnati Reds will also pry off the lid on Monday at Redland Field end versus the Pittsburg Pirates. The next day, however, the Reds move to Chicago while Washington journey to Philadelphia and all 16 teams in both leagues commence the long trek towards baseball's coveted goal of a world's series berth.

While on the subject of baseball we have been reliably informed that the future success of baseball in this city will depend solely upon the attitude and interest shown by those who should be primarily interested—the players. There are those sandbys of interested citizens, who will lend their assistance in such capacities as are needed, but unless the players show their interest by outward efforts in practice and co-operation there will be no effort brought forth. The situation seems quite clear and evident —the next move is expected from those who benefit most—the players. It's their game, so why not some of the fame?

Apparently the gruelling series with the Goodyears took its full toll on the Royals, who fell before the Port Arthur "Bearcats" at Montreal last night, but not before overtime was necessary. The Bearcats won 6-5 and thereby drew first blood in the Allan Cup finals. It remained to have Hugh O'Leary sturdy Port Arthur defenceman, assume the hero role with two solo goals in the overtime period. The potential Olympic hockey team from Canada in 1940 is far from settled as yet, however. It looks as though the Allan Cup finals will prove much more interesting than either the Stanley or Memorial Cup honors.

Max Schmeling today signed a contract to meet Adolf Hueser, heavyweight champion of Europe, at Stuttgart on July 2nd. (It's too bad it hadn't been another Adolf, we could name.)

DID YOU KNOW—Doc Romnes, of the Leafs, became a daddy yesterday?....Poppa to a bouncing baby girl .... Just because Joe Louis came back to reverse a decision over Max Schmeling is no reason to believe Max Baer might repeat the same dose to Louis, or is it?....Louis commences his tuning up period on Monday versus Jack Roper out on the coast That England holds the amateur baseball championship of the world?....they won it last year in a tournament in England at which even the U.S.A. was represented.... Clarence de Mar, at 50 made his last entry into the Boston marathon recently....Boston should roll up the Leafs' little ball of yarn tomorrow just as Oshawa should step on to the junior hockey throne tonight.

POLAND, RUMANIA

Rumania and Poland have received British and French pledges against aggression. Today's Rumanian-Polish pledges were considered all the more significant because it has been thought Poland would avoid new, formal agreements to avoid any chance of offending German sensibilities.

Poland has summoned additional reservists to bolster the army of 1,000,000 men. German troops concentrations on Polish borders were reported. Other reports told of "certain movements" of troops in Rumania and Hungary. Informed quarters said Poland would continue attempts to reconcile Hungary and Rumania.

Poland was said, too, to hope for a fair solution of the Danzig question. Chancellor Hitler was reported to have made known that he would like to enter the free city of Danzig on his 50th birthday April 20.

Informed circles, however, said Poland insists that her interests be safeguarded in Danzig, at the head of the Polish corridor which separates East Prussia from the rest of Germany.

SCHOONER

New London, Conn., April 15 —(CP)—An officer at the United States submarine base here said today he had a "hunch" that a submarine reported seen off the Nova Scotia Coast by a Canadian fishing schooner was a United States vessel.

The officer declined to give reasons for his "hunch" but it was recalled that seven underwater craft are preparing for war-games off the New England coast shortly.

The New London base is about 200 miles from Nova Scotia waters.

TIMBER INQUIRY

government couldn't give them a job, there was no work for them.

Time For Full Debate

"The time has come for a full debate and for us to get together as legislators to do that which is our duty", said Mr. Strachan.

First reading was given by the House to Mr. Cross' bill for an increase in the municipal tax rate subsidy to a mill and half. Hitherto it has been one mill. An extra $1,500,000 is appropriated for the subsidy from increased gasoline tax revenues.

Premier Hepburn accepted the motion of Conservative Leader George Drew for a select committee to inquire into the operations of the Lands and Forests Department. Col. Drew said there was disquietude in the public mind about the Department, particularly concerning the leasing of "vast empires of timber, secretly and without tenders."

If the Conservatives thought they could help improve the Department, the government welcomed their help, said the Premier. He told the House that revenues of the Department last year were more than $2,000,000 above 1934, the last year of Conservative administration, and expenditures were lower.

No Suggestion of Wrong

Timber limits of staggering size has been disposed of without anybody but cabinet members knowing of their disposal, charged Col. Drew. He was not suggesting there was anything wrong, outside of the general procedure of vesting so much power in the Minister.

Improvident contracts that would never be carried out had undoubtedly been made. The method of disposing of timber limits added stock "racketeering" and added to public disquietude.

"There is undoubtedly a general belief that improper exploitation is one of the incidences of the development of this department," he said.

If the inquiry should reveal anything improper in former administrations, he would be content to have the facts made public, said Col. Drew.

The public should know why the government was so interested in reorganization of the bankrupt Abitibi Power and Paper Company, Limited, as to pass a special Order-in-Council making available its limits to any company that might result from a court reorganization.

Plan Available

The return tabled to a motion for all documents since Jan. 1, 1937, relating to the rights and reorganization of this company had no details of the plans for reorganization, though undoubtedly the cabinet must have had some material before it passed the Order-in-Council.

"There is something rotten in the state of Denmark in this particular case."

Premier Hepburn said the reorganization plan to which he had referred in announcing to the House the Abitibi Order-in-Council had no bearing on the matter. The plan was in his office and Col. Drew was welcome to it.

Mr. Heenan and the Premier assured the House that no particular plan for Abitibi reorganization had the government's endorsation. The government would back any court decision.

"We're not endorsing any plan," said Mr. Hepburn. "We were foolish enough to do that once, but not again. We're leaving it to the Supreme Court."

Deferred Action.

The House again deferred action on a resolution calling for the dismissal of Prof. G. M. A. Grube, Trinity College, and Prof. Frank Underhill, University College, University of Toronto. The resolution was brought in Thursday after allegedly disloyal remarks by the professors had been cited.

Dr. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, said the officials of the two institutions concerned were investigating the charges concerning the statements.

Col. Drew said there was no intention of the legislature to seek to control university affairs. No threat of dismissals should be made.

"I raised the issue because it illustrated the necessity of taking steps to assure that the youth of Ontario receives its education from those who believe in the preservation of our democratic system," he said.

Former Premier George S. Henry and Premier Hepburn clashed for the first time this session, when the former accused the government of improper practices to show a surplus on the last fiscal year.

Charges Denied.

The charges, all denied by Premier Hepburn, were that gasoline tax rebates had been delayed, postdated cheques had been issued, and that discounts had been offered to coax succession duty payments into the treasury before March 31.

The premier branded the charges as "twaddle" from some "old women's sewing circle". Every cent that was to be paid out on account of the last fiscal year, would be charged to that year. Books were being held open to April 20 for this purpose.

Reference to a rumor he would support Sylvanus Apps, Conservative candidate in Brant in the next Federal election, was made by Premier Hepburn.

"I'm not going to say how I'll vote in the next Federal election," he said. "I may take a very active part."

Associations

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

Mary was very keen on anything bordering on associations, whether it was her sister's baby's first rattle or an erstwhile sweetheart's old Christmas gifts. She was always collecting material mementoes as also she harbored a hundred and one little brain memories.

It was quite natural, then, when Mary had the pleasure of her first trip to England that she should make a straight journey to the little Sussex village where her parents had courted and wed. For Mary was that somewhat choice blend of the human tree which divided its characteristics nicely between English parentage and American birth.

Her parents had rather a sweet romance in the fact that they had as young members of the village circle each laid a cornerstone in the parish church in which later they were married. Their names carved in the dull red stones were as plain as the day upon which they were cut, and Mary was so thrilled when she saw them that she nearly wept.

"Laid by Mary Anne Smith, July 9, 1897," was on the base of one pillar, and "Laid by John Cromer, July 9, 1897," was on another. That was the day they had met, and from then on the world for them had been a wonderful place, for love encircled them with its glorious wings.

Mary dropped onto her knees in one of the pews and felt a tremendous wave of emotion spread over her. After her prayers she sat back and could picture how dainty her sweet mother must have looked in her bridal dress standing beside her handsome young husband—there at that lovely altar.

She wondered if there was a chance that the same rector would be in charge. She supposed not.

However, Mary heard the gentle steps of an elderly minister padding along the small corridor and she went out to chat with him.

He beamed at her out of kindly eyes.

"I remember all young lovers whom I have married," he said upon hearing her story, "and I've been here thirty odd years. Come my dear," he said, "and I'll show you your parents' names."

They were standing inside the tiny vestry room with their heads close together over the great register when a young fellow bounded in from the fine old rectory gardens.

"Oh, Dad!" he shouted, then stopped swiftly. "I'm sorry — I didn't know there was anyone with you." He stood half smiling and half wonderingly, for Mary was indeed a lovely person to discover in close proximity to one's own father.

"This young lady," said the old rector beaming at his big son, "is Miss Mary Cromer. She has come all the way from America to see the church in which her parents were married. Miss Cromer, this is my son, Tom Walker."

The two young people shook hands shyly but apparently very warmly.

"I was wondering," said Mary wistfully, "if there was the slightest little thing I could have from the church — as a memento. If there isn't anything, I will just take a tiny stone from the gravel path or a few leaves from one of those lovely trees."

A moment that might have become awkward was interrupted by the approach of the rector's wife—a sweet, white-haired mother whom Mary loved at once.

"I sent Tom to bring you in to tea but—" she too then noticed the stranger. "I'm so sorry—I thought you two were alone."

The rector again went through the ceremony of introducing Mary—this time to his wife, and added, "This young lady is wanting some small memento from the church to take home to her parents, but I don't know what it could be."

"My dear," smiled Mrs. Walker, "only last night you and Tom were speaking of having new offertory bags. I'm sure Miss Cromer would love to have one of the old ones—they were in use when her parents attended service together."

"Oh, exclaimed Mary joyfully, "I should simply love it. Is it one of those sweet little bags with handles on each side? We don't have that kind in America—I think they are so quaint."

The big son was silent all this time but his heart leaped joyfully when he heard his mother insisting on Mary coming in to share the tea hour in the old manse drawing room.

"Tom dear, you take Miss Cromer and get her one of the old collection bags. We might forget it later."

It took Tom a long while to produce the gift for Mary, but, as a matter of fact, Mary didn't mind in the least. When they entered the drawing-room for tea the old rector and his wife exchanged happy glances.

When Mary mailed the lovely old memento to her parents she told them all about her visit and how she had been taken right into the family as if she had always known them. And her following letter confirmed this state of affairs. The going to stand beside young Tom next was full of joy, for Mary was at the very same altar at which her parents had taken their holy vows.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

The W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church held their Easter service in the church parlour on Wednesday afternoon with the President Mrs. Fargey in charge and Mrs. Mantel at the piano.

After singing the opening hymn Mrs. Fleming led in the opening prayer. Mrs. Wallbridge then read the story of the Resurrection from St. Luke's gospel.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and the roll call responded to by about fifty members.

Mrs. Ranson read the financial report and received the offering after which Mrs. Morrice led in prayer.

Mrs. Fleming gave a fine paper on current events.

Note of appreciation was mentioned to the ladies of the cooking school for a generous donation they had made for the Easter offering.

Mrs. Bell chose the very appropriate number "There is a green hill" for her solo.

The guest speaker for this special occasion was Mrs. (Rev.) Hunter of Madoc. Mrs. Hunter generously touched on a first topic of great interest "The History of the W.M.S. since its beginning in the Kingston Presbyterial in 1884". She laughingly reminded members that the gathering of this information had given her three months wakefulness.

Her real topic centred around the mission field in South Africa where she and Mr. Hunter spent a number of years in mission work. It is very evident that those who heard the gospel story from Mrs. Hunter will always associate Christianity with smiles and happiness.

A standing vote of thanks was given Mrs. Hunter and the service closed with the hymn "They shall speak of His Glory".

This service was in charge of Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Wallbridge, Mrs. C. Fargey, Miss Blair, Mrs. Diamond and Mrs. Weir.

The social half-hour was spent around a tea table at which Mrs. Perry presided amid an abundance of Easter lilies.

"The universities must lead the way toward a rebuilding of the moral and intellectual foundations of civilization."—Nicholas Murray Butler.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Apr. 15 (CP)—Cheered by the new move at Washington for a peaceful settlement of Europe's troubles, the stock market swung into a strong advance in the second hour of trading today on the Toronto Exchange. Volume was around 350,000 shares.

Base metal shares showed the strongest rally with nickel up about two points, Noranda 1½ and Waite Amulet 35 to 50 cents. Smelters and Hudson Bay posted fractional gains. Eldorado added about 10 cents.

Gains of 10 to 20 cents were scattered through the secondary gold list and the seniors, including Lake Shore, Buffalo-Ankerite, Hollinger and Bralorne, added fractions. Leaders in the upward movement in the medium-price gold issues were Macassa, Wright-Hargreaves, Pamour, Powell Rouyn, and East Malartic.

Gains predominated in the steel, utility, food and the senior oils. Walkers Common added a point and other interlisted leaders moving upward were Bell Telephone, Ford A, Brazilian and Fanny Farmer.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 15 (AP)—Faint peace hopes once more revived Wall Street sentiment today and the stock market put on a rally of 1 to around 4 points.

President Roosevelt's messages to Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini asking for a 10-year moratorium on invasions, brought market activity to a standstill for a brief period while traders crowded around the news tickers to read the text.

Ahead as much as a point among Canadian shares were Hiram Walker, Distillers, Lake Shore, and Canadian Pacific. Canada 4s moved evenly.

Transfers were about 600,000 shares.

Prominent stocks on the rebound were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, Du Pont, General Electric, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Anaconda and American Smelting.

U.S. FLEET ORDERED BACK TO PACIFIC

Washington, April 15 (AP)—The United States navy department unexpectedly ordered the fleet back to the Pacific today.

Hog Pastures Should be Rotated

The problem of spring and summer management of hogs is at hand.

The practice of allowing the hogs to run in a pasture has many advantages, providing it is properly managed.

Hog pastures that have been used for several years become breeding grounds for internal parasites and disease.

Such pasture fields should be rotated regularly back to cultivation.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of April 14th are as follows:

Butter Markets Show Easier Trend

Toronto, Apr. 15.—Prices settled lower for butter on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. No change occurred in eggs.

While fresh receipts were increasing, offerings were not heavy on the butter market and supplies cleared fairly well. The morning session was dull and draggy, but the market steadied later in the day as prices were shaded down. Buying was still cautious, but a fair amount of Ontario first-grade solids turned over at 21c. Ontario creamery solids closed at 21c for No. 1 grades and 20¾c for 38 score. Prints declined in sympathy with solids to trade at 23c to 23½c for top grades and 22¼c to 22¾c for 38 score.

Prices remained steady on the egg market, with arrivals of fresh receipts being readily absorbed. Graded shipments sold for 20c for grade A-large, 19c for medium, 18c for pullets and 17c for B and C grades.

Montreal Butter Down.

Montreal, Apr. 15 (CP)—Butter prices gave up fractions as other offerings ruled steady on open produce markets here, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½c to 22¾c a pound and solids 22c to 22¼c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21c a dozen for A-large, 19½c to 20c for A-medium, 18½c to 19c for A-pullets. Receipts: 1,134 cases.

LARGE QUANTITY SYRUP OFFERED AT LOWER PRICE

Gallons Quoted at $1.40 to $1.75 a Decline from $2.00 Last Week

Attended by the first real Spring weather of the current season, the city market today was productive of the most variable display of produce since the Christmas holidays.

The first offering of greenhouse vegetables provided a splash of Spring color, that with the warm sunshine attracted a large clientele of Saturday morning shoppers.

Price tones however showed a tendency to decline, with maple syrup, present in the largest quantities of the season, noting a twenty and fifty cent decrease per gallon. With practically every vendor offering the Spring delicacy for sale, prices dropped sharply during the later hours, with some vendors offering their stocks at $1.40 per gallon. The better quality syrup however held steady at $1.75 with quart prices noted at forty and forty-five cents. Maple sugar in various sizes moved briskly with small cakes selling at six for twenty five cents and larger quantities at commensurate prices.

Eggs also marked a slight decline with extra "A" selects offered at twenty-four cents per dozen and other qualities at twenty-three and two dozen lots for forty-five cents. Some ungraded stocks were offered at twenty-three cents with mediums at twenty one and twenty-two cents per dozen. Egg stocks were the heaviest offered during the present season.

Chicken displays were fairly heavy, with choice birds, said to be of June vintage, offered at prices ranging from $1.15 to $1.50 each. Yearling birds, weighty, for the most part, were offered at a few cents less while fowl was quoted at from sixty cents each. A few ducks offered at ninety cents and one dollar each, moved sluggishly.

New radishes, lettuce, rhubarb, and water-cress while of the hothouse variety, added a splash of color to the outside market where fairly heavy stocks of winter fruits and vegetables were offered. Radishes, lettuce and water-cress sold briskly at five cents per bunch lot while the rhubarb moved well at ten cents.

Carrots, turnips, beets, parsnips, offered in gradually lessening quantities were steady at last week's prices. Potato quotations remained firm with good quality "spuds" quoted at $1.50 per ninety-pound bag. Inferior qualities ranged from $1.25 per bag upwards.

Apples $1.50 Hamper.

Northern Spies and Stark Delicious winter apples were still fairly prominent with quality excellent for this time of the year. The former were quoted at $1.50 per hamper-lot with the Delicious offered at a few cents higher. Varieties of cooking apples were quoted from 90 cents per bushel.

Lovers of fish had a large variety from which to choose their favorite food. Fresh whitefish making its 1939 city market debut sold well at 25 cents per pound. Fresh trout was offered in small quantities but early morning shoppers quickly bought up the stock at 25 cents per pound.

The popular mudcat was available at 15 cents per pound with a smattering of pickerel offered at 18 cents for the same quantity. Mullets were quoted at four for 25 cents with a large offering of fresh pike in variable sizes moving slowly at 10 cents per pound.

The high prices of $6.00 each that have featured the sale of six weeks old pigs remained steady today with a fairly large offering of the young porkers apparent. Buying was slow during the early hours but later reports stated that a number of transactions were completed with little or no change being noted in the initial quotations.

GEORGE T. TUSTIN IS RE-NOMINATED

Conservative Member for P.E.-Lennox Again to be Standard Bearer

Napanee, April 15 (Special) — Pledging their unanimous support, more than 350 Conservative delegates from the seventy-seven subdivisions in the Prince Edward-Lennox dual riding in convention at the town hall here Friday afternoon selected their present member George J. Tustin, M.P., of Napanee to contest the constituency again in the forthcoming Federal election. Six candidates were nominated, but all except Mr. Tustin withdrew and no balloting was necessary. Those receiving nomination besides the candidate were Samuel Carson, Cressy, H. M. Reid, Milford, Thomas Kenney and L. Netherly, Picton and Wesley Young, ex-warden of Lennox and Addington.

Hot criticism of the extravagant spendings of the present government was expressed by Mr. Tustin, who also bewailed the growing importation of farm implements from the United States which had increased from $5,000,000 worth in 1936 to $20,000,000 last year.

Besides throwing Canadians out of work, this practice also contributes vastly to the unfavorable trade balance, a condition which forced relief lists up. The Minister of Labor has recently admitted 1,000,000 persons were now on relief in the Dominion.

Gordon Graydon, M.P., of Peel County, spoke in highest terms of Hon. Dr. Manion emphasizing the Conservative party was fortunate in being led by a man who had been willing to give his life for his country.

He declared the salvation of Canada was to elect the party that gave the country confederation and brought the provinces together in unity and will bring them together again. "You are on the threshold of great things to come," he assured his listeners in conclusion.

It was unanimously voted that a resolution of confidence of the convention be tendered the Hon. Dr. Manion.

may consider necessary or desirable."

Mr. Roosevelt read to reporters in his oval office the message he sent to Hitler and Mussolini. State Secretary Cordell Hull sat on one side of the President and Chairman Key Pittman of the Senate foreign relations committee on the other.

Fear of General War

Mr. Roosevelt's communication stressed there now was a general fear of war throughout the world.

"The existence of this fear," he said, "is of definite concern to the people of the United States for whom I speak, as it must also be to the peoples of the other nations of the entire western hemisphere.

"All of them know that any major war, even if it were to be confined to other continents, must bear heavily on them during its continuance and also for generations to come.

"Because of the fact that after the acute tension in which the world has been living during the past few weeks there would seem to be at least a momentary relaxation—because no troops are at this moment on the march — this may be an opportune moment for me to send you this message."

War Means World in Ruins

Recalling his message to Hitler urging peace prior to the Munich conference, Mr. Roosevelt wrote that since then "the tide of events seems to have reverted to the threat of arms".

"If such threats continue," the message said, "it seems inevitable that much of the world must become involved in common ruin.

"All the world, victor nations, vanquished nations, and neutral nations will suffer.

"I refuse to believe that the world is, of necessity, such a prisoner of destiny.

"On the contrary, it is clear that the leaders of great nations have it in their power to liberate their peoples from the disaster that impends.

"It is equally clear that in their own minds and in their own hearts the peoples themselves desire that their fears be ended.

"You have repeatedly asserted that you and the German people have no desire for war.

There Need Be No War

"If this is true there need be no war."

The identical message to Mussolini referred to the Italian people rather than the German people.

The President's appeal said the United States spoke on the International situation "not through selfishness or fear or weakness."

"If we speak now it is with the voice of strength and with friendship for mankind," it continued'

Solution by Conferences

The president said it still was clear to him "that international problems can be solved at the council table."

"It is therefore no answer to the plea for peaceful discussion," the communications added, "for one side to plead that unless they receive assurances beforehand that the verdict will be theirs, they will not lay aside their arms.

Enter in Good Faith

"In conference rooms, as in courts, it is necessary that both sides enter upon the discussion in good faith, assuming that substantial justice will accrue to both and it is customary and necessary that they leave their arms outside the room where they confer."

Saying he was convinced world peace would be promoted if the heads of governments would make frank statements regarding future policy, Mr. Roosevelt added:

"Because the United States, as one of the nations of the western hemisphere, is not involved in the immediate controversies which have arisen in Europe, I trust that you may be willing to make such a statement of policy to me as the head of a nation far removed from Europe in order that I, acting only with the responsibility and obligation of a friendly intermediary, may communicate such declaration to the other nations now apprehensive as to the course which the policy of your government may take."

FOUND HUSBAND BY SOAP TRAIL

Common Washing Aid Great Need Among Spanish Refugees; Wife Rewarded

Perpignan, April 15.— (CP) — French nurses, student doctors and others from Paris have been giving of their vacation time to help the refugees pouring over the border from Spain into this French frontier district, as the civil war closes in Spain.

"What is your greatest problem?" they were asked.

"Soap", was the unanimous reply. "When 100,000 half-famished and exhausted men forget their hunger and cold to ask first for 'soap' you have an idea of the misery these men have suffered merely from dirt and vermin since they started their retreat 60 days ago."

"The moment they get a cake of it and clean themselves up a little they feel like men again and their appetite and morale returns. Half the difficulties of discipline are solved. It's more precious than gold."

One woman visitor to a concentration camp carried an enormous basket filled with chunks of Marseilles laundry soap. She was looking for her husband and each day she visited a different camp, somehow getting past the guards—probably cajoling one of them with a piece of soap—"I took bread and chocolate the first day", she said. "The men nearly pulled me to pieces demanding soap.

"So I take as much as I can and they all promise to inquire among themselves for my husband, but it takes time among 180,000 men and more arriving every minute."

When she arrived at a barbed wire enclosure at Arles-sur-Tech she gave a shout. There her husband stood waiting. A piece of soap had found him.

Motorist Fails To Stop as Boy Is Knocked Down

While riding his bicycle on Station St. late last night, Ted Worrell, 121 Station St., was struck by a passing motor car and knocked down. The front wheel of the vehicle passed over young Worrell's left leg as he lay helpless on the pavement. The driver failed to stop and drove hastily away. The police were notified of the 'hit and run' driving incident and despite a diligent search for the offender, no evidence of the hit and run vehicle was found. The matter was investigated by Sergeant Arthur Booth, who later was informed by young Worrell that the motor car had passed over his bicycle completely wrecking the bike. Worrell's injuries were not serious, however.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN GEEN

Fuller

To many friends in the Ivanhoe district and elsewhere in the county the announcement of the sudden passing of Mrs. John Geen, which occurred early this Saturday morning, April 15th, at the family residence at Fuller, will bring sincere feelings of regret. For many years she had resided at Fuller and was held in high regard by all who knew her. She possessed many fine traits of character and took an active part in the work of the United Church.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her husband, Mr. John Geen, Fuller; three daughters, Mrs. Archie Reid, Watsonville, California; Mrs. Wilbur Sherry, Thomasburg, and Mrs. Charles Irvine, Fuller; one sister, Mrs. Wesley Parks, Plainfield.

The funeral will take place Monday afternoon, April 17th, at 1.30 o'clock.

PAN AMERICAN SPEECH PRAISED

Roosevelt's Speech Strong Warning to Totalitarian Powers is Comment

London, April 14—(CP Havas)—President Roosevelt's Pan American speech was almost universally welcomed by the British press today as a strong warning to the totalitarian powers.

The Daily Mail (Independent) was less enthusiastic than the other newspapers, declaring:

"Roosevelt's broadcast yesterday is not quite as significant as some of its phrasing might suggest. It was a speech directed, supposedly, at the peoples of the small nations of North and South America to whose protection the century-old Monroe Doctrine binds the United States.

"Yet it is true that both in Germany and Italy—notably in less-free Germany—there is a vast body of sober minded and patriotic citizens who abhor war and are puzzled by the tactics of their political leaders."

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said:

"Mr. Roosevelt's words had profound significance for the Old World, and were indeed mainly inspired by the recent developments in the eastern hemisphere. It is a paradox of the times that the most pacific nation of all —one that is most resolute to keep herself free from all foreign entanglements—should yet in effect be in a position to give the law to a continent armed to the teeth.

"That is what imparts special force and meaning to Roosevelt's declaration to the Americas that as we have an interest wider than that of the mere defence of our sea-ringed continent and that American customs and actions are necessarily involved with the rest of the world—a world which is becoming an economic unit.

The Financial Times (Ind.):

"The speech was as bold as a piece of encouragement to the peaceful powers in Europe as the President could possibly give in the present state of American politics and at the present stage of the Congressional examination of the Neutrality Act."

VETERANS CALLED FOR SPECIAL DUTY

Reported Men Will be Used to Guard Power Plants and Welland Canal

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 15 — (CP)— Announcement was made today that a call had been sounded for 253 physically-fit veterans of the Great War to do special constables' duty at power houses in this area and on the Welland Canal. The men will be enrolled tomorrow.

Hon. W. L. Houck, Commissioner of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, would not comment. A special police guard was thrown about district power houses two years ago.

BEET GROWERS GET BONUS

only 46,000,000. At any rate, this country is said to be the most cycle-conscious of any in the world except Denmark.

Hikers Organized

Officials of the National Fitness Council are seeking to extend the Cycle Club Movement which aims to enroll as many cyclists as possible into organized pursuit of their sport.

Hikers have been organized for several years under the English and Scottish Youth Hostel Associations which give them cheap lodging and cooking facilities and require them only to bring or buy their own food and carry a cotton sleeping bag so the hostels will not have to supply sheets.

The Hostels Associations have several hundred establishments throughout the country and are affiliated with similar organizations on the continent, giving members access to accommodation when on European walking tours.

The opening of the canoe season was signalled when J. Pennington, 24-year-old salesman, and his 26-year old wife left London Bridge in a rubber kayak on a projected six months' voyage around England, Wales and Scotland.

Canoe Club officials report an increased membership with more clubs forming, but canoeing is not a national sport as it is in Canada. Englishmen seldom use Canadian type canoes but voyage in collapsible kayaks propelled by double-bladed paddles.

Balkans' Strength

Berlin newspapers shifted their attacks from Prime Minister Chamberlain to President Roosevelt and called the latter the author of plans to "encircle" Germany, while the Voelkischer Beobachter, the chief Nazi organ, reviewed the military strength of other states in a front-page article.

Nazi circles considered the Balkan States might count heavily in the "encirclement" of Germany although British-French defence pledges have been given only to Poland, Greece and Rumania.

The Voelkischer Beobachter said Great Britain advanced her encirclement policy after Germany took Bohemia and Moravia under her protection and "lately also against Italy after the occupation of Albania."

Poland's Resources

The paper added:—

"With the exception of Poland, no other European state hitherto has agreed to place itself at the disposal of English desires for power and to encourage England's war policy.

"The Balkan States rejected such an idea with marked determination. In view of this, it is not uninteresting to obtain a picture of the military strength of these states courted by England."

Hitler's newspaper said the Polish army had a peacetime strength of 270,000 men, to which must be added 32,000 border guards, 28,864 policemen and more than 150,000 men with pre-military training.

The paper estimated the Polish war strength at 60 divisions, with 3,600,000 trained reservists and the Polish airforce at about 660 first and second-line craft and approximately 110 navy planes.

Four destroyers, three submarines, two torpedo boats and auxiliary vessels were mentioned as the possible strength of the Polish navy.

Rumanian Strongest in Balkans

Rumania was represented as the strongest military power in the Balkans. The paper put the peacetime strength of the Rumanian army at 186,000 men and said "in case of war Rumania may have approximately 1,600,000 trained men at its disposal."

Bulgaria was said to have 150,000 trained reserves with the current Bulgarian military strength set at 70,000.

The Yugoslav soldier was called "the best of southeastern Europe." The paper said the Yugoslav military strength aggregated 1,400,000 men.

Greece may be able to mobilize about 600,000 men, the paper said, with a regular army of 85,000 but it lacks modern war equipment.

BILL EXAMINED BY SUPREME COURT

Act Introduced to Abolish Appeals to the Privy Council

Ottawa, April 15—(CP)—By mutual agreement between Justice Minister Lapointe and Hon. C. H. Cahan (Con. Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George) the latter's bill to abolish appeals to the privy council will be subjected to an examination by the Supreme Court of Canada to ascertain if it is within the jurisdiction of the Dominion parliament to enact.

Both the Justice Minister and Mr. Cahan expressed confidence that parliament would be within its constitutional right in abolishing such appeals but they agreed it was advisable to remove all doubt.

Mr. Lapointe said he would recommend without delay that the government make a reference to the Supreme Court of Canada and it will probably go from there to the judicial committee of the privy council for further expression of opinion.

In the meantime the bill, for which Mr. Cahan moved second reading last night, will remain on the order paper pending the decision of the courts. It is not expected to be discussed again this year.

FOXBORO CHILD HURT AT PLAY

Helen Bartlett Falls from Loft and Severely Gashes Thigh

Foxboro, April 15.— (Special)— Six year old Helen Bartlett, youngest daughter of Mr. Roy Bartlett of this village, very narrowly escaped what might easily have been a more serious injury when, while playing with other children in a small barn near her home, she stumbled out of the loft and fell to the driveway floor, where she struck the open end of a large barrel.

The little girl was immediately rushed to the doctor's office where she was found to be suffering from a severely gashed thigh requiring three stitches to close the wound. Aside from the gashed thigh however, the little girl fortunately suffered no other serious injury from her experience and is resting quite comfortably at home where she will be confined to her bed for the next few days.

PREVENTION WORK

After an exhaustive study of this problem, he said he was convinced such a program, over a period of years, would provide continuous employment for a large number and would create an asset that would pay back far more than it cost.

There was imminent danger of disastrous floods in Canada. "Unless we take drastic steps to cope with the situation we shall be faced with very grave danger indeed."

Particular Danger Spots

Belleville, Port Hope and the lands along the Grand and Thames rivers in Ontario were particularly danger spots. Mr. MacNicol urged the Minister to seek co-operation of the Ontario government to speed up prevention work in these districts and suggested federal government should offer to pay 60 per cent of the cost.

In the United States the government had realised the time had come when the labors of man must be used to restore the natural conditions of the early days when floods were unknown, he said. A five or 10-year flood prevention works program would pay for itself in the saving of property and lives.

United States flood prevention work on the Ohio River and its tributaries was an example of what could be done in that direction. Mr. MacNicol recommended similar works on the Grand and Thames rivers in Western Ontario. He appreciated the government's proposal to spend some money on the Grand river but declared there was urgent need of complete prevention works there before a disastrous flood took place.

One single flood on the Thames or Grand would cause a loss greater than the cost of prevention works. A three-inch rainfall might have disastrous consequences.

Government Criticized

Labor Minister Rogers heard the government's treatment of the unemployment problem criticized in several quarters as the debate continued on his resolution preceding the annual bill on unemployment relief and farm distress.

Before the debate opened Mr. Rogers read telegrams from seven of the nine provincial governments denying the charge made Thursday by Denton Massey (Con. Toronto-Greenwood) that thousands of transients had died from exposure, illness, starvation or lack of care.

"It is impossible to condemn too strongly an irresponsible statement of this kind under existing conditions of public tension," declared Mr. Rogers.

Although he denied the statement without qualification Thursday night, Mr. Rogers took immediate steps to check it and telegraphed all Provincial governments asking if they knew of any cases of death from starvation or exposure either among transients or relief recipients in the last four years.

The reply in all seven cases was an emphatic negative and the Minister said he had no doubt Quebec and Prince Edward Island replies would be to the same effect.

Mr. Massey obtained the floor amid Liberal shouts of "withdraw" and declared he would substantiate his statement at the earliest opportunity.

"I have heard nothing from the Minister which makes me wish to withdraw the statement I made yesterday," he said.

"I am sure if the Minister will give consideration to the replies he has received he will realize that they come from a source which has absolutely no right to make such a statement as has been made in view of the fact that every member, including the Minister himself, knows that there have been deaths in this country due to malnutrition."

Emphatic Denials

One of the most emphatic replies was from A. A. MacKenzie, Alberta Commissioner of Relief and Public Welfare. After declaring there were no deaths in Alberta due to starvation, he said:

"Medical reports from cities and industrial centres show families of relief recipients much more healthy than families of wealthy parents. Christmas issue of 50 cents per capita was only spent in four cases on necessary food. All the remainder expended extravagantly. Persons making such statements should procure evidence or action taken to prevent such prevarication in the future."

The other replies were signed by S. J. Gadsby, accountant of the Ontario Relief Branch, in the absence of the Deputy Minister; W. W. Dawson, Saskatchewan Director of Relief; A. W. Barbour, New Brunswick Deputy Minister of Public Works and Administration of Relief; A. MacNamara, Manitoba Deputy Minister of Labor; R. H. Mackay, Nova Scotia; and E. W. Griffith, British Columbia Administrator of Unemployment Relief.

Dramatic Touch

A dramatic touch was given the debate when, during a speech by J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, a group of 200 single unemployed men paraded in front of the parliament building protesting relief allowance cuts.

Referring to Mr. Massey's claim of thousands of transients dying, Mr. Woodsworth said he would not say whether the number was correct but his own experiences convinced him there were "scores if not hundreds who have died through no other reason than through the public neglect of the care of the unemployed."

"Would my honorable friend care to present his evidence for that statement?" Mr. Rogers asked.

"No, I am not going to present evidence for the Minister," Mr. Woodsworth answered. "I said it was my opinion and it is perfectly in order. I am not prepared to give evidence."

Mr. Woodsworth presented a memorandum prepared by transients in Toronto urging the government to establish work and training camps for the single unemployed.

George Wood, (Lib. Brant) suggested that if the 10 per cent of Canada's population now unemployed were on the land the problem would be solved and the division of population as between rural and urban areas would be back where it was 20 or 30 years ago.

Markets were not essential to the farmers to enable them to get a bare existence. Farms and the necessary labor woul dbring the essentials of life at least, and lift the burden of unemployment relief now borne by those who remained on the farms.

Not Party Question

Regret that unemployment had been made a party question was expressed by T. L. Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview). He felt that parties should not make political capital out of human distress.

Mr. Church urged the creation of a labor committee to investigate unemployment and kindred problems. He also urged that efforts be made to have the municipal improvements assistance act apply to Ontario.

Calling attention to the unemployed demonstration outside, Mr. Woodsworth asked:

"But what are these men to do They have written letters until they are sick and tired of writing."

"I share his (Mr. Woodsworth's) desire that they might find their way as soon as possible to employment," Mr. Rogers replied. "Not necessarily public employment but employment in which they would have an opportunity to earn a remunerative and self-respecting living.

"In the last year some 1,500 men were placed on farms in this area from the employment office in Ottawa and at this time of year there is additional employment being offered in connection with various government services. All who register at the employment office are eligible for that work."

Read Memorandum

"I know they are eligible but it does not make any difference whether 1,500 or 15,000 men were placed on farms last summer," Mr. Woodsworth retorted. "The fact is there are 200 men waiting outside this building 75 of whom have no means of eating. Is nothing to be done about them?"

Mr. Woodsworth read from a memorandum prepared by transients of the "John Franks House" of Toronto who recommended the establishment of works and training camps for single unemployed divided into two sections. One would take men under 25 years of age and pay them $1 a day, while the other would take men more than 25 and pay them 35 cents an hour for actual work performed.

A life-long farmer with "only an elementary education," Mr. Woodsworth said he never had to face "the ravages of unemployment." He believed the unemployment problem was eccentuated by the move of young people to the industrial centres and away from the land.

"If the Lord saw fit to put Adam and Eve in the city he would have built a city for them," said Mr Woodsworth. "But he did not do so. He put them on a farm. A farm is a place where you can produce for yourself food, clothing and shelter by applying labor to it.

"I believe it would be very much better if this unemployed 10 per cent of the population were back on the farm at least making their own living, growing their own food.

Attracted to City

"I believe a large part of the difficulty we have in Canada today is due to the fact, that we have lured young men to the city by contributing so much in the form of relief. It is a condition of affairs that has trained them to stand on the street corners instead of doing something for themselves."

Unemployment was not a disease but a sympton of a disease in the opinion of Norman Jaques (SC Wetaskiwin), who said it was no use to provide temporary employment. It was necessary to end the cause of unemployment.

Further argument in favor of land settlement as a means to solve unemployment was presented by Joseph Bradette (Lib, Cochrane). If agricultural conditions were such that farmers would stay on the land there would be less unemployment. He charged the C.C.F. party with making political capital out of distress and instanced the parade of transients before parliament building yesterday afternoon and references to it by Mr. Woodsworth.

Reforestation and flood control projects were urged by David Spence (Con. Toronto-Parkdale). He believed there were millions of dollars awaiting investments in Canadian industry once confidence was restored. The government has failed to cope with the situation.

Eric Poole (SC Red Deer), last speaker of the day, said both Liberals and Conservatives had failed to find any solution to economic distress. There had been a promise by the Liberals that credit would be issued in terms of public need but they had done nothing.

CONCENTRATIONS

Increasing defence measures at the stronghold guarding the western inlet to the Mediterranean, British troops also erected additional barricades to guard the "Rock" from any possible invasion by land.

The measures were taken as the concentration of troops and war materials was reported continuing in neighboring ports of Spain—whose victorious Nationalists were aided by Italy and Germany in the civil war.

A large part of the German fleet is to manoeuvre on a month's cruise in the neighborhood of Gibraltar beginning Tuesday.

Defence of Impire.

Defence precautions were taken in other parts of the empire.

The Governor of Kenya Colony, Sir Robert Brooke-Popham disclosed in Nairobi plans to bring heavy reinforcements to the British East African colony which borders both Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

In the Malaya Straits Settlements the government proposed to give £1,000,000 (approximately $4,600,000) for empire defence, in addition to its annual contribution of £750,000. Malaya already had given £20,000,000 for imperial defence, including £2,000,000 for the armed outpost at Singapore.

In Hong Kong, important naval and military base in the Orient, the government decreed emergency regtion of alient in concentration camps ulations for the arrest and detenwithout triar.

In Cape Town, the South African government adopted a national service registration scheme to make all men under 45 years of age available for wartime defence.

Russian Co-operation Awaited.

The British government, meanwhile, was reported reliably to have instructed the Ambassador in Moscow, Sir William Seeds, to place before Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Foreign Commissar, proposals for securing the speedy inclusion of the Soviet in an alliance against aggression.

Informed sources said Sir William would interview Litvinoff today.

The British plan, it was reported, was to have the Russian air fleet pledged to protect Poland and Rumania in event of any German attack.

(Warsaw dispatches, which told of an oral agreement between Poland and Rumania to help each other in event of German aggression, said it was understood Russia would back them up with airplanes, tanks and guns.)

The suggestion was viewed as a compromise since Poland and Rumania have objected to admitting the Red Army to their soil even as an ally.

Russia Seen As Aid to Bloc.

Inclusion of Russia in the anti-aggression front, it was believed, would add tremendous strength to the bloc since the sending of fleets with guns, men and supplies to the aid of Poland and Rumania might be a difficult problem, at least in the early stages of a war.

The instructions to Sir William in Moscow followed consultations yesterday between Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador.

Hope for an early agreement was held out by one official, who said: "There is no reason to believe that Russia may not join the alliance within the next few days."

Some quarters believed Prime Minister Chamberlain might be able to announce an agreement with Russia when parliament meets on Tuesday.

The prime minister also was expected to make a statement concerning Turkey at that time. Consultations with Turkey were reported progressing, and many observers thought she would be the next to receive guarantees against aggression, bolstering the commitments to Poland, Rumania and Greece.

Method of Taking Samples of Soil

Many Ontario farmers will undoubtedly be taking advantage th's Spring of the free service provided by the Ontario Department of Agriculture to have samples of their soil tested. It is only by soil testing that farmers can ascertain just what plant constituents their soil lacks to grow better quality and larger crops per acre. Here's how you do it.

1. Utensils needed: (a) A clean spade or shovel; (b) A clean basket, box or rust-free pail, and large knife.

2. How to take a Representative Sample of Soil: (a) If the field is fairly uniform and is largely one type of soil, samples should be taken from at least 10 points distributed over the field. Where the soil in a field is uniform one composite sample is sufficient. Where there are extreme knolls or low areas, these should be sampled separately. (b) At each point in your field dig down to plow depth (5 to 7 inches) and throw aside this spadeful of soil. Next cut a thin slice down the face of the hole and while the soil is on the spade or shovel, with a knife cut off the sides and about 1-2 inch of the bottom. Put the remainder of the slice in the pail or basket. (c) If a subsoil sample is desired, clear back the soil where the first sample was taken, to a depth of about 5 to 7 inches, and take a spadeful to a depth of 8 inches below where the first sample was taken. Put the subsoil samples in a separate pail. (d) When samples have been taken from each point, break up all of the lumps and thoroughly mix the samples. Do likewise with the subsoil samples keeping them separate from the surface soil samples. Place 1-2 pint of this composite sample in a small cotton bag. Tie the top firmly and attach a tag giving your name and address on one side and on the reverse side address the parcel to the Dept. of Chemistry, Soils Division, O. A. C. Guelph, or to any of the stations named below which may be nearer to you than O.A.C. (e) Wet soils should be dried when preparing soil samples for mailing. To dry soil samples avoid putting them in a hot oven, rather dry the soil on a cloth or paper in direct sunlight.

3. Soil sampling Instructions and Question Blanks may be obtained from your agricultural representative or from any of the test stations named below, Please answer the questions for each sample on the blanks and send this information in a separate envelope at the time your soil samples go forward. One should be sure to number his samples clearly and keep a record or copy of his scheme of numbering so that the report may be given according to number. Samples may be sent to the nearest to you of the following stations: Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; Agricultural School, Kemptville.

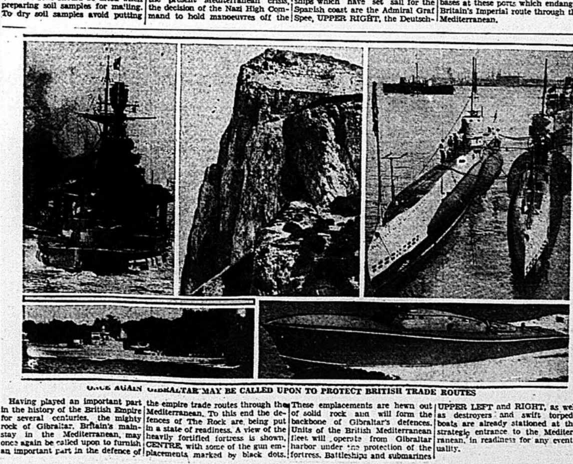
NAZI FLEET PUTS TO SEA FOR MANOEUVRES OFF SPAIN

Unofficially interpreted as Chancellor Hitler's gesture to emphasize Germany's alliance with General Franco in the anti-comintern pact, units of the German Baltic fleet have set sail for spring manoeuvres off the coast of Spain. In view of the present Mediterranean crisis, the decision of the Nazi High Command to hold manoeuvres off the Spanish coast is being closely watched by Great Britain. The units of the German fleet participating in the naval games are thought to comprise six cruisers, three "pocket" battleships and numerous small craft. The three "pocket" battleships which have set sail for the Spanish coast are the Admiral Graf Spee, UPPER RIGHT, the Deutschland, RIGHT, and the Admiral Von Scheer, BOTTOM. The anti-comintern pact is reported to grant permission for Germany to use Spanish ports for naval bases in the case of war, and it is feared that Germany may set up strong submarine bases at these ports which endanger Britain's Imperial route through the Mediterranean.



ONCE AGAIN GIBRALTAR MAY BE CALLED UPON TO PROTECT BRITISH TRADE ROUTES

Having played an important part in the history of the British Empire for several centuries, the mighty rock of Gibraltar, Britain's mainstay in the Mediterranean, may once again be called upon to furnish an important part in the defence of the empire trade routes through the Mediterranean. To this end the defences of The Rock are being put in a state of readiness. A view of the heavily fortified fortress is shown, CENTRE, with some of the gun emplacements marked by black dots. These emplacements are hewn out of solid rock and will form the backbone of Gibraltar's defences. Units of the British Mediterranean fleet will operate from Gibraltar harbor under the protection of the fortress. Battleships and submarines UPPER LEFT and RIGHT, as well as destroyers and swift torpedo boats are already stationed at the strategic entrance to the Mediterranean, in readiness for any eventuality.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

The growing season! The length of the growing season, while not the only factor in the selection of crops, is a very important one, since the very character of farming is dependent upon it. Its length is estimated as beginning with the average date of last killing frost in spring and ending with the first killing frost in the fall. It varies from over 240 days in the South to 90 days in the extreme northern part of the country and southeastern Canada. Not only latitude but also topography is important in limiting the season. The effect of topography is twofold first, the higher the land the shorter the season; second, the character of the slope, as it affects air drainage causing a certain "spottiness" of frost occurrence.

CANADA PRAISES TIMELY ACTION OF GOOD NEIGHBOR

Prime Minister Mackenzie King Sends Note to Washington

AMERICAS UNANIMOUS

Washington, April 17—(AP)— A quick demonstration of American solidarity behind President Roosevelt's peace proposals heartened government officials today in the face of indications that Germany and Italy would reject or evade any anti-war pledge.

Just as the western world supported Mr. Roosevelt in his appeal to Chancellor Hitler during the Munich crisis last fall, Canada and 16 Latin American republics expressed commendation during the weekend of his new plea against European aggression.

Officials here were hopeful that similar statements would be forthcoming from Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras and Paraguay to make the American reaction unanimous.

The American countries heard from by Sunday night were Canada, Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Salvador, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada said:

"Mr. Roosevelt offered a peace conference before a war instead of after it. No country can lightly reject that opportunity of saving civilization and saving itself."

Would Have Canadian Dramatists Write of All Periods and Climes

Victoria, April 17—(CP)—L. Bullock-Webster, organizer of school and community drama for the British Columbia Education Department, challenges the "very prevalent" belief that Canadian writers should write their plays about Canadian life with a Canadian setting and "a strong flavor of the soil."

Mr. Bullock-Webster's comment was made as a round table discussion in connection with the Dominion drama festival brought out a consensus that a Canadian play must be written by a Canadian and that it should have a Canadian flavor, although locale doesn't matter so much as whether its treatment is from a Canadian viewpoint.

From the commercial aspect, Mr. Bullock-Webster said in an interview, Canadian life offers a new field to the dramatist, "apart from this consideration, why should our authors not write about whatever they feel best able to dramatize?

"Are they to be cramped and circumscribed by some political consideration of developing nationhood? Or have the same inalienable right as the great dramatists of the past to write of what they can vividly imagine whether the happenings be near or far in time or space.

"Voltaire wrote his best plays about Jerusalem and the crusades. Addison wrote of Rome. Racine's best play dealt with Greece. Schiller wrote of Switzerland, Victor Hugo wrote of Spain and the great dramatists like Lope da Vega wrote of every imaginable place and situation.

"Are we the only people who must not let our vision stray beyond the hardware store on Centre Street?

"Perish the thought. Ultimately the best Canadian plays will be written by those with broadest vision."

Russian Aid Likely to Take Form of Powerful Air Fleet

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, April 17—(CP Cable) — Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected to announce to parliament late this week Anglo-French agreements with Russia and Turkey, adding these countries to the anti-aggression front.

An agreement with Turkey is at an advanced stage. It will consist of Great Britain and France committing themselves to fight for Turkey's independence against outside aggression in return for a guarantee that their fleets will be given unrestricted use of the Dardanelles in wartime.

The projected agreement with Russia still is in a fluid state with Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Foreign Affairs Commissar, promising Sir William Seeds, the British Ambassador in Moscow, to consult his

RUSSIA APPROVES F.D.R.'S MESSAGE

Kalinin Cables Cordial Congratulations to President

Moscow, April 17—(AP)— Russia has approved President Roosevelt's peace message.

Michael Kalinin, head of the all-Russian central executive committee, cabled cordial congratulations yesterday to Mr. Roosevelt and said the United States President's message to Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini Saturday "finds the warmest echo in the hearts of the people of the Soviet Union, sincerely interested in safeguarding general peace."

Some observers saw in Kalinin's words the beginning of a shift in Soviet policy toward close cooperation with London and Paris. Others warned against hasty conclusions.

They pointed out that last September Moscow messaged President Roosevelt with equal cordiality when he issued an 11th-hour appeal in the German-Czecho-Slovak crisis. But that friendly reply was followed by bitter denunciation of the French and British government for their part in the Munich peace.

The British Ambassador, Sir William Seeds, has been conferring with Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Foreign Commissar, however, and Soviet newspapers let the weekend go by without a single sarcastic editorial aimed at Great Britain or France.

Among the general populace no excitement was manifest over the international situation, although Russian newspapers have been giving rather full reports of developments and editorial writers have emphasized the "alarm and confusion" in capitalist Europe, which some papers have described as tottering.

Wrecked Property Damage Estimated at Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars

HEAVY RAIN FALL

By The Associated Press

Tornadoes ripped into four southern States, killed more than 41 persons, injured more than 170 and wreaked weekend damage estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Searchers picking their way through wind-torn debris in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas slowly raised the death toll through early Monday darkness.

Greatest toll was counted at the small cattle-raising community of Center Point, near Collins, Ark., where at least 20 persons were killed and an undetermined number were injured as a twister demolished a church soon after completion of a Sunday afternoon funeral service and swept a six-mile area nearby.

'HOME TO REICH' FEVER SWEEPING GERMAN MINORITY

Germany Not Likely to Move Against the Aggression Bloc

Hitler Likely to Become Honorary Citizen of Danzig on April 20

By ROBERT RIEFFEL
Copyright, 1939
By The Havas News Agency

Warsaw, Poland, April 17—(CP-Havas—Despite the "home to the Reich" fever sweeping the German minority in Upper Silesia, there was general confidence in well-informed sources here today that Germany does not plan any venture which might bring the Anglo-French pledge to Poland's independence into operation.

Authorities, however, were anxious over the fate of the 1,250,000 Polish minority in the Reich.

Even German Consular authorities and Nazi representatives on Polish soil were having difficulty in allaying the demand for union with the Reich pervading the German population of Upper Silesia.

Making Swastika Flags

Frontier-zone inhabitants greet each other with cries of "liberation is at hand!" Germans around Katowice have been making Swastika flags, convincing that they will soon be hanging them from their windows to welcome German troops.

Authoritative quarters discounted the probability of immediate trouble with Germany, believing that Reich leaders are at the moment much more seriously concerned with Mediterranean and Balkan problems.

Moreover the concentration of German troops on the Polish frontier was reliably reported to be much lighter than during last September's crisis, especially along the Upper Silesian border.

As for Danzig and the Polish Corridor, the Reich was seen here as hesitating, believing any attack on one or the other might provoke armed conflict, which could not be localized in view of the new accord with France and Great Britain.

Confer Citizenship

Danzig is expected to confer on Chancellor Hitler the title of honorary citizen as a birthday present April 20. Such a demonstration probably would fail to cause alarm here if it were not followed by graver acts.

The director of the Polish union abroad, M. Helezynski, published in the Kurjer Porrany, Nationalist organ, an article stressing that the situation of Poles in Germany is steadily growing worse.

"The Polish nation" he said, "had heretofore believed the German promises and pledges to respect the French economic and cultural development of Poles living in the Third Reich.

FOIL ATTEMPT TO BLOW SAFE

John Stephens of Toronto, Arrested and Charged With Armed Robbery

Ottawa, Apr. 17 (CP)—Foiled in his attempts to blow open a safe at Karry's Bowling Alleys and Pool Room here early today, John Stephens, 24, of Toronto, was arrested and charged with armed robbery. An accomplice was believed to have escaped in an automobile which Stephens said was parked at the curb. An unloaded revolver, a piece of fuse generally used in dynamiting and two odd gloves were found on Stephens.

The safe had resisted one attempt to blow it open when police arrested Stephens after the thugs had been surprised twice in their operations by men working in the building which houses several offices and a store. They overpowered William Softy, the caretaker, after a brief scuffle but had a real battle on their hands when Hector Boivin, a painter at work on the floor below heard the commotion and rushed upstairs.

The bandits already had Softy bound and gagged when Boivin came upon them. He was badly gashed about the face and head by what he said was a pistol butt. Meanwhile Softy broke his bonds and rushing to a fire escape called to a woman passerby for help. She called police who arrested Stephens.

Jim Karry, manager of the amusement parlor, said the safe contained about $700.

Withdraw Picture Dictators' Heads In Scales of Justice Held by Devil

London, April 17—(CP Cable) — The Royal Society of British Artists today withdrew from its exhibition as "too political" an allegorical painting representing the devil holding the heads of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini in the scales of justice.

Among the onlookers depicted in the painting are Prime Minister Chamberlain, President Roosevelt, David Lloyd George, Haile Sellassie and a number of refugees.

Otway McCannel, who painted the scene, entitled "Modern Allegory," explained it was a satire intended to emphasize the gravity of the international situation. An official of the society, however, said it had been decided that "perhaps it was best not to show it now."

Mr. Chamberlain, it was believed, also will tell the Commons that "good progress" is being made in Anglo-French negotiations to bring the Soviet Union into the alliance.

London, April 17—(AP)— Under the heading "Gettysburg, 1939" Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard today said of President Roosevelt's peace appeal:

"At one stroke the President of the United States has changed the face of European politics.

"Constantly, throughout the declaration he seems to remind the statesmen of the world that they are dealing not in mere frontiers and treaty rights but in the flesh and blood and the hopes and fears of ordinary men and women.

"By this act he establishes himself as the greatest American since Abraham Lincoln, and he does it by the proclamation of Lincoln's own faith in the common man.

"Today, above the tramp of marching men and the din of angry prejudice and passion, a statesman of equal stature speaks to us

Several operators were found driving motor cars without the necessary licences. Charges, preferred under the H.T.A., will follow.

PROVINCE CUTS OFF SINGLE MEN ON RELIEF, FEW AFFECTED HERE

Today under an edict of the Ontario Department of Welfare all single men on relief rools of municipalities of Ontario have been cut off from further aid until next winter. Many cities will thus have the added burden of thousands of the single unemployed to care for, but this problem will not be experienced in Belleville, it was reported by Miss H. Lynch, supervisor of the local relief office, today.

Belleville's rolls are practically free of all single men, except for one or two who are reported of unemployable nature.

LITTLE MAIL FOR TOTALITARIAN STATES

Events in Europe, including the Nazified German Republic, and the dictator-controlled monarchy of Italy, lately have had no particular significance for residents born in these countries and now living in Belleville district, it is revealed by the fact that but few letters weekly pass through the Belleville office for delivery to either Germany or Italy. Just one or two regular families of this district keep up the steady correspondence it is believed.

CAR IS NOT MOVED FROM PARKING PLACE

It was just a case of mistaken parking position on the part of Mr. C. L. Babcock, Rednersville, when he reported his automobile stolen off Front St., on Saturday night. Mr. Babcock hastened to the police station Saturday evening to report the theft of his 1936 Oldsmobile sedan. "I left it parked on Front St. only a short ways around the corner off Bridge St." determinedly assured Mr. Babcock. Later, however, it was discovered the car owner had parked his automobile in the same position as described, but on Pinnacle St. and not Front St. The vehicle was found unharmed and where it had been left, police announced.

FIREMEN CALLED ON TO PUT OUT GRASS FIRE ON BENJAMIN ST.

Simultaneous grass fires that burned large areas on vacant property near Benjamin Street and on that part of the marsh west of Zwick's Island on Saturday gave city firemen a busy weekend. Three chimney fires that resulted in little or no damage contributed to the week-end activity.

The grass blazes that started from unknown origins swept swiftly over the dry areas. Fire officials stated today that the grass is as dry as tinder and although of no great length constitutes a dangerous hazard. An area nearly a quarter acre in size was burned in the Benjamin Street blaze while that near the Island also reduced a large area of dried grass.

55 'BEGINNERS' START TO SCHOOL

Shy, Shining Faced Youngsters Get Thrill Out of First Day at School

Fifty-five demure little misses and shy young manhood, red of face and modest in bearing, albeit they were dressed in new finery, took part in one of the most important Easter parades of their young lives today.

For trooping along city streets, clinging to the hands of older brothers and sisters, these youngsters answered the first call of the school-bell.

In all parts of the district and province, from the austere halls of city buildings, and the little red schoolhouses of rural crossroads, the call of the three "R's" went forth to the childhood of the country.

From all walks of life they converged on various centres of learning. Behind them lay the Easter holidays, ahead lay weeks of study with a more glorious vista of summer holidays ahead.

In Belleville the public schools all reported a return to attendance normalcy. The inroads of the dread "flu", severe weather and other causes of non-attendance have disappeared with principals of all schools reporting practically one hundred per cent attendance in all class-rooms.

Fifty-five shining-faced youngsters were enrolled as "beginners" with distribution being Queen Alexandra 15; Queen Mary 14; Queen Victoria 20, King George 6.

This number is well above the average attending school for the first time following the Easter holidays, various principals stated and is due to the fact that sickness prevented the majority from starting school at the resumption of classes following the Christmas holidays.

Police Blotter

Local police were kept busy over the week-end investigating minor infractions of the law. Several men found themselves in the clutches of the long arm of the law on Saturday night and after "cooling their heels" in the cell block were permitted their liberty with instructions to return and face charges of violations of the L.C.A. today.

Lawrence Yateman, Windsor, Ontario, reported an accident to the police shortly after midnight Saturday night. Yateman had parked his car on East Dundas St. when another motorcar, said by Yateman to have been driven by Lee Purdy, Thurlow, collided with the rear of the parked car, considerabl damage resulting to the rear body portion of the Yateman car. The latter man reported the matter to the police early Sunday.

Fender and under-carriage damage resulted after two other vehicles, driven by Charles Carnrike, Consecon, and James Murray, Corbyville, collided at the main intersection of Bridge and Front Streets shortly before 1 a.m. today. The vehicles were proceeding in opposite directions on Bridge Street, when Murray turned north on Front Street. Both vehicles were damaged and P. C. Evans announced Murray was not in possession of a driver's permit when police investigations were made.

Kingston police reported theft of a black colored 1939 Plymouth coupe over the weekend. The licence plate number of the car was not given.

Scout Tablet Honors Memory Of Late Scoutmaster Varley

Unveiling and Dedication Conducted by Major Canon W. E. Kidd

TRIBUTE IS PAID

Tablet Placed on Wall at St. George's Sunday School

Dedicated to the memory of one who had been a power in the Boy Scout movement in this city, members of the 3rd and 6th Boy Scout troops (Belleville) and affiliated bodies, ex-members of the 21st Battalion, as well as officers and members of St. George's Sunday School paid tribute to the memory of the late James Varley in a memorial service and the unveiling of a bronze tablet, dedicated to his memory by the Boy Scout troops of the city at St. George's Church, Station St., yesterday afternoon. During the impressive services Major the Rev. Canon W. E. Kidd, of Kingston and former padre of the 21st Battalion, delivered the afternoon discourse and unveiled the plaque. The late James Varley was Scoutmaster of the 3rd Belleville Boy Scout troop.

Padre Kidd spoke in the most glowing terms of the late James Varley, who was a member of the 21st and who served in the Great War, during which he sustained injuries, which proved fatal on Dec. 23rd, 1938. "I deem it an honor and privilege to be here today to pay tribute to our late comrade, who not only served his country, his God, but was a powerful force in the work of this Sunday School and among the Boy Scouts. Jimmie Varley commanded the love and respect of all his comrades during the war and I am told his efforts with the Boy Scouts were untiring. The enthusiasm in which he went about his work was always an inspiration to those surrounding him, as Jimmie always put dynamic power into his work and he was an inspiration to those of us left because he was always doing something worth while and to whose name we today pay tribute in dedicating this beautiful plaque," revealed Rev. Padre Kidd after choosing part of St. Paul's Epistle as his text in the deliverance of an Easter message of the "Power of the Resurrection."

The bronze-inscribed memorial plaque, unveiled yesterday was presented to St. George's Church through Mr. R. Wensley on behalf of the Boy Scout Association of Belleville, who dedicated it to the memory of one who laboured so earnestly in the interest of the Boy Scout movement in this city since 1920.

The tablet, a square bronze plaque mounted upon a polished base, was inscribed as follows:—

> BELLEVILLE
> Erected in loving memory of
> Our late Scoutmaster
> And Superintendent
> JAMES VARLEY
> Served faithfully until his
> Death, Dec. 23rd, 1938.
> "He walks in the beautiful
> Garden of God."

The plaque was dedicated to the glory of God and the memory of the late James Varley, scoutmaster and superintendent of St. George's Church by the affiliated Boy Scout troops of the city. Besides members of the 21st Battalion, officers and members of the 3rd and 6th Belleville Boy Scout troops were present.

Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church, the Christ Church boys' choir, under Leader George Maybee and officers of the Sunday School assisted in the dedication.

Last night at Christ Church the members of the Christ Church Men's Club held their annual church service, with Rev. G. G. Wright delivering the sermon. A large number of the male members of the church took advantage of the service to attend.

Son Painfully Burned In Attempted Rescue Of Father From Garage

Stratford, Ont., April 17—(CP)—Taking his life in his hands because he thought his father was inside a flaming garage, Bert "Bud" Morris, 19 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Morris, was taken to Stratford General Hospital last night in a serious condition with painful burns about his face, neck, back and hands.

Member of the family looking out of a window noticed the garage had caught fire. Mr. Morris and his son carry on a business of repairing automobiles.

Attaching a tow-rope to the rear bumper of a vehicle Mr. Morris began to pull the car from the flaming building with his own car. He had almost succeeded when the rear bumper on the car broke.

Mr. Morris went around to detach the chain. His son thought he had gone into the blazing garage and rushed into the midst of the flames to search for him. His clothes caught fire and he received serious burns about the face, neck and hands.

Popcorn in Pipe Startles Smoker

Customers of a local feed store chuckled this morning over the discomfiture of one of their number who, while puffing contentedly on his pipe was suddenly startled by an eruption from the pipe which scattered fire and ashes in his face.

Investigation revealed that the man while packing his pipe with loose tobacco from a coat pocket had unknowingly tamped one or two popcorn kernels in with the tobacco with the resultant blast as the heat popped the corn.

ASSERT AUTHORITY OVER PROVINCES, MAYOR,S ADVICE

Jamieson Bone Says Canada Has Too Much Politics

BLAMES LEADERSHIP

Lindsay, Ont., Apr. 17 (CP)—Canada is drifting into a desperate situation due to too much politics and too little constructive leadership, Mayor Bone of Belleville, Ont., told a Lindsay service club (Rotary) today.

Both the major political parties are "hoodwinking the public, spending colossal amounts of the taxpayers' money in reckless extravagance, and keeping us steadily headed towards business extinction, bankruptcy and despair," he charged.

Mayor Bone said he recently stood for federal nomination for the Conservative party, but "did not have a chance of being nominated". The great majority of the convention delegates, he said, "wanted to repay a faithful partisan for a lifetime of partisanship by giving him a job and a salary."

Says Party First Here.

The mayor said in England the country's welfare comes before party with voters, but in Canada the reverse is the case. So the reverse of democracy also would follow. Canada may quite easily be forced to adopt a dictatorship, he said.

"The thinking constructive minority," said the mayor, "will be compelled to a show of force to save themselves and the morons from extinction."

Putting forward his own reform program, Mayor Bone urged that 'recalcitrant provinces and premiers' be disciplined and the Dominion government "assert its authority to govern."

DESPITE OPENING OF NAVIGATION FEW SHIPS SAIL

High Winds and Ice-Packed Harbors Delay Lake Shipping

NO GRAIN MOVEMENT

Toronto, Apr. 17 (CP)—Few ships ventured out on the wind-blown and icy Great Lakes today despite the fact that the 1939 navigation season officially opened at midnight Saturday. Almost unprecedented ice conditions indicated the latest opening in many years.

The Welland ship canal opened today and at Welland the Imperoyal and Iocolite arrived and departed after bringing the season's first cargo of oil and gasoline to this district. At Port Weller the Acadialite and Joan Virginia went up the canal.

The coal-carrier Coalfax was being unloaded at Brockville after opening that port Sunday on a trip fromOswego, N.Y. The Nicholson Line freighter E. C. Pope of Detroit entered Buffalo harbor following a five-day struggle with a Lake Erie ice field.

Captain Bruce Nichols, master of the Valley Camp, was presented with the traditional silk "topper" at Prescott when he brought his ship into harbor Friday to open the marine season. A delegation from the Prescott Chamber of Commerce met the boat, laden with coal from Sodus Point, N.Y., and annually the first ship into harbor here.

At the lakehead ports of Port Arthu rand Fort William, 18 grain-laden freighters remained tied up because Thunder Bay was filled with ice. The few ships which plied the lakes on short runs reported much drifting ice anr packed harbor ice.

Veteran marine men said they believed another week would be required before break-up of ice blocking the St. Mary's River, head of the lakes harbors and other points. Ice in Lake Superior extends beyond vision at Sault Ste. Marie where it is six to twenty-seven inches thick in the St. Mary's River.

A shift in wind occurred last night at Goderich and it was expected that ice fields off that port would be blown into Lake Huron today or tomorrow.

WM. J. HALEY IS SENTENCED

Admits Two Charges of Assault Occasioning Bodily Harm

William J. Haley, 23-year-old Belleville painter, was sentenced to serve six months in the Ontario Reformatory, with an additional six months indeterminate after being convicted on his plea of guilty on two charges of assault occasioning actual bodily harm, arising out of an attack upon William Mifflin and his 14-year-old son, Wesley, after Haley had pleaded guilty to the charges when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court.

"You might have killed some person with this weapon", stated His Worship as he examined the heavy wooden cudgel, with which it is said Haley attacked Mifflin and his son as the latter were returning home last Saturday, April 8th. "It was an aggrevated assault and I understand Mr. Miffling sustained severe injuries", summed up Mr. Donnan.

Police arrested Haley in his home one week ago and at that time found a shovel handle, which was later established as the cudgel which the accused used when he set upon the Mifflins as they were about to enter their home. Today in court Chief Kidd outlined the case and injuries sustained and later entered a signed confession received from Haley.

Haley was not represented by counsel and refused the suggestions of Mr. Donnan to procure the same.

NORTH IRELAND TO TAKE PART

Belfast, Apr. 17 (CP-Havas) — Northern Ireland will not remain neutral in a war involving Great Britain and the Empire, Lord Craigavon, Northern Ireland Prime Minister, said yesterday in commenting on the speech made by Prime Minister De Valera of Eire.

"Mr. De Valera's speech was only a rehash in different words of what he has been saying for years past," Lord Craigavon told the press. "It cuts no ice in the north."

"But when he mentions that the policy of his government is neutrality in time of war he adds one more to the many reasons why he need never expect Ulster to combine with Eire, because we in the north will stand by the mother country through thick and thin and take our part in defending the United Kingdom and the empire," Lord Craigavon added.

Roslin—The annual meeting of the Roslin Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. W. MacDonald on Thursday afternoon, April 13th. There were fifteen ladies and three children present. The president, Mrs. W. White presided. The meeting was opened in the usual way. Vegetable cookery and the refinishing of furniture were the first and second choice of projects for the Local Leader Training School.

The financial report for 1938-39 was given which showed a balance of $13.64 on hand. After some discussion it was decided to give $15 toward cemetery beautification, to be divided equally among the three local cemeteries. This to be carried out next year instead of the usual music grant to the school. Collection was taken. Mrs. White presided for the election of officers which resulted in the following being elected for 1939 - 40:

President, Mrs. W. H. White; 1st. vice-president, Mrs. A. Bates; 2nd. vice-president, Mrs. W. Gillespie; secretary-treasurer, Miss Alice Wilson; Branch. directors, Mrs. J. W. MacDonald; Mrs. H. Chisholm and Miss Blanche Reid; pianist, Mrs. G. Burleigh; District director, Mrs. H. Sills; representatives to District Annual, Mrs. H. Sills, Mrs. W. Slingerland, Mrs. W. Clapsaddle and Mrs. W. Weir; auditors, Mrs. MacDonald and Mrs. H. Chishoml.

The leader, Mrs. H. Chisholm, took charge of the following programme. A paper on "Home Influence on the Young" was given by the leader, Mrs. Sills.

Mrs. Slingerland sang an Easter hymn, accompanying herself on the autoharp. Mrs. White gave a paper, "What is Success". Miss H. Wilson read a poem, "Lines Written in Early Spring." Mrs. H. Sills read the following item clipped from a magazines of the year 1909, which gives an interesting account of the June meeting of that year.

East Hastings (Roslin) Institute

When the delegate to the Roslin meeting arrived at Mrs. J. Chisholm's home, she found benches to seat 150 placed within a few feet and the river and every preparation complete for an open air meeting. Accompanied by the organ which had been placed on the verandah for the occasion, "The Maple Leaf" set the tune of enthusiasm which permeated the remainder of the day.

Miss Susie Campbell gave her address, "The Judicious Housekeeper and Home-Maker" with a number of recipes which induced a most lively discussion on the canning of fruit among the 65 ladies present. After four o'clock the school children trooped in, bringing with them a new element of life. "Oh, the delicious home-made bread, sandwiches, salads, pickles!" wrote our delegate in reporting the meeting.

"I could not imagine this was a new branch," said Miss Campbell, "when I saw the interesting and perfect enjoyment these country men and women take out of their meetings. I have been to many pretentious affairs, which could not at all compare with the systematic way they conducted this meeting. They are young and strong."

The above is a good sample of the East Hastings meetings. The Quinte Branch showed great ability in discussion.

The Melrose branch is most progressive. Their tables, cooking and serving cannot be surpassed by anything in the Institute display.

The Women's Institutes in East Hastings testify to the executive ability of their members. The manner in which their arrangements were carried out merits the highest commendation.

At the time of this meeting the Roslin W. I. had been organized about one year. Their teacher, Miss Masson (now Mrs. William White) accompanied the school children to this meeting.

The singing of the National Anthem brough the programme to a close; after this the hostess served refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

An enjoyable party was held in the Anglican Church hall Tuesday evening. Music for dancing was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. G. Burleigh and Mr. Eugene Tracey.

Many from Roslin attended the dance held in Tweed on Thursday evening, sponsored by the local Junior Farmers' organization.

Rev. F. C. Beazer, Mrs. Beazer and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bates attended the Geen—Varty wedding in Tweed on Wednesday afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Douglas and Mrs. Douglas and family spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White.

Little Miss Ruth Reid spent several days recently with her aunt, Mrs. W. Gillespie.

'NO' TO ROOSEVELT

Inspection in Austria

Meanwhile Hitler began a two-day trip that is to include the inspection of several army training camps in Austria.

Hitler had interrupted a vacation at his Bavarian mountain retreat and rushed to Munich to go over with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop President Roosevelt's message asking for at least a 10-year non-aggression pledge.

Afterwards the Fuehrer took a special train southward last night as Berlin was putting up its gayest decorations for Hitler's 50th birthday anniversary Thursday, amid rumors that one of his birthday presents might be the Free City of Danzig.

Today he inspected a cavalry sharpshooting regiment in the garrison town of St. Poelten, near Vienna.

'No' Forecast on 2 Points

Indications pointed to a definite "no" by Hitler to two of the main points in the President's appeal—a pledge not to attack 31 countries and an agreement to participate in world conferences.

This 'no' however, will be phrased in such careful language that it will not contradict Hitler's repeated assurances that he wants peace, authoritative sources said. The Chancellor was in touch frequently by telephone with his axis partner, Premier Musolini, who also received Mr. Roosevelt's message.

Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischter, termed the communication a "theatrical trick" and recorded the reaction in Rome under a front-page headline, "Rome also unmasks Roosevelt."

The paper said also Mr. Roosevelt was continuing the "old game" of the politicians in London and Paris who seek to encircle Germany and added:

'War Alliance' Against Axis Seen

"If one dispels the fog clouds which have been placed around this experiment with a thousand phrases the contours become clearly discernible of a war alliance against the axis powers which will supply London and Paris with the necessary cannon fodder."

The Voelkischer Beobachter branded the message as one aimed at "thoughtfully introducing a new war-guilt lie into the conscience of the people."

Der Montag said that "the action was started in London and Paris and not in the White House" because "London and Paris knew about it earlier than the American newspapers, which otherwise are informed in advance of Roosevelt's actions."

Birthday presents have begun to arrive at the Berlin Chancellory. Speculation was rife whether the biggest gift, Danzig, was ready for peaceful presentation to Hitler.

Rumors Over Danzig

Rumors circulated that Germany may take that one time German city—with a Nazi-dominated parliament now—with strict attention to Polish rights there. Warsaw is said here to have admitted those rights are of an economic nature only. Danzig has had a customs connection with Poland since the post-war settlements.

In the absence of official comment, the expectation seemed general in Berlin that Poland would raise no objections if it really came to an incorporation of Danzig into the Reich. (Great Britain has pledged aid to Poland if her independence is threatened. Danzig was not among the 31 countries President Roosevelt mentioned in his message.)

FASCIST PRESS

lin," Il Messaggero said.

"It would be a misfortune to allow ourselves to be led astray by such insidious methods.

"If the aims of Roosevelt had been truly what he says they were he would not have presented his proposals in a public document which the addresses learned of through news agencies before they did normal diplomatic channel."

Accused of Insolence

The newspaper accused the President of "insolence" in addressing his message to Hitler and Mussolini alone, adding that "the insolence is aggravated by the absolutely arbitrary and libelous judgment he expressed on what happened in Ethiopia, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Albania."

Il Popolo Di Roma described the President's message as a "demonstration of a desire for publicity, of terrific ignorance, of grotesque presumption and of ridiculous excess."

Accusing the President of acting from motives of domestic politics, Il Popolo Di Roma said he desired "to attach the seat of his pants firmly to the Presidential chair."

It was not known when the Rome-Berlin answers would be delivered but their substance was believed to have been worked out last night at Premier Mussolini's office in Palazzo Venezia.

Mussolini conferred with his son-in-law and Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, and Marshal Hermann Goering, Chancellor Hitler's right hand man who happened to be on an Italian visit.

Many Telephone Calls

It was understood Hitler's views were injected directly to the conference by telephone calls between Rome and Munich where the Chancellor conferred with his Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

In the official communique it was announced simply that Goering had a long talk with Mussolini last night in the presence of Count Ciano. By not mentioning any further conferences, the communique indicated the consultations were ended. Goering planned to leave Germany this evening.

In Fascist quarters the President's messages, asking Mussolini and Hitler to promise not to attack 31 nations in return for Mr. Roosevelt's efforts toward a disarmament and economic conference, were described as uncalled for.

In the case of Italy it was argued there was no threat against another nation. In this, Italian reaction followed the German lead.

All Unfavorable

The first published Italian reaction after a day of studious silence came last night from the official news agency Stefani which carried comment from such widely scattered capitals as Prague, Warsaw, and Buenos Aires— all unfavorable to Mr. Roosevelt's intercessions.

These dispatches said Mr. Roosevelt's message was received with "marked skepticism."

Italy's absorption of Albania — started with the Good Friday invasion of the small Adriatic kingdom—was completed over the week-end.

Following Saturday's adoption by the Chamber of Fasces and Guilds and the Senate of a law approving union of Italy and Albania under one King, the Albanian crown was presented symbolically to King Victor Emmanuel yesterday by a delegation of Albanians.

"The King entertained the Albanians at dinner last night in Quirinal Palace. Among the guests was the Doke of Bergamo, a member of the Royal House who served in Africa during the Ethiopian war likely to represent the monarch of Tirana, Albania's capital.

SYRUP VENDORS NOT AGREED ON SAP YIELD

While the weather of the past few days has been conducive to good sap-runs in the sugar bushes of the district, the general consensus of opinion of vendors on the city market today, was that the general crop will be well below that of a year ago.

Bush-owners of the district to the north of the city stated that while in some cases the sugar crop will equal that of a year ago, others stated that certain bushes will fail away considerably on the season's yield.

Prince Edward County makers report a decrease from 1938 yields, but if the present weather prevails, the current crop will be considerably increased.

SCIENCE AND WAR

Growth in the range and carrying power of planes can be gathered from the figures indicated by a manufacturer who contemplates manufacture in Canada of convoy fighters, recently tested at Croydon by the British Air Ministry. These planes have a cruising range of more than 3,000 miles and can fly at a speed of more than 350 miles an hour. They can cross from Canada to England with a full military load in seven hours on receiving notice.

Who can foresee the range and power of planes five or ten years hence? There is no reason to doubt continued growth, for it at least will continue as long as the strength of materials and men is not overtaxed.

If war is not soon banished from the earth the developments of every branch of science will wreak an awful toll of life and property. Nations that look on war as the chief way of progress must have a change of heart.

Fortunately or unfortunately these armaments become more and more burdensome as man is able to put everything to one sole purpose — militarization

It is not to be wondered at that such men as Mr. Chamberlain look upon the possibility of war as one of the greatest menaces of present civilization It is no wonder he is putting up a fight of democracies to save the world from war, by bringing nations to see that war wil lengulf civilization if men have not sense enough to sit down together. He also realizes that these developments of science which can cause disaster may save civilization, so he directs the greatest British rearmament program in history.

Recently Spain told a story of war of today. How more horrible war now or ten years in the future would be!

Fortunately there are possibilities that these terrors of war, these burdens of depletion of wealth and life which war entails may bring the human race to its senses, or at least give the vast mass of the people such control that no war can be started by any nation.

BUILDING EXPANSION

The latest monthly bulletin of McLean's Building Reports on building contracts awarded shows a substantial increase in building activity in Canada during the first two months of 1939, says the Hamilton Institute. Construction contracts awarded for the first two months of the present year totaled $18,584,000 as compared with $15,692,000 during the same period in 1938 and $15,351,000 during the first two months of 1937. Building contracts awarded for the first two months of 1939, therefore, showed a gain of 18.4 per cent over 1938.

Residential building showed a substantial increase. Thus, residential contracts awarded for February of this year amounted to $5,600,000 as compared with $2,000,000 for February 1938, an increase of 180 per cent. Large apartment projects, involving a cost of more than $50,000 per unit, showed a marked increase in the larger cities of the Dominion.

Engineering projects rose from $1,700,000 in February 1938 to $3,000,000 in February 1939, a gain of 76.4 per cent, while contracts for business property increased 10.5 per cent. The only group for which fewer contracts were awarded in February of this year as compared with February a year ago were industrial buildings which decreased nearly 26 per cent.

The expansion in residential building was most noticeable in Ontario and Manitoba, embracing both apartments and dwellings. A similar upswing in building activity was noted in Quebec and Nova Scotia, but there the increase occurred primarily in small residences. The increase in engineering work was particularly pronounced in Ontario and Saskatchewan.

As conditions are at the present time, it is expected that building activity in Canada will be the key industry in any general business recovery. In this respect, the situation in Canada is similar to that of the United States where building activity in recent months has shown a substantial revival. The effects which the disturbing political situation in Europe may have on building activity is impossible to predict. However, if the European situation should straighten itself out, it is generally expected that building activity in 1939 will be better than during any period in the past few years.

The sun does not shine for a few trees and flowers, but for the wide world's joy. — So God sits, effulgent, in heaven, not for a favored few but for the universe of life and there is no creature so poor or low that he may not look up with childlike confidence and say: "My Father, thou art mine." — H. W. Beecher.

Strength is born in the deep silence of long-suffering hearts; not amidst joy.—Mrs. Hemans.

GOLDEN BELL

Mornings when I am roused
By a slow golden bell,
And all the world seems drowsed
By a hushed, honeyed spell,
I see them softly pass
As through a burnished dream;
Mowers in tall bright grass
Wielding the sickle's gleam,
Lads with their flocks and crooks
Climbing up haloed hills
Or threading pebbly brooks
Where new light glints and spills;
And, if the month be May,
Chaucer abroad to mark,
As Southwark shines with day,
The linnet and the lark.

AUNT PHOEBE'S RED CARPET

REMEMBER THE DAYS OF RAG CARPETS, and the folks who had old-fashioned looms, with their click-clack, and those who had no looms but still saved up their pieces for the rag carpet to come. A friend who remembers the rag carpet days with what the High Brows call nostalgia, which means among other things "homesickness", ruminates as follows on the days of "Aunt Phoebe's Red Carpet".

x

Nearly every man who has watched the march of progress for the past half-century knows that he enjoys, today, countless numbers of the good things of life impossible to him in the days of his youth.

x

If, at the turn of the century, our fathers and mothers had been suddenly placed in a position to enjoy what their sons and daughters enjoy today — if they could have dressed as well, lived as well, spent as much money for this, that and the other — they would have considered themselves as candidates for that privileged class then known as "The Upper Ten", and been the subject of envious criticism.

x

The writer can remember when a new rag carpet on the parlor floor at the old farm was something to point to with pride, and a homemade rug in front of the round wood heater was considered a work of art. And it was a work of art. Just let one of our bridge club ladies try to duplicate it . . . . but in those parts they all knew how, and did . . . . and they were all happy about the whole thing.

x

For a "right smart spell" things went along splendidly. Then one of the neighbors went high-hat on us. A good crop at a high price made possible the purchase of a brand new store carpet — a red one mind you, with floral ornaments big enough to make a sunflower look like a forget-me-not.

x

Wow . . . but how the gals in "That There diggin's" did talk.

x

You see it wasn't a case of their having less. That wasn't it at all. They went wild because Aunt Phoebe had more. She had achieved the "more abundant life." She was the local representative of "The 60 Families" . . . The Economic Royalist of Rural Route No. 3.

x

According to the word-of-mouth progagandists of the pastoral populace she was the Princess of Privilege. However, she was a grand old soul and finally lived it down. You see the red tendencies of the neighborhood could have been rightly traced to the reflections from Aunt Phoebe's carpet . . . and the same thought still holds good.

x

Down through the years those who have kept their ears to the ground can recall the names of a multitude of men who have made important places for themselves. Practically every one of them has been the subject of the most severe criticism regardless of the fact that they have been, in one way or another, responsible for a multitude of successes for others, and honest employment for, shall we say millions. Opportunities have always existed in this land and they exist today, but not for those who worry too much about "Aunt Phoebe's Carpet."

x

Back in the old farm days they made the same fundamental mistake that is being made today. They said it was because they did NOT have. That was not it at all.

x

It was all due to what Aunt Phoebe DID have.

DARK DAYS SEEN

"A correspondent suggests that the time is about ripe to reprint a series of quotations which I published in March, 1932, and which, he says, he has used ever since to rebuke the pessimists," writes a Yorkshire Post columnist. "Not only is the British Empire facing disaster now, but it has been doing it continuously since the beginning of the last century."

Great minds which have thought alike on this subject, he sets forth, including the following:

William Pitt (about 1800). There is scarcely anything around us but ruin and despair.

William Wilberforce (shortly afterwards): I dare not marry, the future is so dark and uncertain.

Lord Grey (in 1819): I believe everything is tending to a convulsion.

Queen Adelaide (about 1831): I have only one desire—to play the part of Marie Antoinette bravely in the revolution that is coming.

Disraeli (in 1849): In industry, commerce and agriculture there is no hope.

The Duke of Wellington (in 1851)—I thank God I shall be spared from seeing the consummation of ruin that is gathering about us.

Lord Shaftesbury (in 1868): Nothing can save the British Empire from shipwreck.

"In 1932 I said that these prophecies still looked like coming true. What was it that was troubling us then? I forget now. It is hard to keep pace with all the crises," the columnist concludes.

VOLUNTEER ARMY

It is not discouraging, this sample census The Daily Mail has taken of National Service. Of 1,000 men picked in 100 cities and towns, 53.3 per cent. were "doing their bit", while the remainder had so far done nothing for the country. Roughly, therefore, every other fellow has got busy. Not bad, perhaps, for a beginning, but non-starters cannot go on depending indefinitely on the other fellow. Much more than a half and half result will be required to vindicate the voluntary principle. Our test census has brought to light that there are still delays in enrolment and lack of vigorous direction in some areas. No more must be heard of such defects. The second half of the volunteer army is bound to be harder to raise, because the most attractive branches of service will be full. The more reason to make the way easy and simple for the 47 per cent . who have so far hung back.—London Daily Mail.

WATCH ANTHONY EDEN

Watch that man Anthony Eden. If Britain ever reaches the crisis of actual war, the former Foreign Secretary may well come into his own. He has just made the patriotic and statesmanlike suggestion that there should be a council of state formed to aid the government in drafting a program generally acceptable to the British public. And in this council he would include Churchill, Lloyd George, Attlee of the Labor Party and Sinclair of the old Liberals. He would have Viscount Halifax as chairman, the man who took his job at the Foreign Office. There is very convincing evidence that Anthony Eden puts patriotism before party interest.—St. Catharines Standard.

BRUNSWICK TWEEDS

The recent display in Fredericton of weaving, of woven tweeds and of clothes tailored from them all made in New Brunswick down to the production of the wool, seems to have captured popular attention. Well it may. New Brunswick has many characteristic products, from dulse to hooked rugs, and all are worth fostering. They stamp the province indelibly on the minds of visitors. They advertise New Brunswick wherever they are mentioned. They are profitable in every respect. As a constant reminder none, however, can compare with a high quality cloth. Whoever wears it is a walking advertisement of the place of its manufacture.—St. John Telegraph Journal.

GOOD WOOL MISSION

Shortly before Queen Elizabeth arrives at Washington, a dress made of wool from 34 states will be presented to her; and a dress woven from wool from all over the British Empire will be given America's First Lady. Sounds like a successful good wool mission. — Buffalo Courier-Express.

David Lloyd George From Wales

Future generations of students of history will examine the career of David Lloyd George with curiosity, and will doubtless remark the political obscurity of his after years. The reason for such obscurity is not far to seek. England demands of those who would guide her a certain moral grandeur and stability of purpose. With these qualities Lloyd George has no acquaintance, and through lack of them his prestige and influence have steadily diminished.

His ability of a certain type cannot be denied, nor may his good service to the nation during the Great War be overlooked. By his energy and fiery eloquence he roused the people as no other man of the time could have done. For this something may be forgiven him. But he made more errors of judgment than can be permitted to a man in his position in the State. He would not take advice from those best qualified to give it, but was always ready to listen to loose-tongued persons, and trusted too much to his own lightning-quick instructions.

He is ill at ease in the company of superior intellectual power, and his conceit, as revealed in his Memoirs is enormous. Lord Carson, for a time First Lord of the Admiralty during the War, had this to say of those strange recollections: "Just imagine! What this little popinjay says amounts to this, 'When I became Prime Minister I found the Army without a General, and the Navy without an Admiral, and I had to supply the place of both'!"

A man of Lloyd George's prominence was naturally closely studied by keen observers. Referirng to his lack of knowledge of international affairs, Clemenceau said, "I have never met so ignorant a man as Monsieur Lloyd George." Robert Lansing, President Wilson's Secretary of State, observed him during the Peace Conference. "He seemed to have neither fixed principles nor a settled programme. His logic was that of an opportunist and was in no way convincing. He was a politician rather than a sagacious statesman, and without the assistance of Balfour, he would have been positively outclassed."

Harold Begbie wrote of him in "The Mirrors of Downing Street": Who does not feel the greatness of Napoleon and who does not suspect the shallowness of Lloyd George? History will unmask his pretension to grandeur with a very rough, perhaps an angry, hand, and will ask 'How came it, man of straw, that in Armageddon there was none greater than you?" For a moment, one is tempted to confuse prominence with eminence, and to mistake the slag-heap of upheaval for the peaks of Olympus . . . His intuitions are unrivalled, his reasoning powers inconsiderable. His schemes are disordered and crude. He surrounds himself with second-rate people, and chooses for his friends the new rich. It is impossible to imagine Gladstone enjoying the society of Lloyd George's friends, and one doubts if Disraeli would have trusted even the least frank of his private negotiations to some of the men who enjoyed Lloyd George's political confidence."

He has been in some tight corners, but has always managed to escape. At the time of the so-called Marconi scandal his career nearly came to an abrupt end. He and others were accused of using confidential political knowledge to further their speculations on the stock market. Lloyd George offered a very humble apology in the House of Commons, confessing to a serious error of judgment, but denying any conscious wrong-doing. The House accepted his plea, but Rudyard Kipling wrote "Gehazi," the most scathing poem in the English language about "Knowledge which is profit in any market place."

So impervious is Lloyd George to shame that a few days later he made elsewhere a challenging, defiant speech, which had it been made in the House of Commons instead of his humble apologies, would doubtless have caused his condemnation.

Power for himself was, and still is, his chief ambition, though he does not disdain riches. He has or had several properties, the tangible result of his well-paid, truculent writings. He has become one of that class of landed proprietors whom he formerly denounced so savagely.

It does not follow, however, from his inconsistencies, that he was not inspired by a genuine patriotism during the Great War, or that he did not earnestly desire England's victory. But his behaviour since has destroyed the fine reputation that could have been his. Public esteem has moved away from him. The London Times, discussing recently (1939) his political manoeuvres, said: "It is a pity that one who had occupied so great a position should have fallen so low."

He is not a great orator in the grand manner of Gladstone. His speeches depend for effect on his fluency, audacity, and brazen misstatements, sometimes on sheer vulgar abuse. His repartee is rudeness; he has none of Disraeli's smooth, sarcastic politeness. Once in Albert Hall a suffragette shouted at him, "We have been waiting a century for the vote!" "You look it, madam," he replied.

He has remained too long in political life for his own good fame. Had he retired after the War, posterity could have remembered him, perhaps even with gratitude, as a remarkable man, but like an elderly prima donna whose voice no longer pleases, he lingers on the stage, hoping for the applause which does not come. He cannot understand why the times and men have so changed. He sees the gulls still wheeling over Folkstone, whence in the days of his power he sailed on his more or less triumphant visits to France (Clemenceau was sometimes troublesome.) The Channel still appears the same. He cannot imagine why the little pellets of his senile anger have no effect. He finds he cannot bring Chamberlain down in the same way as he did Asquith. A sleepy, sitting partridge can easily be bowled over, he knew; but he did not know that it was so difficult to wound that noble bird, the wideawake, swift-flying woodcock, and he is angered by his failure. The veil of privacy that might have concealed his weaknesses has been torn away by himself, and he stands revealed for what he is, a shallow, vindictive demagogue.

It is impossible that he will ever again be a factor in English politics. "Deo gratias Anglia redde."—F. S. M. in Montreal Gazette.

FIRST ANESTHETIST

With the first glimmer of civilization, physicians searched for means of relieving pain. Man has always been troubled by toothache, and the ancient Egyptians were the first perhaps, to extract and fill te[illegible] A highly skilled "anesthe[illegible] always employed by the dentist or surgeon. He was armed with a padded lead mallet, and his job was simply to give the patient a tap on the head with just enough force to send him to sleep.

Skilled as they were, however, sometimes two or three taps were necessary, and at times concussion must have resulted.

We learn also from surviving records that the ancient Zapotic Indian tribe of Mexico had dentists who drained and extracted teeth or filled them with gold inlays. Before any painful operation the patient was given a meal of wild mushrooms and honey, which induced a torpor and enabled the work to be done. Honey was always used because of its highly antiseptic properties. — London Answers.

THE HANDY RIVER

The broad frozen surface of the Saint John river is in the course of a Winter put to a variety of uses. Casual observation at Fredricton and vicinity reveals just how varied. As a shortcut for pedestrians the ice covering affords a convenience which it must have provided right from aboriginal days. Horse drawn vehicles share place with automobiles, and bicycles and baby carriages are used, too. Indeed, a veritable cross-section of the history of transportation is afforded, for also using the ice surface have been motor-propelled sleds and ski-equipped airplanes.

Ski and sleds have swept the surface, as the user either crossed the river or made use of the frequent sliding places on the banks. On many occasions weather conditions have allowed skating over wide areas—on others, the familiar sight of the cleared rink has recalled the opportunities for skating and hockey out of doors.

Week-end observation saw a final touch in the way of recreational facilities. Perhaps it was a sign of coming Spring, of weather conditions which incidentally will see the break-up of the ice covering. Strolling along the ice beneath the highway bridge, an enthusiast was getting in a few practice golf swings.—Fredricton Gleaner.

SHOE MARKET BETTER

For many years the problem of competition by the Bata shoe factories at Zlin, Czechoslovakia, has bothered the North American shoe industry. Because Czecho-Slovakia was a friendly democracy, the United States went out of its way in framing the reciprocal trade treaty with that country to make allowances for Bata shoes. The American Shoe industry protested that tariff on the Czech shoes was lowered too much, and that the competition of Bata shoe's was too tough.

Now that is all over, and Hitler solved one problem he never thought about. For Czecho-Slovakia, including Zlin and Bata, are now German. The tariff is already raised a third on Zlin shoes.

As an immediate result, New England shoe factories are already preparing to increase production by between four million and ten million pairs. Not only is their domestic market more secure, but they now compete in the international market with German shoes, not Czech. And there is expected to be in many places considerable sales-resistance toward German shoes.—Regina Leader-Post.

SIGN ANYTHING

It now appears that the reason 50 Senators were ready to introduct the war-profits tax bill was that some of them hadn't read it. They were told that it was a bill to tax the profits resulting from war, and they were all for that, so they signed on the dotted line without investigating.

This may be shocking, but it is also human. Long ago wags learned that people will sign pretty much anything that is presented to them. There is hardly a town in America large enough to be spotted in the atlases that hasn't a legend of how some fellow of the baser sort got up a petition that began with a loud demand that vice be forthwith abolished, and persuaded a hundred or so of the best citizens to sign it, although down at the bottom was an inconspicuous paragraph demanding that the town's most beloved ecclestiastic, be hanged without trial.

If ordinary citizens fall into such traps, as they do constantly, they should, perhaps, not judge too harshly Senators who fall into a more elaborate trap. — Baltimore Sun.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

It is Now Possible to Get Satisfactory Hearing Aids

For many years our ear specialists have devoted practically all their energies to correcting ear conditions by means of medical surgical, and Xray treatment. After obtaining the best possible results by these methods, the patient was honestly told that nothing more could be done for him.

What happened after treatment was stopped?

Some patients did nothing about it and accepted their hard of hearing condition as something that would always be present. Other patients spent their time and money in purchasing one or other of the advertised cures for deafness. And still others determined to purchase a "hearing aid" that would give them some measure of satisfaction as they mingled with their fellow men.

The ear specialist— otologist — of today is now getting away from the old idea of doing his best for the patient and letting the patient seek his own type of hearing aid and is actually making the tests of the hearing ability of his patient and prescribing the type of hearing aid required, just as the eye specialist tests the eyesight and prescribed the proper type and strength of glasses.

As showing the interest in hearing aids as prescribed by ear specialists, the Journal of the American Medical Association some weeks ago had two interesting papers presented by Dr. Austin A. Hayden, Chicago, and Drs. Isaac H. Jones and Vern O. Knudeson, Los Angeles.

Dr. Hayden stated that ear specialist must take greater interest in the measuring of the amount of hearing present and the type of aid most suitable for the individual patient. An organization, Otologist Service, Inc., which combines the efforts of otologists, specialists in physics, and manufacturers of acceptable hearing aids, offers the ideal plan to help the hard of hearing.

Drs. Jones and Knudeson outline the tests used to enable the otologist to prescribe the proper type of hearing aid. The hearing machine or apparatus used to measure the exact amount of hearing present is called the audiometer. By it the otologist is able to measure how much of the hearing is lost because of sounds not being gathered or collected properly and how much is lost because of nerve disturbance.

MOTHER ON STRIKE

A one-woman strike in Cleveland the other day was completely successful. She had no grievance with an employer about wages or hours, but she had a grievance against her daughter aged eighteen, and two sons seventeen and fifteen. They would not lift a finger to help her in the house. None of them would help wash the dishes after she had cooked and served their meals, they would not go an errand for her; they had just declined to do a thing but expected to be waited on all the time. So she struck. She walked out on them and went to stay with a friend. After one week of attending to themselves they appealed to her to come back and they would be good. Now the boys wash the dishes and the girl assists with the general housework.

There is an old saying that you never miss the water till the well runs dry. Those selfish children never missed their mother till she taught them what it means to run a home and let them fend for themselves. Friend husband may have a heavy day's work, physical or mental, and when he goes home he thinks his wife has an easy time of it. Suddenly, she is taken ill or goes on a vacation. He struggles along keeping the house clean, making beds, washing dishes and so on and he truly discovers that her job is no cinch. After he has made that discovery he has more sympathy for her, if he did not appreciate her before, and gives her a hand if there are no young members of the family old enough to help.

A little cooperation in the home, as in business, is a wonderful help to comfort and harmony. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

SET ON SPRINGS

Dynamiting at the nearby Grand River Dam site disturbed his setting hen, and so Justice of the Peace C. S. Bivens, of Disney, Okla., mounted the nest on a shock absorber improvised of old bed springs.

This experiment, however, was a failure. Only one of the thirteen eggs hatched and perhaps that's just as well. If it had succeeded, some fiend in humorist form would have been sure to perpetrate a bum joke about Justice Bivens' "spring chickens."—N. Y. World-Telegram.

Belleville Male Chorus Delights With Fine Concert

New Series of Concerts Opened at Tabernacle United Church

11 NUMBERS GIVEN

Rich in musical beauty with the fine voices of sixteen of Belleville's outstanding male choristers blending and harmonising in a whole that delighted an audience that filled the spacious Tabernacle United Church auditorium to capacity, the new series of Sunday Night Sacred Concerts was inaugurated last night by the Belleville Male Chorus under the management of Harry Moorman and the baton of Mr. Ross Hunter.

The concert was offered in a series of groups of sacred melodies interspersed by congregational hymn singing, the offering, and a brilliant address by Professor S. M. Gilmour, Ph. D. of Queen's University, Kingston.

Against the melodic background of alternate piano and organ accompaniment played by Mr. Alec Gordon, Bridge Street United Church organist, the concert opened with the stirring tempo of "Hail Smiling Morn." Remaining numbers in this group included "Prayer from the Crusaders" and "Remember Me."

The chorus showed exceptional balance with no particular section showing "heaviness" against the remainder, while the voices blended and in a manner that augurs well for the success of the remainder of the concerts.

Outstanding in the eleven numbers offered by the chorus were the sweet tuneful melodies of the famous hymn "Take Time to be Holy" sung with the chorus seated. A negro spiritual "Listen to the Lambs", sung in a manner, that brought out to the fullest the quaint melodies of these American folksongs also stood out in a program that left nothing to be desired. Other numbers included "Where You Walk", "Hide Me", "The Spacious Firmament", "Landamus", "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life", and "Softly Now the Light of Day."

The chorus includes such well-known voices as Messrs. H. Moorman, J. A. Thomson, S. R. Burrows, F. Sprague, F. Jobson, Leo Riggs, G. Duff, W. Norriss, John Deacon, G. Whittle, A. Crans, J. Bankier, B. Houston, C. Kilgour, H. Williamson and H. Howard.

Prof. S. M. Gilmour, Ph. D.

Ancient Greek and Persian philosophies denied the fact that God had any work to do in the history of the world, Professor Gilmour declared in a fine address "Is God at Work in History." The Greeks, he said, declared we lived in a world of flesh while God dwelt in a spirit world. According to some prehistoric accident man's soul had become caught in a web of flesh and cannot attain the ideals of God until after death.

The Persian philosophers maintained, according to some Jewish and Christian literature, that God was not active in the history of the world because the world belonged to the devil, who had as much power as God. God created the world, but according to the Persian belief, would not intervene until the worst came to the worst. Some people believe that is almost here now, but the Persians maintained the worst would be signified by wars, cataclysms and the general collapse of social and other systems.

"People who read the books of Daniel and Revelations should remember they were written to cope with the problems of that day. Too many persons nowadays are prone to read these books to seek an answer to present-day problems" the speaker declared.

"The attitude taken by the old Hebrew Prophets is that God is concerned in the history, and is unfolding Himself in its past and present," Prof. Gilmour stated. "He has manifested Himself in terms of justice, respect and nobility. Christianity at best can fall heir to the religious insight of the Old Testament philosophers."

In World of Fear

"We are now living in a world caught in a web of fear. In times of crisis we are prone to forget our long range vision, become cynical and egotistical, and turn to some philosophy that tells us God is not interested in the world," the speaker asserted.

"Hatred produces hatred—suspicion produces suspicion," he said, "These have been fostered by the lack of self-respect and mutual disrespect that faces the world today. Christianity must introduce into these realities the only power that never fails, that casts out fear and suspicion, the power of active loving."

"It cannot be a vague sentiment, but translated into an active force that will transform, change and remake the relationship of mankind. God is at work in history to create a kingdom of goodwill, active love and mutual self-respect," the speaker concluded.

The Rev. D. T. McClintock, who acted as chairman expressed his appreciation of the fine music and address. He extended a cordial welcome to visiting ministers and those of other congregations.

"Dictatorship says that persons exist primarily for the sake of the state; democracy says that the state exists primarily for the sake of persons."—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

WALLED CHESTER SHELTERS LINKS FROM NEW LANDS

Old Port of River Dee Still Garrison Town with Mementoes of 18th Century Wars in America

(By Pat Ussher)

Chester, England, April 1[illegible]. — (CP) — This ancient walled city which has preserved faithfully its relics of bygone centuries has a special appeal for Canadian students of history.

Its solid sandstone walls of Roman and Saxon origin recall it was a garrison town in the early days of Christendom. Centuries ago, before Liverpool even existed, Chester was a thriving port on the River Dee and sea-going vessels docked there. Its situation, with the river winding outside the walls, is like that of Quebec on the St. Lawrence—a miniature Quebec on a miniature St. Lawrence.

In Chester Cathedral is a direct link with the old French-Canadian city. Hanging in the south transept are the two oldest colors of the 22nd (Chester) regiment in existence. In one of them — the regimental color — General James Wolfe was wrapped when he fell on the Plains of Abraham at the taking of Quebec. The frail, slender soldier died in the arms of Lieut. Henry Brown of the 22nd Regiment. Beneath the colors, now faded with age, is a panorama view of the city founded by Champlain. The same colors were carried by the regiment in 1775 at the battle of Bunker Hill in Massachusetts when the American colonies won their independence.

Still Building

The red sandstone cathedral dates back to the middle ages—part of it to Norman times. The 13th century refectory building, used by the monks and restored some time ago shortly will be completed with an oak roofing in keeping with its medieval design. The present roof, of plain design, was put there in the 18th century to replace the original oak roof, destroyed by fire.

A few blocks away, outside the city walls, stand the ruins of an even older church dating back to Saxon times. It was once the cathedral church. Remnants of its sandstone walls, time-blackened, stand as a monument to the builders of ten centuries ago.

Near these ruins and overlooking the Dee river, excavation has begun on the site of an old Roman amphitheatre. And in the heart of the city, a slum-clearance project behind the town hall has revealed the foundations of a Roman granary.

During the Civil War in England Charles I stood in the northeast tower on the city wall and watched his soldiers defeated by Cromwell's Roundheads at the battle of Rowton Moor. The Royalist army was besieged for a time in Chester, though Charles himself escapes to Eales.

Garrison Today

Within stone's throw of King Charles' tower the writer saw a modern billboard advertisement for a brand of concentrated broth. It stood just outside the wall. And it bore a picture of Cromwell, Protector of the Commonwealth.

Chesterians are proud of their city which has so carefully retained the monuments of its eventful past. They take their "constitutional" walks atop its wall which form a 2 1-2 mile-pedestrian promenade. One of them a waiter in a Chester hotel, told the writer he liked to spend his off-time during the day dozing on a bench below the walls, in the shadow of Chester Castle.

Today, as Britain rearms with gathering speed, the castle—built by William the Conqueror—is a garrison for part of her modern army.

YOUTH PROBLEM IS FIRST TASK

Hon. R. J. Manion Says He Will Give Question Most Attention

London, Ont., Apr. 16 (CP)—The problem of youth will be among the first to be tackled by Hon. R. J. Manion if the Conservative Party is elected to power in the next federal general election, a test he expects this autumn if developments in the international situation do not intervene.

The leader of the Conservative Party told a meeting of the London and District Association last night he hopes, if elected, to work out a scheme whereby all young Canadians will have an opportunity to earn a living. The best brains within the government and outside of it will be pooled to attack the problem, he said.

Criticizing a system "whereby $600,000,000 has been spent on relief without any return," Dr. Manion indicated that in developing his unemployment policy he would frown upon the system of direct relief. The productive forces of Canada "could be put to work to a far greater degree".

KING'S CRUISER WILL HOLD DOWN ITS HIGH POWER

H.M.S. Repulse is Speedy Warship but Royal Crossing of Atlantic Likely to be More Leisurely

London, April 15—(CP)—H.M.S. Repulse, whose engines and boilers have been overhauled and modernized in Portsmouth's naval dockyard, will make no attempt to challenge speed records on the historic trip to Canada next month with the King and Queen.

Credited with 32 knots in her trial 22 years ago, the 32,000-ton battle cruiser was still capable of nearly 30 knots when she entered drydock. Her ultimate maximum speed, however, will remain an Admiralty secret.

Warships, unlike liners, seldom steam at full speed and on the voyage with their Majesties across the Atlantic and up the broad St. Lawrence to Quebec, the Repulse is expected to cruise somewhere between 18 and 21 knots.

Slower for Comfort

With their fine lines, low freeboard and enormous engine power, the tendency of battle-cruisers is to "sit down" aft when travelling at top speed. Thus even in a moderate sea the ship's quarter deck would be awash if an attempt were made to steam "full out." There would also be a noticeable increase of vibration.

A record run by a British warship carrying royalty is not without precedent, however. In 1908, when King George V, as Prince of Wales, visited Canada, H.M.S. Indomitable publicly showed her paces on the North Atlantic route.

On the homeward run with the prince, the cruiser's average speed compared favorably with the Atlantic express liners, except the ocean greyhounds of the day, the Mauretania and Lusitania.

On that voyage the future King of Britain, father of the present King, gave an early indication of his democratic leanings by going into the stokehold and doing a full "trick" at coal-heaving.

"Sir" to Ship's Company

At the special request of the King there will be no change in the normal routine aboard the ship while the Court is at sea. The King will be addressed as "Sir" like any other naval officer and there will be no unnecessary saluting or curtseying as their Majesties move about their "floating castle."

A naval rating, selected with a group of instrumentalists to augment the band aboard H.M.S. Repulse, will have the honor of crooning the latest song hits for the King and Queen during their voyage to Canada. Several candidates have been considered but the identity of the lucky one has not yet been disclosed.

The band has already gone into rehearsal, with a repertoire ranging from popular dance tunes, light opera to the classics. The King is particularly fond of light music like Strauss and Sullivan, while the Queen's taste inclines to the more classical works, especially Chopin, Sibelius, and Stravinsky. The Queen will have an opportunity of playing her favorite pieces during the voyage, as instructions have been given to move the piano from the Royal yacht, "Victoria and Albert," to her Majesty's lounge on the battle-cruiser.

FRANCE PREPARES IN TUNISIA

As Benito Mussolini, Italy's man of might and aggression, gazes up at the Mediterranean tree, the tastiest plum hanging from the branches is Tunisia, the French north African colony, that in Italian hands would give Il Duce control of the inland sea. France, however, has no thought of ever relinquishing its valuable colony, and action is constantly being speeded up to strengthen the defences. Here tanks and soldiers are seen near partly constructed fortified fortifications outside Mareth, key town in France's "little Maginot line" in the colony.

CROWDS SURROUND ENGLAND'S HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT

While Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain speaks to the House of Commons inside, the Houses of Parliament in London are surrounded by crowds of citizens of all ages, curious, anxious, fervent, wondering, not knowing just what the next hour or the next day will bring forth in the way of hope or despair in the face of the prevalent grave European situation. As the crowds gathered here the premier promised British protection for Rumania and Greece from Italian aggression. —(C.P.C. Radio Photo.)

Asia for Asiatics Likely to Succeed Says Gordon Sinclair

Toronto, April 17 (CP)—"Whether we like it or not the slogan of Asia for the Asiatics is likely to succeed," Gordon Sinclair, travelling reporter for the Toronto Daily Star told the Canadian Cub today in outlining his conclusions after five months in China. "I don't know who will win the Sino-Japanese war, but in the end, I feel sure the white man will find his wings clipped."

Sinclair expressed conviction the war will go on for at least another year, "with the Japanese making no further advance." Japan's twin enemies were possible economic breakdown at home and "the activity of those gleeful, gay and reckless guerillas on the Asiatic mainland."

He saw no immediate probability of an economic collapse in Japan. "Morale is high, army equipment of the best and their consolidation of North China growing stronger." A weakness, however, was failure of the army to co-operate with the navy, and failure of both to consider the ordinary civilian. "The Japanese civilian trying to earn his own living in 'conquered China' gets slapped in the face and pushed around by his own people far more than his Chinese neighbors."

Chinese guerilla warriors "would in truth rather fight than eat," Sinclair said. "They are more like mischievous boys at Hallowe'en than soldiers. Their current plan is to cause the Japanese to lose face and to blow up their [illegible] so that the expected economic breakdown will come sooner."

Italian Editor Thinks World Events Near 'Explosive Stage'

Rome, Apr. 1[illegible] (AP) — Virginio Gayda, Fascism's chief newspaper spokesman, warned today of an "acute, perhaps even explosive stage" in world events as the rest of the Italian press renewed attacks on France.

Gayda wrote in the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia that current conferences between Premier Mussolini and Field Marshal Hermann Goering would "make a new contribution to the system and activity of the Rome-Berlin axis."

He spoke of it in relation to "the present situation which is so burdened with events and imponderables."

Italy and Germany, he said, were able to confront "the system of encirclement" with forces "powerful and for the most part equal and similar" to the "hybrid association" opposing them.

Weddings

BROWN—INKSTER

Marmora—A quiet wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth at St. Andrew's church parsonage on Saturday evening, April 8th., when Olive Jean Inkster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Inkster of Marmora Township was united in marriage to Harry Clinton Brown, son of Mrs. Martha Brown of Marmora. The young couple were attended by Mr. Roy Brown, brother of the groom and wife. The newly married couple will reside in Marmora Township.

GIBSON—COLDEN

Palms and Easter lilies made an effective background at Emmanuel Presbyterian Church, Toronto, on Tuesday, April 4th., for the marriage of Martha Ann, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Colden to Harry Alton Gibson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norris Gibson, Ameliasburg.

The Rev. S. Hill officiated and the church organist rendered the wedding music. The service was choral, the choir of which the bride was a member, preceded the bridal party down the aisle singing, "The voice that breathed o'er Eden". The bride given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Albert Colden, wore a becoming gown of traditional ivory satin, made on princess lines, with sweetheart neckline and leg o' mutton sleeves and fan shaped train. Her tulle veil was held in place with orange blossoms, and she carried a beautiful sheaf of calla lilies.

The bridal attendants, Mrs. Fred Murray as matron of honour, and the three bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Trotter, Miss Mae Haddon, and Miss Marguerite Bonter, were similarly gowned in mousseline organza over taffeta, in shades of yellow and woodland lilac respectively. They wore small heart-shaped hats to match their gowns and carried arm bouquets of daffodils and mauve stocks.

Mr. Earl Wood attended as best man and Messrs. Elmer Osterhout, James Fleming and Howard Gourley, Jr., as ushers.

During the signing of the register Miss Frances Cox sang "Because".

Following the ceremony a reception was held in St. Saviour's Parish Hall. Mrs. Colden wearing Queen's blue printed chiffon, black hat and corsage of roses and lilies of the valley welcomed the guests.

Mrs. Gibson, mother of the groom was smartly attired in Suez sheer with picture hat to match and corsage of roses, sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

Before leaving for Rochester, where the honeymoon will be spent, the bride attired in a Guard's Blue dress and hat and gray coat with Dutch Clay accessories presented her bouquet to the groom's grandmother, Mrs. John Gibson.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Gibson will reside in Ameliasburg.

CORY—HINTON

On Saturday afternoon at five p.m. a quiet wedding was solemnized at the Church of St. Thomas', Belleville, when Rose Emily only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hinton became the bride of Harold Edwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cory. The Rev. Beauchamp Payne officiated.

The bride was charming in a dress of navy printed sheer with navy accessories.

She was attended by Miss Verna Belnap, who wore a dress of wine printed sheer with Paris Sand accessories.

Mr. Albert Hinton, brother of the bride was the best man.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a compact and to the best man a cigarette lighter.

After the ceremony the wedding party was served a delicious dinner at the Radio Cafe.

Later a reception was held at the bride's home for her many friends and she received several lovely gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Cory will reside in Belleville.

WOOD—BLAKELY

The marriage took place at two o'clock, Saturday afternoon at 104 Moira Street West, Rev. J. D. P. Knox officiating, of Jean Marguerite, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William I. Blakely of Mountain View, and Earl William Wood, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Morley Wood, Centre. The ceremony took place in the presence of relatives and intimate friends of the young couple.

UP IN THE AIR, the trimmings of some of the smartest hats. A high crowned hat of lampshade silhouette, made of fuchsia colored hand-sewn braid, has perched on its crown a tall, wired, many looped bow in pink mauve, royal and fuschia satin-striped ribbon.

THIS IS A SEASON for marked diversity in style. A smart afternoon frock is of white taffeta with dark red pin dots and red grosgrain narrow ruchings marking the hem border, collar and shoulder yoke. Skirt is full.

PRACTICAL LUXURY is the fur jacket that goes out over a simple wool frock with as much aplomb as it does when worn over a gala evening frock. A lovely model, cleverly cut to look like a jacket and cape in one, is of rose-beige fox. It has a swirl front and full, swirl sleeves.

FIRST IMPRESSION of this season's styles is of a crisp, colorful appearance. Typical of this trend is a bolero suit of sheer woolen in light navy, the bolero with wide pointed revers of many striped red and white faille. The blouse is of the faille. The swing skirt is quite short.

THE GYPSY IN US just delights in Chanel's gypsy dinner dress. The wide skirt is of red, white and black check taffeta gathered at the hips and much beruffled at the hem. The white chiffon and lace blouse is worn under a triangle kerchief of the taffeta.

QUITE GAY is a blue doeskin glove with red and white embroideries and red stitching.

IVANHOE W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ivanhoe Branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. George Cooke, West Huntingdon on Tuesday, April 11th. The president, Mrs. T. E. Fleming, was in charge of the entire meeting which was opened in the usual way. Mrs. George Post led in prayer for peace. The Roll Call was answered by the name of a parliamentary minister and showed thirty-one members present. Business matters were briefly dealt with. Several letters were read thanking the members for fruit sent during illness. It was decided to give financial aid to a needy family in the community and also to take up a special collection of ten cents from each member to buy clothing.

The president reported on the meeting of the district executive held in Madoc on Saturday, April 8th. and urged that the Branch books be closed by the 30th of April and the financial statement be sent in by the first week in May, also that each convener send in her report to the district convener as soon as possible. Mrs. J. C. Sills explained the Co-operative Programme in Home Economics and a choice of three projects was made to be presented at the District Annual.

Mrs Wm. Mitchell sang very sweetly, "You're the Only Star in My Blue Heaven." A paper on "The Joy of Good Books in the Home," written by Mrs. W. J. Tanner was read by Mrs. Wm. Shaw. Following this Mrs. T. E. Fleming read the poem "The Book" by Edgar Guest. Song No. 41 was sung. Mrs. S. J. Donnan in her usual impressive manner reviewed "Current Events.' Miss Hilda Kilpatrick gave a paper on "How Canada is Governed.' Flower slips were exchanged among the members. Collection was taken and the meeting closed by singing "O Canada". Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants. Assistant hostesses were Mrs. H. Cooke, Mrs. Sarles, Mrs. G. McInroy and Mrs. George Post.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Marriage in China is like putting a kettle of cold water on the fire and letting it come to a boil. In the Occident, marriage is like taking a kettle of boiling water off the fire and letting it get cold."

Very often a letter comes to me which makes the Chinese adage doubly impressive. This one for instance:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My husband and I have been married a little over a month and would be quite happy except that he has suddenly decided that he doesn't like some of the things I do. I've always done as I liked, but wasn't spoiled, because I've made my own living since I was 16 years old.

"I love to dance when my girl friend comes over. We jitter together, and it is life to me. But he forbids it. I always laugh when I'm happy, and I'm always happy. He forbids it, says it sounds silly. I never tell him of his faults, because it seems to me that he hasn't any. Everything I do or say seems to be wrong.

"I am working as a secretary, and usually get home about six o'clock. I don't keep the home fires burning as nicely as I would like, but time doesn't permit. He works also, but never turns a hand around the house. Says it is my job.

I love to be around my girl friends and he dislikes this. I've always had a group of friends around me and feel as if married life shouldn't cut these things out entirely. I understand life pretty well. He is much more settled than I. He is 20 years and I am 19.

"I love him dearly, but, gee, I hate to change. What should I do? Should I try to change his way of thinking about life? My mother advised him not to try to change me. Please help me. Thanks. We both have a balanced education.

Mrs. C."

Judging from the one side of the case, which has been confided to me, I should say that this young husband is more than unusually expert in snatching the kettle of boiling water off the fire and putting it out-of-doors, perhaps, where it will chill more rapidly.

Lots of married people like this, and the kettle-lifters are not always the husbands. Sometimes, wives have quite a pretty talent in letting the matrimonial kettle turn cold. I've never been able to understand why a man who falls in love with a lively girl, one who likes to sing, dance, laugh and be happy, should want to change her into a pale, carbon copy of his own drab personality.

He probably will be the first to find her uninteresting, and rush off to discover some girl to whom the joy of living has not grown stale.

My correspondent's mother was wise when she advised her son-in-law not to try and change his young wife. She knew that nothing makes a home so happy as contagious laughter.

Made-over people are like made-over clothes; they're seldom really convincing, nor entirely successful. But as the young husband who is all for making over his laughter-loving wife is only 20, here's hoping he'll put away his shears and thimble.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Excuse Me" vs "I Beg Your Pardon"

When is it correct to say "excuse me", and when is it correct to say "pardon me"? This is a question often asked.

Properly we say "excuse me" when we are asking to be excused from a room or a table, or any place where we are talking with a person or a group.

As to "pardon me", in the first place we should discard this phrase, which sounds too abrupt, in favor of the phrase "I beg your pardon", which sounds more gracious where graciousness is certainly due. Say both of these phrases aloud to yourself.

"We say "I beg your pardon", or "I'm sorry", if we are guilty of any seeming discourtesy; for instance, when we get in another person's way, when we have to cross in front of someone when we interrupt a person before we realize that he has not finished speaking; when we speak to a stranger to ask a direction or some similar favor.

Never say "Pardon Me" This is a flip vulgarism.

Let's remember, too, that the habit of saying a glib "I beg your pardon", no matter how graciously doesn't excuse your offense when the offense is avoidable' That is, you shouldn't make at habit of interrupting when an interruption could be avoided. You mustn't push ahead of a person or persons standing in line at a ticket window, and think that your "I beg your pardon" excuses your boorishness. If you pass between two people, when this could easily be avoided, your "I beg your pardon" will not make them think that you are a polite person.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

(Copyright 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Dr. Dafoe Describes Scourge of "Black" Diphtheria

There is one infectious disease which you hear very little about today, but the very name of it at one time filled us with dread. I refer to diphtheria.

In my own time I have seen this disease so beaten by science that I haven't seen a case of it for four or five years. Before it was controlled I have known it to take whole families. I myself have seen more than 200 children die of this terrible scourge. I have seen poor little creatures running around the room, gasping for breath, pleading with father and mother to help them.

It is my earnest belief that the discovery of the diphtheria antitoxin was one of the greatest discoveries of modern science.

It is funny how quickly people forget what a scourge it was, or how recently we have been able to do anything about it. I remember my father, who was a pioneer physician here in Ontario, when he used to say he dread diphtheria more than any other disease. I have one of his old text books in my library and when I look at it I can understand why diphtheria was such a nightmare.

The book was published in 1873, and as recently as that they didn't have the slightest idea what diphtheria was, or what caused it. They didn't even know for sure if germs were the cause of it. Some thought it was caused by bad air, or the gases from swamps.

Strangest of all, they never thought of people dying of the disease itself. In their opinion, when a victim died, it wasn't from the poison of the disease, it was just because his strength had given out.

In those days there wasn't any such thing as a general treatment; there was no specific remedy. All they did was burn out the patient's throat with hydrochloric acid or nitrate of silver, and try to keep up strength with food until the fury of the disease ended.

When I say that epidemics would wipe out whole families, I mean just that — and big families too. When I first started practice, I was in a mining section of northern Ontario. One night I received a call that meant a twenty-mile drive by horse and sleigh over a bush road, but I went.

When I got there, I found that out of a family of twelve children, three were already dead, and two more were choking to death. In those days antitoxin was hard to get. I had to drive back the twenty miles and wire for it. When I got back to the home with the antitoxin, only six children were left alive. I toxoided all those, and every one of them lived.

This very virulent type of the disease was always called "black" diphtheria. When you saw a child with this affliction, you gave up hope, for death came in about 48 hours. The modern doctor never sees this manifestation. In fact, he shouldn't see any diphtheria at all, for modern science has given us the weapon to stamp out the disease.

You hear about dinner things, but don't think that the formal evening frock isn't in the fashion spotlight. Especially when there are dresses such as the Ardanse model of slim black crepe over which is posed an enormous skirt of black tulle with wide flounces of black Chantilly lace. The same lace borders the strapless neckline of the tight bodice.

The luxury look is very much present in a Spring coat of natural woollen cut on straight, boxy lines with a wide sailor collar and wide tuxedo revers of natural lynx. Nice for town or travel.

Fresh and fragrant is the guimpe dinner dress, a real fashion for youth. One we admired is of black crepe with white lingerie for the pretty guimpe with its high neck and short, puffed sleeves. Diamante buttons mark the suspenders of the skirt.

Wife Who Whistles Cheerfully and Wheedles Cleverly Can Get Anything from Husband

Dear Miss Chatfield

After a short courtship we were married and now after a few months my love is failing and self-pity is taking its place. Maybe I'm selfish but I can't find any pleasure in service and sacrifice which I have tried. My husband refuses to let me accept a position which would work wonder for us, financially and otherwise, as it would take me away from home every week and help me to get a better perspective. By travelling three days a week, all expenses paid and good accommodations provided, I could earn, net, just what he's earning, gross and replace my cosmetics and accessories which haven't been replaced since I was married. What burns me up is that a man who is out in business must keep himself up to the mark in grooming and dressing and if that consumes all he earns the wife who is staying at home can go without, no damage done, except to her pride and self-respect. What can I do?

Stymied

Answer:—

You can do one of three things: settled down to make the most of being a poor man's wife, not expecting to have costly cosmetics and other luxuries that one hundred a month won't buy: or you can persuade your husband to let you look for a job that won't take you away from home and send you scurrying over the earth with a strange man; or you can defy him, take high road, lead yourself straight into temptation, in all probability fall for it and find yourself without husband home or job.

In view of the fact that only unselfish women who love their husbands dearly can take poverty and privation with a smile I recommended the middle course for you. And remember a man whose vanity is hurt by the daily reminder that he's failing to hold his wife's affection and failing to finance her in the manner to which she's been accustomed, that man is a sore-headed bear.

Remember, too, nothing is so infuriating to a man as a woman's martyr manner. Let his wife drop the corners of her mouth, tell him what she's done without, pretending to a resignation she doesn't actually feel and he's ready to kill her. He understands that she's putting on an act to reprove him and it brings out all the devil that's in him.

To get the okay on your proposal show some sprightliness and courage: you know the tack: "You're having a hard time, dear. I'm young and strong, anxious to put my shoulder to the wheel and push with you. Now come along, let's go over the top together and when we are over I'll retire and be a homebody". Why papa could no more resist such blandishments than he could resist his steaming cup of breakfast coffee. Tempt him.

NASTY FROWN LINES ARE SELF-INFLICTED

By HELEN FOLLETT

Frown lines are self-inflicted. Live calmly, keep sweet, be kind to your eyes and not strain them, and you will avoid those ugly gullies. Be self-conscious about your facial poses. Tranquillity is the guardian angel of the human countenance. Keeps it young.

If these furrows have appeared, a heavy massage cream should be used freely to nourish the tissues. Place the first finger at the top of the line, thumb below, sweep the thumb upward, lifting the flesh smoothing and ironing it. Follow with a circular movement. Keep the flesh relaxed. When fibres are at a tension, massage, doesn't do a bit of good.

Take your daily irritations and annoyances with good humor. Keep your facial tissues unruffled no matter how badly the children behave or how crisscross the cook gets. Frowning is just a silly habit. Why age the only face you have, make it look like a road map?

Eyestrain has a deplorable effect upon the surrounding tissues. If the type blurs when you read, if your soul orbs smart and burn, seek the services of an eye specialist, have an examination; you may have come to the time when you must wear specs.

Eye shadows are the crowning touch when you have arrayed yourself for the grand party. If you have never had the courage to experiment with them, go to a beauty shop and have the make-up specialist see what she can do. You may not be the type to be improved by lid pigment, then again you may.

When applying them, put the coloring medium close to the lashes, do a gradual fadeaway as you work upward. Blend at the far ends of the lids with powder and a small pad. This beauty trick is only for the evening gala. Daylight reveals them for what they are, artifice and nothing else. We are soft pedaling on synthetic loveliness now that fashions have gone way back to the days of good Queen Vic.

Keeps her chin up for beauty's sake.

By HELEN FOLLETT

KEEP your chin up! It will give you poise and it will ward off neck lines. Those down-in-the-mouth ladies with drooping jowls get fiddle strings to beat the band. The head should be carried on the level to promote the health and well being of interlacing muscles that extend from the jaws to the collar bones.

A pretty neck, if given care, will continue through middle age. No reason why the tissues should not stay firm if posture is correct, nutrition going on at a normal pace.

If destruction of the tissues has already started, get active with a heavy massage cream. Palm it in with firm strokes, one hand following the other. Treat the sides of the neck too, and, as the back portion is easily roughened and discolored by scarves and fur pieces, give that a few licks with the soothing emollient.

Let the cream remain on over night. Wring a small towel out of ice cold water, slap it on, cover with a dry towel. The chilled flesh will soon be warm and glowing, showing that the blood streams are stimulated. In the morning use cold water freely. If the skin surface isn't as lily white as it should be, sponge with equal parts of peroxide and strained orange juice.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

THE GOLDEN GIRL

—by—

Agnes Louise Provost and Ladbroke Black

"All right, if you don't want me to."

He lingered, took her gently by her shoulders and turned her face toward him.

"I suppose I ought to be pretty sore after the way you've gone over me, but I'm not. Maybe I deserve it; I've got to think that over. But I'm not giving you up, you know. You might as well get used to that idea, right now. If you could just tell me that it's only the matter of a job that stands between us!"

She shook her head hastily.

"No, I can't tell you anything. Please let me go!"

His hands slid down her arms, softly. "All right, my dear. But you're not rid of me yet."

Gloria turned—and caught her breath. Across the stretch of shadow-dappled lawn the old house basked pleasantly in the afternoon sun. One of the French windows on the ground floor stood open, and for a moment Miss Endicott's spare figure was outlined there, imperious and severe. Back of her two other figures showed vaguely, no more than shadows.

The two at the edge of the lawn drew apart hastily. Jack Moreland turned on his heel and went back, striding moodily along the path with head down and hands thrust deep in his pockets, but Gloria, with rage in her heart and flame in her cheeks, had to cross an endless stretch of velvet turf under those watching eyes, coolly and without outward flinching, until the corner of the house gave her shelter at last. How long had Miss Endicott been at that window? How much had she seen?

X X X

Whatever Miss Endicott had seen, she ignored it completely with an arrogant calm which in its way was rather magnificent. Her callers left presently after a somewhat stiff interval, but Miss Endicott did not at once return to her room. She settled herself, controled and dignified as always, to wait.

When her nephew came in half an hour later, he found her sitting in a big chair in full view from the open door. He waved a brief salute and would have gone on, but she called him.

"You have missed seeing some friends, my dear. Frances Payne has been here with a Mr. Gorham."

"Or, Fran? Sorry I missed her." The regret sounded perfunctory.

"I told them that you might be in at any moment, as the Grey Duck was back at the wharf, but they could not wait any longer. This Mr. Gorham seems a very agreeable man."

"Gorham?" He puzzled for a moment. "Oh, yes, I remember him now. He's a broker. Wonder where Fran picked him up? I may drive over and look him up. I'll probably be gone for several days."

He bent over and kissed her lightly and went out again. He seemed preoccupied, quieter than usual. Miss Endicott's eyes followed him, grey shadows of anxiety lurking behind their chill calm.

"A few days of absence will suit me very well," she reflected grimly. "He will soon forget her. Youth can always forget.

In her own room Gloria curled in a chair by the window and stared out with a troubled frown. She heard a car go out of the drive and caught a glimpse of Jack Moreland hitting up a very considerable speed as he turned into the highway. He usually did drive that way, and his expert handling of a car was one of his undoubted accomplishments.

Dusk came and with it her dinner tray. She ate alone as she always did, and the maid returned an dtook the dinner things away. Presently the maid came again. Miss Endicott wished to see Gloria in the library.

Miss Endicott was once more seated in the straight-backed chair. As soon as she caught sight of the straight line of the Endicott mouth Glory knew that disaster had come to her.

"Miss Staunton, I shall not need your services after today. You will find your check on the table made out for a full week. Perkins will see that your luggage is taken to the station in time for the 7:43 tomorrow morning. Perkins will serve your breakfast early. That will be all."

In her own way Miss Endicott had won. Gloria went out, dismissed, and marched back to the little room that was to be hers for only a few hours more.

Her head was obstinately high, but she felt rather small and her spirits were sinking very low indeed. She had lost her temper and her manners as well, and all that she had accomplished was to make things a little worse than they had been.

She flung herself into the business of packing and tried to forget. Tomorrow as soon as she got back to New York, she would start looking for another job.

CHAPTER V

It had been a bad day for everybody. Miss Endicott had received a blow; Glory Staunton had been dismissed in disgrace from a position that she badly needed; Jack Moreland all unaware of the trouble he had started was putting the miles rapidly between him and the girl who had just refused him. And Frances Payne free at last from Wayne Gorham's observant eyes angrily twitched her gloves off and hurled them aside.

"Well," she thought bitterly, "I wanted to find out what was keeping Jack away, and I did! No wonder he has been too absorbed to look me up. Charming scene! The poor old Endicott furious. Froze into the ancestral dignity and ignored the whole thing even when the girl was coming straight toward us across the lawn."

Frances dropped into the nearest chair and sat there with an angry line between her delicately plucked brows. She had gone to Beechwood to remind Jack and Miss Endicott of her existence, and particularly to get an invitation for an indefinite visit. It would be ghastly slow, but it would be a good way to catch up on expenses and get in touch with Jack. Only Jack had been too absorbed in some other girl even to learn of her presence, and the invitation had not been forthcoming. Whether that was because of Miss Endicott's agitation or for some other reason Frances could not be sure.

She settled back comfortably in her chair. Her good humor was returning. Things might be worse. She was beginning to see some entertainment ahead.

Of course Wayne Gorham with his sharp black eyes had not missed anything. Well, his alleged business with Jack had vanished in a hurry, at any rate. Her lip curled again, lazily. Wayne was a climber—he had probably had plenty of practice in overlooking unpleasant things himself. He'd be glad to take her around until she was on her feet again, for the sake of what she could do for him. An extra man was always useful.

X X X

The house was very quiet when Gloria left the next morning. Fresh clean sunshine streamed in the east windows. Perkins, in spite of his years of Endicott training, looked almost sympathetic and hovered near for one or two not quite necessary services. Rose, the maid who usually brought her solitary meals, was dynamic with suppressed curiosity. With the tray Rose also brought an envelope addressed to Miss Staunton. It contained without comment the check which Gloria had forgotten to take with her the night before.

Outside the air was lovely with the sweetness of early morning. Kelly rushed at her as she went out to the car and she stopped to pat him with a sudden ache in her heart. Why, she loved Beechwood! It hurt to go, it hurt terribly, and being sent away like this was only a part of it.

The car slipped out of the familiar drive, past the banked rhododendrons, leaving the silent house behind. On the left lay the waters of the Sound with little waves flashing in the morning sun and rippling against the white hulls of graceful yachts at anchor. Beauty and dignity and luxury sliding rapidly behind her. Ahead lay a grubby train ride and after that, very soon after that, the tooth and claw struggle for existence again. The dreary search for a new job without any references from the old one.

X X X

Gloria threw her hat on the cot which was a divan by day and a bed by night, and dropped into a chair with a sigh. It was a shabby chair in a shabby room where everything crowded everything else and the one window, looking out on a deep well of masonry dotted with endless rows of other windows, failed at its best to do more than keep the room in a diluted twilight.

The room was no stranger to her. She had lived here for nearly a year before she had gone to Beechwood, sharing the tiny apartment with a fellow clerk. She and Sara Dalton had been quite excited about it when they had first moved in. Now she was shocked to find how dingy and airless it seemed, how cramped and ugly after the spacious dignity of Beechwood. It was marvelously lucky for her that Sara had stayed on after she had left, stretching her own resources until she could get someone else to come in with her.

Sara had been a darling. She had received the returned prodigal with open arms.

That had been ten days ago, and still there was not the faintest ghost of a position in sight in spite of miles of walking and endless applicators. Times were hard and jobs were few, and everywhere the same note repeated itself with a persistence that beat against her courage.

"Where were you last employed? What references have you?"

She had references from her previous employers of course, the firm of public stenographers from whose offices she had gone to Miss Endicott, but sooner or later the question of time seemed to edge its way in, that deadly hiatus of six months when she had been at Beechwood. Perhaps the trouble was that she couldn't tell glib little lies, but she never had been able to do that. And what else was there to say? "I have been a social secretary for the past six months, but for personal reasons I don't wish to ask for a recommendation." Could anything be sillier than that?

"You ought to get in on your looks," said the practical Sara, "only you freeze 'em up when they want to hold hands. Why don't you make up a good yarn about being away visiting your relations for the past six months? Only I suppose it would be just your luck to land some nosey brute who would want to write to your uncle about it — you poor lamb."

Gloria had smiled over that and later had felt a little blue about it. Of course it was ridiculous and could never happen, but she could just imagine the sour satisfaction with which Uncle Robert would write back that he had not seen his niece for three years.

She opened her purse now and counted her dwindling resources. They were slim, for in spite of Sara's objections she had insisted on paying at least for her share of the meals, and her funds were diminishing with appalling rapidity.

Glory put the money back in her purse and slumped glumly down in the old chair. If she scrimped it would last another ten days. No more. And she was tired to death and flat with discouragement, and there was a run in her stocking.

The lock clicked. She straightened up quickly as Sara came in.

"Any luck, honey?"

"Not a scrap. I'll get an early start tomorrow."

Sara sat down on the creaking couch. She was older than Gloria, a tall woman, thin and angular, and looked every minute of her thirty-five years. She made no comment on her friend's discouraging report. Rather slowly she removed her neat fabric gloves, then gave an abrupt shrug and slapped them down beside her.

"Well, Glory, we're in the same boat. Markham & Downes have discontinued their New York office and I'm out. I knew it Monday, but I hated to tell you."

They looked at each other uneasily. Sara shrugged again, and one corner of her mouth quirked grimly. She seemed to be pondering something.

"Look here, Glory, do you mind if I apply for your job with the Endicott? I stopped at the agency today and after a lot of solemn palaver they gave me her name. Special client, very particular, and all that. Mind if I have a whirl at it?"

"Sara, you idiot! I'd be perfectly delighted. You'll get it, too. You'd be splendid at it."

HAVE YOU INDIGESTION, GAS?

If you are troubled with gas, heartburn or indigestion, try a tonic that will improve your digestion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery improves the action of the stomach so that food will be digested better. Mrs. Doris Berrie, 156 Rebecca St. E., Hamilton, Ont., says: "After eating I would get so bloated and suffered from heartburn and indigestion quite badly. I felt very weak and out-of-sorts. I used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it was wonderful. It relieved me of the acid stomach and that weakened condition and it built me right up." Ask your druggist today for it in liquid or tablets.

Do This If You're NERVOUS

Don't take chances on products you know nothing about or rely on temporary relief when there's need of a good general system tonic like time-proven Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women from wholesome herbs and roots.

Let Pinkham's Compound help build up more physical resistance and thus aid in calming jangly nerves, lessen distress from female functional disorders and make life worth living.

For over 60 years one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Pinkham's—over 1,000,000 women have written in reporting glorious benefits—it MUST BE GOOD!

"Going to see her tonight,' said Sara briefly. "She's at the Benham now. How about wearing that black crepe with the white collar and cuffs? I look like Methuselah's maiden aunt in it, so I ought to go over big. I'd better press it first—"

"No, let me! You lie down and rest."

Gloria was up and burrowing in their one closet for the black dress. Sara called after her.

"Oh wait, here's a letter for you. I met the postman downstairs and he gave it to me. It's been following you all over."

"Throw it on the table," said a muffled voice from the closet. Gloria had no time to read letters now.

The black crepe was pressed and a stitch or two taken, eggs were scrambled on the gas plate and coffee made. Sara was critically inspected and approved, neat, plain and respectable, hiding excitement and humor behind a rather grim smile. She said, "Thanks, Glory, wish me luck!" in a rather gruff voice, and the door clicked behind her.

CHAPTER VI

Not until long after Sara had gone did Glory remember the letter. She reached out languidly and dragged it toward her as she lay limply relaxed on the cot couch. With Sara's departure her own excitement had died, leaving staleness and discouragement. No job, no prospect, no amusing place to go, no money to spend. Money! Everything came back to that sooner or later. Life wasn't anything without it.

She scanned the outside of the letter without any particular interest.

"John Carver, Counsellor-at-Law."

That was the name in the upper left-hand corner, and the address was Chicago. There was a teasing familiarity about the name. Oh, yes, there had been a Mr. Carver who had come to see Uncle Robert on business once or twice, but she had merely seen him come and go.

She tore the letter open. If Uncle Robert had carried his disapproval to the point of sending his regards to her through a lawyer—

Her eyes widened and went swiftly down the page. It jerked unreliably in her excited hand. She raced to the end, stared for a moment at the neat signature and then sat up and swung her feet to the floor. It couldn't be true—not just like that. She drew a long breath and read the letter through again, slowly and carefully.

Uncle Robert was dead. There was something rather shocking in that—it did not seem possible that his grim, tenacious hold on life had been torn loose—but there was no use in pretending, even to herself, that the news could bring any real grief to her. Uncle Robert had not been pleased with his younger brother's marriage; he had been still less pleased when a girl child had been left without parents or money for him to look after. He had given her the shelter of his roof and the dry husks of a grudging charity, and yet when the child had grown up he had violently opposed her going out to earn her own living. She had won her fight at last—but he had been harsh and contemptuous about it.

That had been three years ago, and he had not written her a line since nor given the faintest indication that he was aware of her existence although she had sent him brief, primly dutiful letters at longish intervals. Now Uncle Robert was dead and it seemed that he had been rich, much richer than anyone had guessed, and outside of a few meager bequests to charity he had left her his entire estate ".. .. provided the said Gloria Staunton, if she is not already married, shall marry within thirty days from the date of my decease."

Glory drew a long shaking breath. A fortune, ease, all the things that make life smooth and graceful, freedom from pinching economies and the lurking fear of need, freedom for all the things she longed to do, for life and beauty and laughter. All these things if she would marry somebody—anybody—within thirty days. Just like that! Even beyond the grave Uncle Robert meant to have his own way. Holding this out to her tantalizingly, triumphantly, pulling it back with a ghostly hand. Do it my way or do without!

Mechanically she looked at the letter again. It had been a long time reaching her, following her about from one address to another.

She had only five days and not thirty in which to comply with the provisions of the will!

X X X

Late the next afternoon Miss Endicott's new secretary sat writing in the tiny anteroom to Miss Endicott's favorite suite at the Benham. Miss Dalton had good eyes and a wide pleasant mouth, but no one would think of calling her beautiful. Miss Endicott was well contented with her choice.

"You are doing very well, Miss Dalton," she said graciously. "Be prepared to return to Beechwood with me next week. Please see that I am not interrupted for the rest of the afternoon unless my nephew, Mr. Moreland, should call or telephone."

Miss Dalton bent her head politely in response, but her eyes were alert in spite of the shadows beneath them. She and Gloria after her excited return last night had sat up until daylight, feverishly working to make her wardrobe fairly presentable for the Benham and Beechwood.

Sara was interested in this new position of hers and glad that she had it. It held possibilities that she would not admit to rebellious Glory, who had told her what had happened to cause her dismissal, and last night had also bitterly told her of the tantalizing mockery of her inheritance. Sara was more than interested to see Jack Moreland. She hoped with almost desperate impatience that he would come this afternoon.

For two hours she wrote patiently, transcribing in her incredibly neat hand the long personal letters that Miss Endicott loved to send to her friends. Then Jack Moreland came.

She caught the quick surprise in his face as he looked from her to the papers in front of her and the portable typewriter that she had brought.

"Is this Mr. Moreland? Miss Endicott left word that she would see you as soon as you arrived."

"Yes." He had a friendly smile, but there was still that look of puzzled surprise in his eyes. "Are you with Miss Endicott? I don't seem to have seen you before."

"I am Miss Endicott's new secretary. My name is Dalton. I will tell Miss Endicott that you are here."

Sara tapped on Miss Endicott's door and announced him. Then she went back to her work.

"He's crazy about her,' 'she decided. "He expected to see her and he was worried to find that she was gone. If he knew that she had simply been fired, I'll venture the guess that he would be pretty mad. If Auntie tells him that, I'm much mistaken."

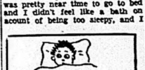
I'm suppose to take a shower every morning only I often dont on acount of not getting up in time, so I'm suppose to take a real bath every Sattiday night no matter what elts happens, and tonight it was pretty near time to go to bed and I didn't feel like a bath on acount of being too sleepy, and I said. Well, I guess I'll go to bed.

Thinking ma might say all right and make it okay to go without taking a bath on the way. Wich she didn't, saying, I suppose you mean after your customary bath, and now mind you I dont want to hear one word about posponing it.



I'm sure Benny wouldn't dream of such a proposal, I'm sure nothing is further from his mind, pop said, and I said, Sure, G, only it seems to be a little windy out, and when it's windy tne bathroom is libel to be the windiest place, especially if the window is axsidently not all a ways closed.

Well then close it for land sakes, the next thing we know you'll be wanting a valley to hand you the soap, ma said, and I said, O well, maybe I wont even catch a cold even if there is a draft but anyways I hope the exercize wont wake me up so I wont hardly be able to sleep and maybe loss some growth.

Deer deer, we all hope so, I'm sure, ma said, and pop said, Well just in case you sant sleep, be sure to count sheep. It may not put you to sleep but it's wonderful practice in arifmetic. I knew of a sleepless man who counted so many sheep that he became a wizard at figures and in no time at all he got a job as expert public acountant and spent a happy life enjoying the discomfort of much richer men as he helped them make out their income tax returns, now go and take that bath and dont spare the soap, he said.

Wich I didn't on acount of the lather being the best part of a bath, and I slept perfect.

FREEDOM OF TOES

In Kansas City, Missouri, the women are reported "up in arms" over a legislative proposal which would place in bondage every feminine big toe in the state.

Charging that a "plot" was being engineered by some fifty legislators to prohibit the sale of toeless and heel-less shoes, the women plan a march on the state-capital at Jefferson City to protest against the projected law, which was recently referred to the house committee on public health.

Concerted action was decided upon at a meeting when the president of a business women's club maintained that their rights were at stake.

"We're not going to let any man, or body of men, tell us what we can wear and what we can't," she said. "Every woman who wants to stand pat on her individual rights is supporting us."

The sponsor of the bill, a Kansas City lawyer, was unperturbed. He said that he and other supporters of the measure intended to bring it to the floor of the house in an honest desire to preserve the 'beauty and health' of feminine feet.

While the proponents may be sincere in their intentions, it is fairly safe to wager that the bill will never become law. Women have very definite ideas as to their rights in the matter of styles and are not likely to yield an inch, especially when the contemplated restrictions have been drafted by mere males. Incidentally, the legislators of Missouri must be short of legislative material when they devote time to a bill of this nature.—Galt Reporter.

SMITH WAS THERE

A man told me that he sat with two other men on a train going to Ottawa — strangers to him. They talked business without caution. They were going to Ottawa to get an order—in the construction field. They even said, "It's too bad we're putting one over on Smith" — not knowing that it was Smith who was in their presence, and listening with greedy ears. Smith was after the same business. When Ottawa was reached Smith took a taxi!—to go four blocks. He got to the source of the order first and secured it! Smith says that there is a moral to the story. Just what moral?—J.C.K., in Marketing.

Eddie Shore Paid Tribute As Best Player in World As Bruins Win Stanley Cup

Defeat Leafs in Fourth Game by Score of 3 to 1

CUP PRESENTED

Conacher and Hill Provide the Winning Margin of Play

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Boston, April 17—(CP)— Just about the biggest story to come out of Boston's Stanley Cup triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs is the fact that Eddie Shore is still the best hockey player in the world.

As the National Hockey League President, Frank Calder, prepared to present the world championship trophy to Manager Art Ross after the Bruins' 3-1 victory in the Gardens last night, the ceremony was halted by a clamor from the 17,000 spectators.

"We want Shore," the crowd shouted. "We want Shore."

And 38-year-old Eddie, a kingpin of the Bruins when they last won the cup in 1929, had to come out to the ice before the demand ended. Then, the welcome for Shore was louder than the acclaim that greeted the presentation of the ancient cup..

Remarkable Tribute

It was a remarkable tribute to the worth of the venerable defenceman from Fort Qu'appelle, Sask. and Edmonton, for younger and swifter players had stolen most of the scoring spotlight in Boston's drive to the National League title, then to a cup semi-final win over New York Rangers and finally to the success over Toronto.

As the Bruins finished off the march in the fifth game of a round scheduled for seven, Shore was the hurtling blocker and the inspiration of the team again. When the Leafs threatened—and they did that often—he slid across the ice to break up a play, or skated the attackers out of range. He also began the play that brought Roy Conacher's winning goal.

Started Winning Play

With the score tied late in the second period at 1-1, Shore broke up a rush at the Boston blue-line and handed the puck to Bill Cowley in full flight. Cowley carried it to the Leaf defence, where he passed to Conacher coming down the middle. Two men were trailing Conacher, but he left them far behind as he came in to rip a shot past Goalie Turk Broda's shoulder.

After that, the Leafs struck back desperately. Foiled for a while in the third period by penalties to two of their men, Reg Hamilton and Bingo Kampman, the visitors soon were rapping hard at the Bruin end. Always Shore seemed to be in the way, sliding and blocking or clearing the puck down the ice.

He drew a tripping penalty with three minutes to play, but that was counter-acted quickly by a penalty to Nick Metz of Toronto. Less than a minute from the finish, Bill (Flash) Hollet made the Bruins' margin secure by pulling Broda out and putting the rubber in the empty net.

Both Scored in First

Each team scored in the first period on a power play while the opposition was short-handed. Mel Hill punched Boston's first goal with Gordon Drillon of the Leafs in the penalty box, and Bingo Kampman levelled the score for Toronto just before the first interval on a shot from near the blue-line during a session of furious jamming.

It was fitting that Hill and Conacher, both first-year men, should score in this game, for they had been the Bruin pinch-hitters all through play-offs. Bill broke up 3 games in overtime during the semi-finals and Conacher got both goals when Boston won the fourth game 2-0 at Toronto last Thursday.

There was an achievement, too, for Cowley, one of the game's great play-makers, assisting in the first two Boston goals, he set a record for pointmaking in cup play-offs with 14 points.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

Associated Press Sports Writer

Providence, R. I., April 17—(AP)—Walter Hagen is going to write a book and if he tells half he knows he'll lay 'em in the aisles.... Tomorrow night's featherweight scrap here between Leo Rodak and Joey Archibald will be the first championship fight ever held in Rhode Island.... Dizzy Dean wanted to try to become a lefthander, but the Cubs decided he was too much that way already yet.... Those who saw Lou Gehrig get in his own way several times against the Dodgers decided the boys who wrote Lou's legs were going weren't kidding.

They've been accusing F.D.R. of trying to start a war and he obliges today by firing the first shot in the American League campaign.... Jimmy Johnston refuses to be stymied and now claims the white heavyweight championship for Bob Pastor.... Says even Louis can't beat him out of that one.

Get here early....It's only a matter of hours now until Los Angeles fight fans will walk right in, turn around and walk right out again.

The brooks are really hustling for Durocher and no kidding.... One reason is he's substituted pats on the back and an occasional sharp word for the clubhouse cussing Burleigh Grimes used to hand out after the game.

Extra, extra ....While most of the experts are stumbling over each other climbing aboard the Cincinnati bandwagon, Hugh S. Fullerton, daddy of all the pickers, come out with a blast in the current "Sporting News" that the Reds won't finish better than sixth.

Add Hagen: "The Haig," who is circulating again with all his old time charming and disarming manner, may get a bid to that very exclusive Goodall round robin tournament this year.... Only the cream of the crop is asked and only ones invited so far are Snead, Guldahl and Picard.... President Ford Frick will be on deck at today's opener in Cincinnati.

LOUIS FAVORED TO BEAT ROPER

Heavyweight Champion to Defend Title in Los Angeles Tonight

Los Angeles, April 17—(AP) — Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis remained an overwhelming favorite to belt Jack Roper into the ashcan of pugilism today as Los Angeles awaited the bell for their 10-round championship encounter at Wrigley Field tonight.

Barring what would doubtless be the biggest upset of all times in a sport that has registered many a back-firing prediction, the Brown Bomber from Detroit was expected to make his sixth defence of his crown as successfully simple as most of the previous title affairs.

Betting on the outcome, such as there is, found Louis a 10 to 1 or better choice, with most of the wagering centred on how many rounds Roper will or will not last.

Big Jack, veteran of a thousand and one fights in a prize ring and most of them stormy, faced the biggest chance of a splotchy career backed by a small but loyal band of followers, who shared with him deepest scorn for the mighty Louis prowess and the list of Louis victims.

California's first heavyweight championship fight in 30 years and Los Angeles' first in history promised to be as colorful as it did brief. Upwards of 30,000 souls, among them the usual glamour boys and girls from Hollywood's film set dotting the ringside, were expected to witness the bout.

Basketball Squad Wins Eastern Title by Defeating Montreal

Windsor, Ont., April 17—(CP) — Windsor Alumni will make their bid for the Senior Men's Dominion Basketball Championship next week at Victoria without captain Red Wiseman. The team leader fractured his arm, it was learned today, during the first three minutes of play Saturday night as Alumni defeated Montreal Dominion Douglas 41-26 to take the second straight game in a best-of-three series for the Eastern Canada Title.

Victory brought Windsor its eighth Eastern title in 11 years. once in 10 years has Windsor failed to reach the Eastern finals. They have never lost a game on their home floor in the Eastern finals.

Alumni leave Wednesday for Victoria to meet the Dominoes, champions of the Western senior cage world in a best-of-five series that opens April 22.

Windsor's smooth passing attack functioned most of the game and the heavier Montreal squad, after taking an early lead, trailed at least six points throughout the remainder of the game.

Wiseman's injury, when he crashed into a wall, cut the Windsor squad to seven, and two more were forced out before the match ended. Stan Nantais was banished for personal fouls and Tom Pendelbury was out with an injured eye.

BILLY TAYLOR IS HELD SCORELESS AS ROAMERS WIN

Elmer Kreller Shadows High Scorer the Entire Game

SCORE IS 4-1

Cliff Kilburn, Edmonton Goalie, Brilliant in Victory

By DICK SHERIDAN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, April 17—(CP)— Just when all but a few had counted Edmonton out of the Memorial Cup junior playoffs the Roamers got back into the picture with one of the simplest bits of hockey strategy. By blanket-checking Billy Taylor, Oshawa's star, Roamers scored a 4-1 victory here Saturday night and forced a fourth game in the best-of-five series. The game will be played here tonight.

Elmer (The Shadow) Kreller naunted Taylor without a letup and for the first time in the series the classy centre went scoreless. In tying up Taylor, Kreller disrupted the Oshawa attack and stopped the machine which scored 21 goals in the first two games. Taylor accounted for nine of the tallies.

Slowed to a Walk

The largest crowd of the series—11,898 paid—saw one of the greatest juniors in two decades slowed down to a walk by the superb work of Kreller and the only real scoring threat Taylor had came as his check served a first period penalty for interference.

After the game the Roamer centre said it was the "toughest job" he'd ever had. "All I thought of was Taylor. I didn't ever think of the puck. I didn't care whether I scored. But I was determined to keep Taylor from scoring."

Sharing honors with Kreller for the upset victory were goalie Cliff Kilburn, Paul Steffes, Johnny Chad and Harry Pardee. The defence of Dave Farmer, Bob Pentland and Pardee was also good.

Goalie Much Different

Kilburn looked entirely different from the nervous lad who was beaten nine times in the first game. His save on Taylor's bid for a goal in the first period was sensational while he turned back Norm McAtee and Nick Knott after they had worked in close for shots.

The one puck that beat him in the first period was a sliding shot by Jimmy Drummond, Oshawa defencemen who had stepped around Pardee following an end-to-end rush. Kilburn went down but the rubber slid under him!

Steffes got two goals with Chad and Pardee tallying one each. Paul's first goal was about the neatest of the night. He grabbed Pentland's pass and coasted in on goalie Les Colvin to beat him with a backhander.

George Agar set up the play for Chad's goal, the right winger firing a rising shot some five feet out after snaring Agar's pass out from behind the goal. Steffes got his tally on a breakaway.

Colvin played a remarkable game in the Oshawa nets and starred, with Drummond, for his team. Three times in as many minutes in the third he turned back the Roamers' forwards after they had broken away from power plays.

ROYALS ASSURED VOCAL SUPPORT

Montreal and Port Arthur Will Play Second Game Before Full House

Montreal, April 17—(CP)—Hockey faithful gathered early at the Forum today to snatch up standing room and rush end tickets for tonight's Allan Cup game, second of the best-of-five games series between Montreal Royals and Port Arthur Bear Cats.

Trailing by a game after losing the opener 6-5 in overtime, Royals were assured of vocal support even if the odds turned slightly to the Western Senior Amateur Hockey Champions. Royals are known for their fighting qualities and a near sellout is expected to watch them do battle.

They will need all their fight and maybe more if they are to take the Bear Cats. Shaky on defence, where they need most to be strong, Royals hope to check the speedy Westerners into submission.

With this in mind they are bringing up an extra forward, Hal Dewey, and dropping defenceman Bill Davies for the game. This means Bert Janke and Herman Murray will carry all the burden of the rearguard except when big Pete Jotkus can be spared from forward duty to give them a rest.

SKILFUL SCOUTSDEMONSTRATE INDIAN ARCHERY AT CYCLORAMA

Into the Coliseum at Toronto went an invading force of 5,000 Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs on April 13 to show other thousands of spectators who followed just what scouting teaches and makes of boys. Among demonstrations of camp life, great interest centred around this archery display. Work was shown in 100 booths.

BASEBALL FANS JAM STADIUMS ON OPENING DAY

Every Team in League Claiming Pennant at End of Season

CUBS HOPEFUL

Yankees and Senators Open Season Before the President

New York, April 17.—(AP)—It's a long vista that stretches today before the major league baseball clubs—and if the fans who so raptly turned their attention to the openings have predictions as to the finish, the managers for the most part haven't.

Of all the 16 pilots only two ventured today to forecast that the flags were theirs and both claimed the same pennant.

Gabby Hartnett, loquacious leader of the Chicago Cubs, and Bill Terry of New York Giants, spoke right out for the National League buntings.

"We've got the reserves and we have got the regulars, so why shouldn't I pick the Cubs to win again?" demanded Gabby.

The answer came from Terry:—

"We have an infield now and a man, who can hit for distance. The outfield should be stronger too and we have enough pitching to win. Yes, I think this will be a Giant pennant year."

McCarthy Cautious

The real surprise was the cautiousness of Marse Joe McCarthy of New York Yankees, whose plight readily accounted for the reticence of his fellow managers in the circuit. After much prodding McCarthy admitted he had a chance.

"I'm not going to say the Yankees are going to win the American League pennant again because I have not seen the Red Sox, Tigers, Indians and other clubs. But I think my team has a good chance to repeat."

Two games were listed today to give the leagues a ceremonial launching of baseball's Centennial year, with all hands swinging into action tomorrow. At Washington the Yankees and Senators have a date and at Cincinnati, birthplace of professional baseball, the Reds and Pirates will try to get in a debut before the rising waters of the Ohio River take over the field.

Tomorrow the teams will line up this way — National League — Cincinnati at Chicago, St. Louis at Pittsburgh, New York at Brooklyn, Philadelphia at Boston; American League — Boston at New York, Washington at Philadelphia, Chicago at Detroit, Cleveland at St. Louis.

HARRINGAY WINS BRITISH TITLE

Greyhounds Consistently Lead Loop Throughout Season

London, April 17—(CP Cable)—A whirlwind finish in the National Hockey League has given the championship to Harringay Greyhounds who consistently led throughout the season. Wembley Lions with 37 points finished just one below the leaders.

Lions had come up fast during the past few weeks and almost nosed out the 'Hounds.' They did beat the Harringay outfit 5-2 in their last scheduled game Saturday night, but it didn't matter much as Greyhounds were three points ahead and could not be passed.

In third place were Earlscourt Rangers with 34 points, barely ahead of Harringay Racers, last year's champions. Wembley Monarchs, runners-up in 1938, were next and the lowly Brighton Tigers in the cellar.

This season was marked with the suspension from British hockey of Streatham. The loop carried on with only six teams.

Champion Greyhounds carry the following players: Jimmy Foster, Winnipeg, goalie; Jack Brunning, Winnipeg; Bill Brunning, Winnipeg, Joe Beaton, New Glasgow, N.S.; Dunc Cheyne, Winnipeg; Hazen McAndrew, Toronto; Duke Campbell, Winnipeg; Conny Tudin, Overbrook, Ont.; Joe Shack, Winnipeg; Bill McGregor, St. Boniface, Man.; Wilf Mattson, Winnipeg; and Dick Behling, Kitchener, Ont.

Final standing:

KINGSTON LOCOS APPLY FOR BERTH IN EASTERN LOOP

Will Have to Get Permission from the O.B.A. Before Request Considered

O'MEARA PRESIDENT

Ontario - Quebec Series at End of Season is Being Planned

Ottawa, April 17 —(CP)— An Ontario-Quebec Senior Amateur Championship series, aim of local officials of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association, was nearer realization last night and it was hoped the playoff might be arranged for this season.

The E.O.B.A. 15th annual meeting here Saturday was told of the formation of the Northern Ontario Baseball Association and tentative plans were made to bring the champions of the new association into a playoff with the eastern branch and Ontario Baseball Association titlists with the ultimate winners meeting the Montreal City League title-holders for the Ontario-Quebec crown. It was understood efforts would be made immediately to promote such a series.

Canadian Locomotive Works Baseball Club of Kingston, Ont., made application for admission to the E.O.B.A. but it was announced the club would have to obtain permission from the O.B.A. before consideration could be given their request. The Kingston club played in the Bay of Quinte loop last year.

Clair Forster, giant right-handed pitcher who formerly played with Montreal Royals of the International Baseball League, Ottawa Braves of the Canadian-American loop and several other minor league clubs, was returned to amateur standing after a two-year retirement from the game.

E. V. (Eddie) O'Meara of Ottawa was re-elected President. Other officers elected were G. E. Fitzpatrick of Prescott, first vice-president, V. A. R. McLean, Ottawa, second vice-president, James Maloney, Renfrew, third vice-president, and J. H. Lowrey, Ottawa, secretary-treasurer. Mr. McLean also was elected first vice-president of the junior division of the E.O.B.A.

If Ol' Sol' and the weatherman get together the two major baseball leagues swing into action with the champion New York Yankees at Washington, where President Roosevelt will do honors of tossing out the first ball in the American League as has been the custom down through the years until it has become an institution and really part of the great summer pastime. At the same time over in Cincinnati, however, the National League will have a premature opener with Pittsburg Pirates meeting the Reds. All of this is scheduled for today, but tomorrow is the big day of major league baseball when all of the clubs in both major leagues pry off the 1939 lid and commence that long struggle for world's series honors. Tuesday's openers include, in the American League — Chicago at Detroit; Washington at Philadelphia; the Boston Red Sox at Yankee Stadium and Cleveland at St. Louis. In the National League we find Cincinnati at Chicago; Philadelphia at Boston; the New York Giants meeting the Dodgers over in Flatbush and St. Louis at Pittsburg.

Today a long, lean fellow with a great heart—Monty Stratton—will start all over on a baseball career. Less than six months ago Stratton's diamond worth was well established, he had just finished a season in which he won 15 games to top all pitchers of his club the Chicago White Sox. Stratton seemed headed for a great pitching career, but fate stepped in and during a hunting expedition last November, Stratton was accidentally shot in the right leg, which subsequently resulted in its amputation and blasted forever his bright chances of becoming one of the finest young moundsmen of all times Stratton recently was signed as a coach by the White Sox and guaranteed a life-time job, but he still entertains visions of facing American League batters from the White Sox' mound. Wearing an artificial leg Stratton is slowly learning to pitch and field all over again; quite a feat if he accomplishes it. "I can bend and catch easily, but will have to learn to steady myself when I weigh down on my new leg. I'm not counting on pitching for a year, however," added Stratton recently. Today the White Sox and Cubs are playing a benefit game for Stratton in Chicago with all receipts going to the injured coach. Fair weather would guarantee him between $20,000 and $25,000.

Among the experts there are differences of opinion regarding the 1939 winner of the National League, some favor the Cubs to repeat, others are calling the Giants, all seem to cast convincing eyes towards the Cincinnati Reds, providing they unearth a good man for the keystone sack position, and the Pirates are given favorable mention along with the Boston Bees. However, a lot of the experts are overlooking a really hot bet in the St. Louis Cardinals—the old 'gas-house gang' spirit has returned so keep them in mind. Over in the American League all one can hear is "The Yanks are coming"—or "how can we stop McCarthy's gang?" Of 90 baseball writers' votes, all but 12 went to the Yankees to repeat in 1939. Ten went to the improved Boston Red Sox and two to Cleveland. Unless DiMaggio and company break a few legs they will not finish worse than second—remember we warned you in April of next autumn's shower of Yankee hits.

It may be to cut down expenses, but taking a tip from experiments in Ottawa, two British ice hockey teams are trying five-man hockey as an experiment. The five-man game was introduced during the Ottawa city league last winter and found to be quite as thrilling as any other type. One defenceman, a goalie and three forwards are used. A novel manner in which to increase the scoring, we'd imagine. (Streamlined hockey, so to speak.)

When the Edmonton Roamers extended the Memorial Cup finals to at least a fourth game, the result was received most jubilantly in the camp of the Belleville "Hi-Speeds." The management of the local juniors promised the Holway-led sextette a trip to the Memorial Cup Playdowns, but were unable to make the journey owing to the presentation of windbreakers last week. When the Roamers downed Oshawa 4-1 Saturday night to remain in the running, the result assured the "Hi-Speeds" of a trip to Toronto and the Dominion junior hockey finals tonight. No doubt the Generals were filled with over-confidence when the Roamers won Saturday night, but regardless, the Oshawa sextette had better step out and extend themselves tonight, so their hometown supporters can celebrate with those publicized bon-fires.

Goals by a native son of Toronto and a former Leafian, Roy Conacher and Hollett respectively, pushed the Torontos out of the Stanley Cup picture as the Boston Bruins pasted the Leafs 3-1 in the fifth and final game at Boston last night. Living up to Skipper Art Ross' predictions of being one of the greatest teams in the history of the game, the Boston Bruins won four of five games to annex the battered Stanley Cup and ring down the professional hockey curtain last night. Incidentally the Bruins won the National Hockey League championship, as well as the Stanley Cup. President Frank Calder witnessed the game and personally presented the 'old mug' to Art Ross and Eddie Shore amid a thunderous applause of giant firecrackers and general bedlam.

DID YOU KNOW .... The Roper-Louis fight will be broadcast over the N.B.C. system tonight with Bing Crosby, of radio and screen fame as one of the commentators?....The unfortunate part of the broadcast is the fact we are three hours behind Los Angeles, Cal. time and the fight won't go on the air until 1.00 a.m. Eastern Standard Time ....Joe Krakauskas, Ontario's gift to the Washington Senators, has been nominated as the starting pitcher against the Yankees and Lefty Gomez before the President at Washington today ....Acton and Woodstock are still battling things out in the Intermediate O.H.A. "B" series.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN FIFTY

Hollywood, Apr. 17 (AP)—Charlie Chaplin, the little English vaudeville actor who rose to world prominence as a motion picture star and producer, yesterday celebrated his 50th birthday and the 25th anniversary of his screen debut.

He stepped into the movie limelight in 1914. Previously he had attracted attention in a vaudeville skit "A Night in An English Music Hall".

Oil gushers are no longer hailed with joy; it is considered wasteful carelessness or a bad accident in an oil field when oil gets away from control.

Industrial production in Sweden early last year broke all records of the country, according to government figures just made public.

More than 1,000,000 books in 2,118 libraries and 825 reading centres have been lost in the areas of China now under Japanese occupation.

SOVIET MAY GIVE

colleagues on concrete proposals advanced by Britain and France.

Impossible to Predict

It is impossible to predict the ultimate form of the Russian agreement but it may consist of the Soviets giving full military guarantees to Rumania, Greece and Turkey — just as Britain and France have done—and pledging the use of their vast air strength to Poland.

It is not expected that either agreement will be announced when parliament reassembles tomorrow after the Easter recess.

Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador to Great Britain, called at the foreign office. In the absence of Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, he saw various officials on the eve of his return to Moscow for consultations.

Reports reaching the foreign office of talks between Litvinoff and Sir William Seeds in Moscow describe them as "quite useful and helpful."

Rumania to Fully Accept

It is understood Poland still objects to the possibility of Russian troops entering her territory and that this is the reason why Russian assistance to her may be limited to planes and pilots. On the other hand Rumania is expected to accept a full Soviet military guarantee.

(Rumania and Poland have been allied for defence against attack from Soviet Russia since 1921 and both were understood to fear that Germany might regard their acceptance of Russian army support as provocative.

(Both countries—as well as Greece—have received Anglo-French pledges to help defend their independence against any threat and both exchanged oral assurances last week of mutual aid in defence against German attack.)

Popular in Moscow

It was said officially here that Sir William Seeds—who is popular in Moscow because of his exceptional command of the Russian language—reviewed Britain's reasons for the specific commitments Prime Minister Chamberlain has announced for Poland, Rumania and Greece in collaboration with France.

He was said also to have told Litvinoff that one result of the new Anglo-French commitments was a virtual guarantee of Russia's own western frontier.

Meanwhile strategic Gibraltar became the centre of British defence activity, resulting from reports that German and Italian technicians were working to encircle the fortress with heavy guns.

British naval authorities were watching closely all activities on the Spanish mainland and in Spanish Morocco, and already have taken extra precautions at Gibraltar.

London, April 17—(AP)—Russia was reported authoritatively today aid" to the Anglo-French anti-aggression front in the event of war.

Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador in London who is returning to Moscow to consult his government, visited the British foreign office.

At the same time, British officials expressed satisfaction with the progress of conversations between Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Commissar for Foreign Affairs, and Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador of Russia in Moscow Saturday and yesterday over Russian participation in the anti-aggression alliance.

Turkey to Join Bloc

Belief was expressed Prime Minister Chamberlain might be able to announce in the House of Commons tomorrow that agreements had been completed for adding Russia and Turkey to the anti-aggression bloc.

In Paris, French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet invited Russian and Turkish Envoys to new talks.

Poland, Rumania and Greece — supported by promises of British and French military assistance—already were lined up against any aggression by the axis powers.

Informed sources also said military staff contacts had been established between Russia and France which already have a military agreement.

Aid of Air Fleet Sought

The lines on which the British and French talks with Russia and Turkey were being conducted had not been disclosed.

It was generally believed, however, that the western powers wanted Russia to put her vast air fleet at the disposal of the anti-aggression alliance.

Turkey's participation was of vital importance because of her dominating position on either side of the Dardanelles through which any Russian maritime aid from the Black Sea would have to come.

Meanwhile, Gibraltar at the western neck of the Mediterranean became the scene of renewed activity for defence of Britain's "lifetime."

Barricading at Gibraltar

Continued reports of troops and war materials concentrated at nearby Spanish ports led to additional barricading of the great rock fortress. Four French warships arriving unexpectedly en route to an undisclosed destination were unable to enter the admiralty harbor because defence booms had been placed.

The strengthening of defences on "the rock" was concentrated on the north side, where Gibraltar faces a neutral zone between British and Spanish territory.

An air raid precautions scheme was being hurried to completion. It provided for the cutting of a tunnel to shelter 1,200 persons and the conversion of caves into refuges for Gibraltar's 17,000 population. Food supplies sufficient for several weeks have been laid aside and 25,000 gas masks allotted between the civilian and military populations.

Defence of Rock Fortress

Anti-aircraft guns and heavy guns, placed high on the rock, were considered sufficient to meet any attack but could be supported by fire from ships in the harbor and smaller anti-aircraft pieces in scattered strategic positions.

FRENCH AND BRITISH AIR MINISTERS PLAN DEFENCE

M. Guy La Chambre, the French air minister, confers with Sir Kingsley Wood of the British air ministry in London. Later others in the British ministry joined with Sir Kingsley Wood, RIGHT, in the conference. The meeting was called in preparation for what may become a mutual air defence program to meet possible aggression from the air, by the axis powers.

It was announced in London that the first battalion of Welsh guards would be sent to Gibraltar "on or after April 22" to bolster the Gibraltar garrison force now numbering about 3,500.

General Franco, in an address yesterday at Seville, said Spain, with at least 1,000,000 men under arms, "holds a strong place in Europe" but declared "now our task is to reconstruct Spain to raise it to heights of strength, honor and grandeur."

CANADA PRAISES

Responsibility Placed

Nevertheless, unofficial word reaching Washington from Rome and Berlin gave rise in diplomatic circles to the belief that Hitler and Mussolini would not accede to the President's suggestions for keeping peace during the next decade or quarter century.

Both government officials and several members of congress said that in any event —as Senator Schwellenbach (Dem.-Washington) put it—rejection would "definitely place the responsibility for any war on Germany and Italy."

Congressional interest in the European scene was shared by speculation over whether the government might be contemplating some new steps regarding Japanese expansion in the Orient.

This resulted from the surprise announcement by Navy Secretary Swanson that the main body of the United States fleet would be moved back to its Pacific base from Hampton Roads, Va., where it has been based following the recent Caribbean manoeuvres. The fleet is scheduled to sail this week.

Japan Under Fire

Coupled with this was a statement by Chairman Key Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that Japan had violated the nine-power pact by her course in China and that he, therefore, believed the United tates might properly take economic action against her. Pittman said in a radio address Saturday night:

"It would not be improper, in the circumstances, in my opinion, to authorize the President to place such restriction upon our trade with Japan as might be necessary to induce Japan to cease such violations, or at least to give assurances by action that she was taking steps that would terminate such violations in a reasonable time."

Pittman, who was present Saturday when Mr. Roosevelt made public his letter to Hitler and Mussolini at a special press conference, was reported to be contemplating legislation to authorize economic action.

Two Main Objects

Return of the fleet to the Pacific was described by one official as both preventive and precautionary. With the fleet in the west, he argued, Japan would be less likely to join Germany and Italy in a war. In addition, he said, the United States might have to protect its line of supply to the Dutch and British East Indies, where America obtains most of its rubber.

Following is the text of a statement by Prime Minister King of Canada to John Farr Simmons, American Charge D'Affaires at Ottawa:

At a moment of supreme concern, the President has acted with characteristic initiative and courage. His frank and realistic message is directed to the leaders and the people of two great European countries, but it is of vital interest to the people of every country. It gives the world a chance to halt on the brink of catastrophe.

Whole Problem in Focus

The very fact that the danger is diffused, that there is not single issue, no one point of tension, has made it difficult to deal with the present situation. Now, the head of a great country, who appreciates what a conflict in Europe might come to mean to mankind, has brought the whole problem into focus. He has presented an opportunity to all of sitting round a friendly table, where every grievance can be discussed frankly, and the readiness of each country, whether in Europe or outside it, to make its contributions to peace and understanding, can be tested. In offering to join in the discussion of the disarmament and economic conditions which lie at the root of so much of the world's unrest, the President has made a vital contribution in advance.

Mr. Roosevelt offers a peace conference before a war instead of after it. No country can lightly reject that opportunity to saving civilization and saving itself.

Canada welcomes the timely action of her good neighbor, and fervently hopes that it may meet with the response which the gravity of the situation demands.

ton destroyers Tempete and Simoun arrived.

Three Admirals Present.

Three admirals now are at Gibraltar. Admiral Louis Valle, commanding the second division, is aboard the Lorraine. He conferred with the governor of Gibraltar, Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, this morning.

Vice-Admiral Jean Marquis was aboard the Marseillaise and Rear-Admiral Jacques Lecroix aboard the Volta.

The only British warship in port was the 1,140-ton destroyer Wishart.

Following conferences between the French naval chiefs and British officials here, the destroyers Mogador, Le Terrible and Le Fantasque left the harbor this afternoon and took up patrol duty across the Gibraltar Strait.

It was reported additional French warships would arrive at Gibraltar later today

Tom's Interest

By JOHN MARSHALL

"Please, please return my money if you found it. If you knew how much it means to me you would. One hundred dollars in five-dollar gold pieces in a little chamois bag, lost between Ninth and Seventh avenue subway station at Twenty-third street, last night. Please, please return to Miss Vail—West Twentieth street, I need the money awfully."

Tom Blake read the advertisement in his morning paper through twice. Funny way to word an ad. And funny, in a way, to need the money badly enough to write such an ad.

Poor old thing—probably some old maid and her life savings. He worked up quite a story about her. Maybe she was on her way to an old ladies' home and that was her entrance fee. Maybe the money belonged to somebody else. Maybe she'd have to slave and slave to get another hundred again.

As Tom folded his paper and pushed back his chair after his breakfast in his favorite restaurant he had made up his mind. When he reached the street, he turned left, in the general direction of West Twentieth street, instead of right, as he should have done if he had been going to his office.

"Nobody," he thought to himself, "is going to return that money. She'll never know."

He went to his bank, put through a little transaction, and then went on to the address given in the advertisement.

It was, as he thought it would be an inexpensive rooming house. He pushed the button marked "Miss Vail," and as he heard steps coming to the door he pictured to himself the weak, fading old lady who would answer him. But of course it wasn't a weak, fading old lady. It was a charming young one.

"Is Miss Vail at home?" he asked.

"I'm Virginia Vail," said the young lady.

"Then perhaps it's your aunt. The old lady who advertised about the lost money."

"Oh!" The voice of the girl was excited. "You didn't find it!" She pulled him inside the hall. "Tell me—you didn't, did you? It's my money"

"Here it is," said Tom, pulling a stout paper envelope from his pocket and presenting it to the girl. "Twenty five-dollar gold pieces — you see?"

There was a puzzled look in her eyes. "I was carrying an umbrella. And I had some parcels—and that's how I came to drop the bag."

"Yes—so I owe you another chamois bag. I'll sent you one as soon as I can get one." Pretty well done, mused Tom, as he watched the girl's utter happiness and relief. But as Virginia told her story Tom found that he was just as happy as she was.

"You see, she said, "I just had to have that money back, and I thought if I wrote that kind of ad to return it—I mean, even if it was somebody like you—not somebody poor or a thief. And here it is now."

Virginia had come to New York a few days before with her precious horde of savings by herself from her hard-earned salary.

"You see," she said cheerfully "I'll live on it until I can find a job here."

From those first dark, chill moments in the lodging house hall, Tom knew that Virginia was the girl he was going to marry. But he didn't tell her so for several weeks. And then, because her funds were getting low and New York didn't seem as anxious to give her a job as she was to find one, they were married without any long preliminary engagement.

It was the first anniversary of their wedding and they were just beginning to know the secret sweetness of true companionship that was to increase with time. For Tom and Virginia were truly happy.

"I have something to show you," said Virginia that morning. "It's an anniversary present to you. It's a secret, too, that I've been keeping all this time. It's your secret from me, too, and the fact that you kept it showed me from the first that you were as big and generous as I thought you were."

She held out her hands, with the little chomois bag—Tom had bought it the first day and returned to her with it that evening containing 20 five-dollar gold pieces.

"I've known from that day you brought them to me that they weren't mine. A woman returned mine before you came back that night—and I gave her a reward, too. There were lots of things—your bank couldn't have been open at seven in the evening when you found them—when I lost them. And the lost chamois bag. And everything.

"There have been so many times when you might have been unreasonable—when you might have told me about how generous you'd been, just to have the last say—and you never did. And so, you see, it's been a sort of test—and I never needed it. There isn't any interest, Tom, for the year's use—"

But Tom had his interest.

Churning Cream and A Medium Eggs Easier

Toronto, April 17—Price changes were minor on the Toronto open produce market Saturday. Grade A-medium eggs eased slightly and churning cream was adjusted in accordance with the recent decline in butter solids.

The egg market closed out the week on a generally steady tone, with good trading effecting a clean-up in receipts for the week end. Demand was concentrated to some extent on grade-A large, however, while mediums were inclined to lag, with the result that prices on this grade were reduced. Grade A-medium changed hands at 16c in the ungraded section and at 22½c in the retail division of the market. Graded shipments closed at 20c for grade A-large, 19c for medium, 18c for pullet and 17c for B and C grades. It was reported that special lots of eggs packed in new cases sold at ½c above these levels.

Fresh receipts have been arriving in increasing volume on the butter market during the latter part of the week, but offerings have cleared fairly well. Trading was reported as fair Saturday and prices held steady at previous levels. Ontario solids moved at 21c for No. 1 grades and 20¼c for 38 score. Prints were easier at 22½c to 23c for top grades and 21¾c to 22¼c for 38 score. Reflecting the recent declines on the butter market, buyers were offering in the lower range of 20c to 21c for No. 1 grade churning cream (country truck prices.)

Montreal, April 17—Potato prices gained ground on open produce markets here last week, while other offerings ruled steady to narrowly easier, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-¾ cents a pound and solids for 22-22¼.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21 cents a dozen for A-large, 19½-20 for A-medium, and 18½-19 for A pullets. Receipts: 9233 cases, compared with 11,672 a year ago.

TINSEL INVENTOR DIES IN LONDON

W.H. Harriss, 102, Accidentally Hit Upon the Method to Make Tinsel

London, Apr. 17 (CP)—William Henry Harris, 102, believed London's oldest man, died yesterday.

Harris sixty years ago accidentally invented tinsel. He then was chief engineer of a silk mill at Lewisham and noted a strand of silk lying among metal shavings which clung to it.

He also invented a flexible tube used for the treatment of diphtheria and claimed he made the tube which was used in the treatment of Frederick III, father of the last Kaiser of Germany, when Frederick was suffering from cancer of the throat.

Marlboroughs' Treasures Stolen Early Sunday

Guests Have Fingerprints Taken as Precautionary Measure

London, April 17—(CP-Havas) — Guests of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough at Blenheim palace had their fingerprints taken as a precautionary measure today when it was discovered that miniatures, medallions and other family treasures had been stolen early Sunday morning.

Even the Duke and Duchess and three of their children, the Marquess of Blandford, Lady Sarah Spencer-Churchill and Lady Caroline Spencer-Churchill, had their fingerprints taken.

Photographic experts recorded prints left on woodwork and glass-top cases. The drawers of tables and cabinets were taken away for examination.

The haul comprised chiefly jewel-encrusted miniatures, but the thief also included in his bag a snuff box and silver spoons, which were part of the campaign equipment of the first Duke of Marlborough, and a bold Louis XV snuff box.

The Duke and Duchess and their family were in residence at the palace with a small house party. Neither they nor the staff of more than 50 heard anything during the night.

The theft was regarded as the most audacious country house robbery in years. The thief apparently gained entry into the grand salon by smashing a window and then toured all the state rooms.

SAYS ROOSEVELT

the message of peace. Hope has shone in him like a pillar of fire when it seemed to have gone out in all others.

"We must give out thanks to the man whose words have come to us across the Atlantic in the resounding tones of a second Gettysburg."

The Manchester Guardian (Liberal), said Mr. Roosevelt's appeal—which "the President was unlikely to suppose would be accepted" by Hitler and Mussolini—was made to public opinion everywhere and if the two heads of state refused the public would draw its own inferences.

The London News Chronicle (Liberal) described the plea as "wresting the initiative from the aggressors" and added: ".... after this message nothing can be the same again. The outlook must either improve or rapidly deteriorate. Mr. Roosevelt's offer leaves the dictators with no conceivable excuse for war."

15 WAR VETERANS CHOSEN AS GUARDS

Sarnia, Ont., Apr. 17 (CP)—Fifteen war veterans have been selected by the Canadian Legion here for special guard duty in event of an emergency, it was learned today. The action was taken in accordance with instructions from the provincial command. The veterans are standing by but the nature of their prospective duties has not been disclosed. It is suggested, however, they may be used as guards at the Blue Water Bridge, St. Clair tunnel, refinery and other points if European developments bring on hostilities.

BLESSING INVOKED UPON SEAMEN AS SEASON OPENS

Fifteen Captains Attend Religious Service at Cherry Valley

Picton, March 17 (Special)—Fifteen Captains were among the hundreds attending the annual Mariners' Service at Cherry Valley Church on Sunday evening. It was the seventh annual such service. A blessing was bestowed on those about to leave for the season upon the lakes, thanks was given for a safe and successful season last year, and those who entered the "Last Port" since the last service was held were recalled during an impressive memorial service. Life in the British navy during the Great War, with the surrender of the German fleet as a highlight, was described by Lieut. L. B. Calnan.

Seated in the Captains' row were Capt. Ben Bowen and his three sons, Capt. Walter Bowen, Capt. Archie Bowen and Capt. Gordon Bowen, all of Trenton; Capt. John Buchanan of Waupoos and his son, Capt. John Buchanan, Jr., of Belleville, Capt. C. Redfern and his son, Capt. W. Redfern of Colborne; Capt. Thos. Thompson of Deseronto; Capt. Con. Vanalstine of Trenton; Capt. D. B. Christie, Capt. Thos. Lighthall, Capt. G. Arthurs, Capt. Nelson Hudgin, all of Picton; Capt. E. Knudsen of Belleville, Engineer N. J. Sherman of the freighter, City of Kingston. and others were present from Kingston.

Marine Decorations

Inside the altar rail which was draped with fish net, a model lighthouse flashed its light on and off; ship models recalled schooner days to many of the sailors; other familiar emblems to those who follow the waters included a binnacle complete with compass, life preservers and pictures of boats on which local men sailed.

Rev. O. R. Flindall presided. Following an organ prelude by Mrs. Herb Scott, the service opened with a lovely solo "Rock of Ages." by Mrs. Cecil Allen of Wellington.

"Jesus Saviour Pilot Me" was sung, prayer offered and John 21 read by Mr. Flindall.

Mr. C. A. Newman of Picton sang "The Mighty Deep." In his sermon on "The Right Side of the Ship," Mr. Flindall said that though it is the same old world and many other things are the same, they may have lost their influence upon us. Jesus told the fishermen to cast from the other side of the ship and as a result they had great catches of fish. We too might try casting from the other side. Though things may be changed there is always the guiding hand and the directing voice.

Memorial Service

"Eternal Father Strong to Save", was sung and Capt. J. Buchanan of Waupoos read the Roll Call, the dead fishermen and sailors, who had died since the last Mariners' Service were Capt. W. V. Bongard, Glenora, Capt. Ted Heffernan of Belleville, Capt. W. E. VanVlack of Cressy, Claude W. Cole of Cape Vincent, N.Y., Ernest E. Orser of Ameliasburg, Hugh E. Brown of Chicago, Ill., Wm. H. Way of Sophiasburg, Thos. Mordaunt of Waupoos, Percy E. Thurston of Bongards—all of these being either residents or former residents of Prince Edward County.

As Capt. D. B. Christie of Picton carried in a basket of flowers and placed them on the altar, the vast crowd arose and observed a minute of silence. Mrs. Gordon Bell of Cherry alley sang very effectively a solo "Crossing the Bar."

Capt. C. Vanalstine of Trenton referred feelingly to the departed sailors and fishermen. He thought it a pity the schooner Julia B. Iverrill was burned. It would have made a fine training ship—making men out of present day sailors.

"Will Your Anchor Hold" was sung and Philip Dodds of the Picton Gazette, who arranged the service, introduced the fifteen captains present. Hearty applause greeted them.

Life in the Navy

The address on the British Navy by Lieut. L. B. Calnan, editor of the Gazette was particularly timely and interesting.

In his address on the British Grand Fleet, Lieut. Calnan stated it was known as "The Silent Navy." The work of the navy was not spectacular and did not make the headlines of the newspapers as often as the clash of armaments in land battle. It was a matter of days and nights at sea in all kinds of weather, maintaining a constant vigil and alertness—a continuous drudgery of routine.

With the destroyer patrol which he first joined at Davenport, the speaker said there were convoys to be escorted and safe-guarded within two days' sail of English or Channel ports; there were patrols off the coast watching for German submarines, boarding coastal vessels suspected of carrying contraband, sweeping for German mines and sinking floating mines.

Later Mr. Calnan joined the main or Grand Fleet at Rosyth in the Firth of Forth, and he described the majestic spectacle of the fleet at sea with vessels in formation as far as the eye could see.

Vigils of the navy were responsible for the lines of communication being maintained which brought reinforcements of troops, food and munitions of war to the Allied forces in the face of German submarine menace. To such good effect did the navy carry out its duties that the German High Seas Fleet could not be enticed to face a major naval engagement, and there was a mutiny of German sailors a short time before the armistice which no doubt had something to do with the conclusion of the war thereafter.

The speaker described the surrender of the German Fleet, the most dramatic and epoch-making naval surrender in history. This was on November 21, 1918, ten days after the Armistice, when the Grand Fleet slipped its moorings before daybreak, steamed seaward in two parallel lines, 400 ships strong, to meet the surrender of the second naval power.

From his position at "Actions Stations in the foretop at the top of the foremast of H.M.S. Ajax, Mr. Calnan was one of the first to see the approaching line of German warships as it steamed between the two British lines.

Anchoring later off Inchkeith, there was the historic message from Admiral Beatty to Admiral Von Keuter, "at 15.57 hours (3.57 p.m.) you will strike your colors and will not rehoist them again without my permission."

"So at sunset as the bugles blared out throughout the fleet, the German colors flattened down with ours. But next morning at sunrise, our colors were again flying; theirs were not" related the speaker.

Mr. Calnan described the sinking of the German fleet at Scapa Flow.

Today, he felt that the British Fleet was as efficient and as capable as ever to guard the life-lines of the Empire.

Mrs. Allen of Wellington sang "Jesus Lover of My Sou'" and the service closed with "God Be With You Till We Meet Again", the National Anthem and Benediction.

This service has made Cherry Valley known far and wide and this year's was described by many as the best yet.

'HOME TO REICH'

"It must now react, and react with reason, against the persecutions to which they are being subjected. All our efforts to better the plight of Poles in Germany have proven inadequate and have left the Polish minority in a situation very inferior to that of the German minority in Poland.

Counting on Active Aid

"We are now counting on the active aid of the whole nation to bring aid to its brothers in Germany."

It was learned from an authoritative source that Ambassador Hans von Moltke, who left Warsaw 12 days ago, will not return from Berlin before Thursday. His prolonged absence was construed by diplomatic circles here as a mark of Berlin's displeasure with Poland, whose will to resist, shown by extensive military measures, has halted German pressure.

Although proposals recently made Poland by the Reich—to permit annexation of Danzig and construction of a Germany highway across the Corrisod—were rejected, Germany's reaction to date has been confined chiefly to a press campaign.

In an interview with Domei, Japanese news agency, Itagaki attributed the "complicated and prevarious situation in Europe" to the "co-existence of small powers and resulting lack of balance among nations."

Yokohama, Japan, April 17—(AP) —Hundreds of bareheaded mourners participated today in a solemn ceremony in which Richmond Turner, captain of the United States cruiser Astoria, turned over to Renzo Sawada, Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, the ashes of Hiroshi Saito, former Japanese Ambassador to the United States. Saito died in Washington Feb. 26.

London, April 17—(AP)— Three persons have committed suicide in London within five days, after listening to broadcasts on the European situation, according to verdicts at coroners' inquests. One coroner commented:

"News is not always happily expressed over the wireless. People with nervous dispositions are liable to be tremendously affected by it."

Sydney, Australia, April 17—(CP-Reuters)—Defenders repulsed attackers after a 16-hour "battle" off here today as the Australian navy staged the biggest defence manoeuvres since the Great War.

The naval exercise was planned as realistically as possible and included technical stopping and questioning of liners.

Wellington, April 17—(CP-Reuters)—The empire will rally to the principles of liberty and justice if war comes, Viscount Galway, Governor General of New Zealand, said here today. "We must make stern resolutions to adhere to the principles handed down by the founders of the empire," he said.

Local Red Cross Society to Launch Campaign for Funds

Objective of $1,200 Set in Campaign from May 1st to 6th

A WORTHY CAUSE

Citizens of Belleville, who have each year demonstrated their interest and loyal support of the activities of the Red Cross will have the opportunity next month of again sharing in the great work of the organization by contributing to the annual campaign which will be held May 1st. to 6th., with an objective of $1,200. The extensive program of Red Cross, not only in Belleville, but throughout the province has made a strong appeal to the generous hearts of members of the community who see in its peace time activities enterprises that call for as whole-hearted co-operation as its work in war time.

Many Belleville citizens have had cause to thank the Red Cross local branch which in a quiet, unostentatious way has brought relief in time of emergency, distributed clothing and other needed supplies to those in want, sponsored nutrition and Home Nursing Classes of inestimable value to those taking the courses and has aided soldiers in special need. Local needs have claimed first attention and after this the broader aspect of Red Cross in the province has been generously supported by Belleville funds.

Plans Underway

Plans are well under way to make this annual appeal as successful as those in the past, so that the work of Red Cross will continue with increasing vigor. The local committee under the leadership of Messrs I. G. Hefky, pres.; Howard J. Clarke, campaign chairman; J. W. Imlah, campaign treasurer, and Mrs. F. S. Lazier, vice-president, in charge of the women's part of the campaign, is making extensive and efficient arrangements in connection with the appeal.

It is earnestly hoped that the objective of twelve hundred dollars will be reached, and perhaps exceeded in the campaign week which opens on Monday, May 1st., and closes on Saturday, May 6.

OWNER IS FOUND FOR DESK SET

Two Transients Remanded in Custody on Theft Charge

Efficiency seems to be one of the principal features of the Belleville Police Department, at least such was the case last week when a local dentist called the police department and informed them his desk fountain pen set had been stolen from his office.

"Come down to the police station, we've had the set in our possession for over two hours, but could not locate from whom it had been taken," was the startling reply given the dentist by Chief Kidd.

Early Friday afternoon Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard apprehended two transients, well dressed, on Front Street, and held them on nominal charges of vagrancy after the police had been informed the men were endeavouring to dispose of a valuable desk fountain pen set at a ridiculously low figure. The men gave Ernest McLarren, 26 of Quebec City, and William Whitehead, 34, of Halifax, as their names.

According to the dentist's story the two men came to his office, shortly after 2 p.m., one complaining he had a tooth ache. The dentist informed the man he was busy at the time, but to return. It is believed the other man took the desk set while the dentist was occupied with the other man.

McLarren and Whitehead were remanded in custody until Friday when additional charges will be preferred, police revealed.

WEEK'S SEARCH PROVES FUTILE

Cornwall, Ont., Apr. 17 (CU) — After a week of vain searching throughout the district, Cornwall Township police said today they had little hope Mrs. Frank Wilhelm, 35, and her six months old son would be found alive. The woman and baby diappeared from their East Cornwall home early last Monday morning.

Mrs. Wilhelm, said by her husband to have been in a nervous condition, frequently had asserted she would "rather go to the river than go back to Germany" and left a note telling her husband that if she did not return, he was to "sell the things and go home (to Hungary)".

J. V. MALLETTE, M.P. DROPS DEAD ON STREET

Montreal, April 17—(CP)—J. Vital Mallette, 50, Liberal member of parliament for Montreal - Jacques Cartier, collapsed and died while walking along the street here today.

Mr. Mallette was elected to the House of Commons in 1935 general election. He was an alderman of Pointe Claire in 1915 and 1917 and again in 1922 and 1923. He became Mayor in 1923, serving until 1937.

WOMAN WITH $9,000 DIES OF STARVATION

Detroit, April 17 (CP)—Mrs. Mary Holmes, 72, who was admitted last week at hospital here while clutching a bag containing $9,000 died during the week-end of malnutrition. Welfare authorities said she virtually starved herself to death, despite her fortune.

FOUR CONVICTED IN POLICE COURT ON THEFT CHARGES

One Member Convicted Becomes a Reluctant Witness

JAIL TERMS GIVEN

Conviction of four persons were registered in city police court today, charged with breaking and entering Patterson's service station, West Dundas street, and stealing therefrom a quantity of gasoline, cash and chocolate bars. Those convicted were Merritt Woods, 21, Gerald Conners, 20, and Walter Aselstine, 24, all of Belleville and Gerald Tye, 37, of Arden. Gordon Aselstine, brother of Walter, was found not guilty and a similar charge dismissed against the latter when he was arraigned.

Woods was sentenced to serve three months determinate, with one month indeterminate, in the Ontario Reformatory at his own request and after he had been found guilty. "This boy was intimidated, struck in the eye and is now the victim of external influences at the hands of accomplices at the county jail", pleaded Alan Sprague, local barrister appearing on Woods' behalf.

Woods was a reluctant witness when appearing as a Crown witness during the trial of Walter Aselstine, who was the only member of the quartette to be convicted without a plea of guilty and upon the evidence adduced. At several points during the trial, His Worship was forced to instruct Woods to answer questions directed by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

"There is a code among thieves regarding a squealer and I suppose Woods does not want to squeal. However, Woods, you're on the spot and might as well talk," stated Mr. Donnan, but the witness refused. "Charges should be laid against the person who struck Woods and intimidated him while incarcerated at the county jail," prompted his Worship.

"He won't tell who it was," revealed Chief Kidd in agreement.

Gerald Conners, the youngest member of the quartette was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail. Conners was represented in court by Gordon Robertson, barrister, who pointed out that his client had told a clean story and was apparently easily influenced.

Gerald Tye and Walter Asselstine were given suspended sentences of three months with an additional fine of $10 and costs respectively. John Simpson, Napanee lawyer, appeared on behalf of Tye, while Mr. Sprague very capably conducted the defence of Walter and Gordon Asselstine and Merrit Woods, the second named being acquitted.

No restitution of the goods stolen from Mr. Patterson's service station was available, however.

Gordon Asselstine was held in custody on a warrant which was dated April, 1938, charging him with the theft of scrap metal in Belleville.

POLICE COURT

Randall Smith and Gerald Stapley, both of Belleville, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court facing charges of the theft of groceries from a truck parked by Jack Smallhorn on the evening of April 8th last. Smith and Stapley, who have been in custody since their apprehension shortly after the robbery, found their cases still further enlarged today at the request of their counsel, Jacob Goodman, local barrister. Smith and Stapley were held in custody.

When William Durant, transient, appeared on a charge of vagrancy, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., revealed there was no evidence against the accused, who was promptly dismissed from custody.

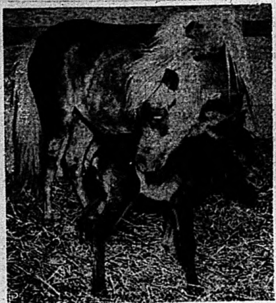
Peter Lambros and his son, Ted Lambros, were both fined $10 and costs after being convicted on charges of assault, arising out of altercations of some months standing. The evidence was presented in a previous court.

"What took place inside the building was not serious enough to term assault, but when outside on the public street, these men should have called the police instead of taking the law in their own hands and I cannot but find them guilty," was His Worship's findings. Mr. Frank Cushing appeared for the accused men and informed the court the fines would be paid.

The complainant in the case, Donald Moynes, Belleville, testified against the accused in a previous case.

Three inebriates, all transients, admitted to be intoxicated and were sentenced to serve fourteen days in default of the payment of the conventional "ten and costs" fine.

The largest array of legal talent to grace the city police court in many years was present in Magistrate Butler's court today when no less than eight barristers adddessed the court at different intervals.



CIRCUS STAFF IS AUGMENTED

Something extra for the customers of the famous Ringling Bros.-Barnum and Bailey circus was presented by Jill, one of the many Shetland ponies with the organization, when she gave birth to a foal during the circus' stay in New York. Mother and son are in fine fettle as can be seen.

Joan Crawford is pictured on the witness stand, resplendent in the latest spring fashion, as she recounted to Superior Judge Benjamin Scheinman, in a Los Angeles court, the reasons why she wanted a divorce from Franchot Tone and she would "always be friendly" despite the fact that they could not make a success of their marriage.

ITALY CALLS IT HER "HELIGOLAND"

Looking down we see the island of Leros, one of the Dodecanese Islands, which Italians term the "Heligoland of the Aegean." PICKED VETERANS

It was believed several hundred men, most of them unemployed and ready for immediate duty, had been enrolled in the special defence organization. Units of 15 men each were understood to have been established in smaller communities but 253 will guard the vulnerable Welland and Niagara Falls industrial area while in Hamilton 90 men have volunteered.

Warnings Received

Warnings and threats of possible sabotage were said to have been received by the Attorney-General's Department in recent weeks, leading to the committee's action. But Hon. G. D. Conant, the Minister, declined to discuss the situation.

"The Ontario government has asked us for men to stand by in the event that they are needed, but we are not actually putting them on duty now," said Major Lindsey. "However, the moment instructions are received we will have the required number of men available in all areas concerned."

Mayor Ralph C. Day did not disclose what action is contemplated in Toronto but said that more than three months ago he had received "expert advice", also to what should be done in case of an emergency. A plan has been devised to give adequate protection to public utilities in the city, he added.

Among centres in which veterans' units have been organized are Hamilton, Stratford, St. Thomas, Port Erie, Niagara Falls, Welland and Kitchener. The men are expected to operate under the administration of Ontario Provincial Police.

Rev. Thomas West was among the dead at the Center Point church. Nearly 200 attended the service, but many had left when the tornado hit.

Flood Warnings Issued

Rain of near-cloudburst proportions accompanied the winds in Arkansas, where nearly a dozen communities were struck. The mud it left made rescue work precariously slippery. Flood warnings were issued for the Ouachita and Petit Jean rivers.

In Louisiana, seven persons were killed when a twister whipped at Haynesville residential and business property, levelling a score of homes and tearing away portions of a brick power plant. Texas counted six death.

One person was killed at Tillar, Ark., yesterday and in northwest Oklahoma early Saturday seven persons died when a tornado struck Carpon and its vicinity. Every building at Capron was wrecked. Damage was estimated at $500,000.

Meteorologist R. A. Dyke at New Orleans said the heavy winds all were related to a low pressure area which moved slowly eastward Sunday.

At Collins, Ark., County Judge L. W. Bell said the Center Point area death toll might reach 30.

- BENEVOLENT BENITO

Favorite pose of Italian dictator Mussolini, at least according to the number of times he is seen in the position, is this one, taken in Capua, Italy, on the occasion of another of his many speeches on the aims and destinies of the Italian people. Hands on the balcony rail he gazes over the multitude, by this time wildly cheering his incitative utterances, but in place of the scowl he so often wears he beams at the throng that patiently stood through—of necessity—his oratorical efforts, that boiled down might be translated in the vernacular, "Gimme room."

BRITISH WAR MINISTER EXAMINES FAMED BREN GUN

Perhaps the most important man in Premier Chamberlain's British cabinet in these crisis-filled days is Leslie Hore-Belisha, minister of war, and responsible for the advancement and augmentation of Great Britain's armed forces. Working on the theory of "understand the armaments and you understand the army's complex problems," he is never too busy to join the troops as they go through manoeuvres, especially when some new type of weapon is under scrutiny, as was the case when this picture was taken. The minister of war is seen with a division outside London as he is instructed in mastery of the intricacies of the Bren machine-gun of which Canadians have heard more than a little over the past few months.

Mussolini Seeks to Draw Hungary Closer to Axis

Hungary Reacts Unfavorably to President's Plea

View is Peace Proposed Was Not Peace with Justice but Plan to Continue 'Injustices'

ADDRESS APPROVED

Will be Read to King Victor in Response to His Acceptance of Crown of Newly Conquered Albania

Rome, April 18—(CP)— Premier Mussolini sought today to draw Hungary closer to the Rome-Berlin axis.

Premier Paul Teleky and Foreign Minister Stephen Csaky of Hungary arrived at 8:30 a.m. and were met at the station by Premier Mussolini, Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister and Achille Starace, Secretary of the Fascist party.

After reviewing an honor guard, the Hungarians were driven to the Villa Madama, official Fascist guest house, which the German Air Minister, Marshal Hermann Goering, had occupied until yesterday.

It was expected President Roosevelt's proposal for a German and Italian peace pledge and the situation it had created in Europe would be one of the subjects Mussolini and Count Ciano would discuss with Hungarian statesmen.

Hungary Unfavorable

The Fascist press cited unfavorable Hungarian reaction to the President's proposal as another evidence of Hungary's sympathy and

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Going swimming! The enthusiastic swimmer must wait until late in the spring or early summer before he finds comfortable water temperatures in lakes and rivers, especially in the North. This is because as the surface waters warm up and approach 39 degrees (which is the temperature of greatest density of water) they sink, and the colder under-surface layers rise. These in turn become heated and sink, while others rise again. This process continues until the while river or lake mass is heated to 39 degrees. Then the surface layers become warmer and warmer and stay where they are. The swimmers must simply wait until comfortable temperatures are reached.

NEUTRALITY ACT TO BE REVISED

'Cash and Carry' Provisions to be Allowed to Expire April 30

Washington, Apr. 18 (AP)—Senator Key Pittman disclosed today that "cash and carry" provisions of the United States Neutrality Act probably would be allowed to expire April 30 despite the European crisis.

Pittman, Nevada Democrat and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, indicated previously that the provisions might be extended for about sixty days. He said today however he had decided to seek enactment of a revised version of "cash and carry" principles.

Since Congress is not expected to act on any neutrality proposal this month, there apparently will be a period beginning May 1 during which the only restriction on United States shipping in event of a foreign war would be the embargo on exporting arms and munitions.

Expiring Sections of Act.

(The expiring "cash and carry" provisions require foreign countries to pay cash for supplies and transport them in their own ships. No other sections or the law expire.)

Two other developments bearing on the foreign situation shared the attention of legislators and government officials:

1. It was learned authoritatively that Pittman was planning to ask Congress later to impose restrictions on United States trade with Japan because of her alleged violations of the Nine-Power Treaty respecting the territorial integrity of China.

2. Chairman Walsh (Dem. Massachusetts) of the Senate Naval Committee called for speeding up the 10-year naval expansion program in order to provide fleets for both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. Walsh urged a different fleet organization coupled with a speeding up of the construction program. At present the fleet is designed to portect the Pacific coast with a small squadron in the Atlantic.

Toronto, Apr. 18 (CP)—Body of an unidentified man, badly crushed about the head, was found on railway tracks at the eastern outskirts of the city today. The body was clother in a blue suit that carried the trademark of a Windsor clothing firm.

7 Decrees Signed by Daladier To Strengthen Power of France

Paris, April 18—(AP)— Premier Edouard Daladier told his cabinet today the continuing seriousness of the international situation made it necessary for France to take further steps to strengthen her defences.

Both the Premier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet gave long analyses of the foreign situation during the cabinet meeting. The meeting lasted more than two hours.

Daladier was understood to have told his colleagues that negotiations for an Anglo-Russian defence alliance to bolster guarantees given by France and Great Britain to Poland, Rumania and Greece were "progressing satisfactorily." Indications in Foreign Ministry circles were that a complete agreement would be reached within the next day or so.

Lebrun signed seven decrees, the most important of which established detailed government control over the supply of arms, munitions and other war material. Supplementary decrees were concerned with increasing imports, particularly of military supplies such as oil.

Other decrees indicated the government was particularly concerned with the colonial situation. One authorized an increase in the power of France's powerful radio station at Tunis. At the same time the governors of important central African colonies were shifted about with the Republican Commissioner of the Cameroons being named Governor General of French Equatorial Africa.

DENTON MASSEY ENLARGES SPEECH MADE IN HOUSE

Maintains Thousands Had Died from Starvation and Lack of Care

ROGERS INDIGNANT

Ottawa, April 18—(CP)— While relief administration in Canada is not perfect it results in the Canadian people generally receiving more medical attendance than they received before the depression, Labor Minister Rogers told the House of Commons last night in a new clash with Denton Massey (Con. Toronto-Greenwood) over the number of persons who may have died from starvation, illness, lack of care and exposure.

"Through relief administration and the medical services attached to it we have a greater degree of medical attention than we have ever had before," said Mr. Rogers.

He repeated his earlier declaration that Mr. Massey's statement that thousands had died from starvation, illness, lack of care and exposure was unfounded and irresponsible. But Mr. Massey stood by it, although explaining it was not confined to transient men and did not imply any particular number had died from starvation alone.

LADY ABERDEEN DIES IN SCOTLAND

Late Husband and Peeress Known as 'Darby and Joan of Peerage'

Aberdeen, Scotland, Apr. 18 (CP)—Ishbel Marchioness of Aberdeen, widow of a former Governor General of Canada, died of heart disease at her home here today. She was 82.

Lady Aberdeen had quietly observed her birthday March 14. She had been in poor health.

Her son, the second Marquess of Aberdeen, saw her yesterday and then left for London. News of her death was telephoned to him.

Lady Aberdeen and her husband, who died in 1934, were known as the "Darby and Joan of the Peerage" because of their long happy life together. Their married life lasted for 57 years.

Lady Aberdeen was Chatelaine at Rideau Hall, Ottawa, from 1893 to 1898 and wrote a book on her travels in the Dominion. She founded the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada and was the holder of an honorary degree in law from Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. CONSTABLES' ACT

Toronto, April 18—(CP)—A post-session inquiry into the administration of Ontario's timber and pulpwood resources may last two months, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today. The Premier will confer with Conservative leader George Drew on the membership of the legislature committee that is to make the inquiry.

In the legislature yesterday, the Premier said he hoped the investigation into the Lands and Forests Department would be thorough and complete. The inquiry was called for by motion of Col. Drew—a motion accepted without reservation by the government.

Though the motion has been accepted, debate on it is unfinished. Hon. Peter Heenan, Lands and Forests Minister, welcoming the inquiry, adjourned discussion on it yesterday.

"I want the committee members to do their duty" said Premier Hepburn. "If there are timber pirates, I want them shown up. I am more or

RIVERS, CREEKS SWOLLEN BY RAINS

Grand River May Yet See Late Spring Rampage

Brantford, Ont., April 18—(CP)—The Grand River may yet go on a late spring rampage, despite the peaceful nature of the breakup almost a month ago.

The river level in Brantford today appeared to have equalled the same flood peak which prevailed after the break-up and the waters were steadily rising as a result of the second day of persistent rain.

The forecast called for continuing showers Wednesday. City Engineer P. P. Adams reported that serious floods might result if there is any further rainfall. The City Engineer's Department kept a close watch on the river, with particular attention to Brantford's protective system of dykes.

Smith, as superintendent of the new Ontario Hospital at St. Thomas marked the first break since 1926 in a Department of Health policy for promotions from within the department, Dr. T. B. The inquiry was asked by Col. George Drew, Conservative leader in the Legislature. It will continue for two or three days.

Dr. Smith, a former member of the legislature was named hospital superintendent March 15 last. He first joined the health department in December 1937.

Lloyd George Begins 50th Year As Member of British Parliament

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 18— (CP Cable) — David Lloyd George passed another milestone in his long parliamentary career today. When the House of Commons resumed its sessions it marked the start of Mr. Lloyd George's 50th year as a member.

He first took his seat April 17, 1890—budget day. Eighteen years after that the vigorous Welsh Liberal, as Chancellor of the Exchequer introduced the first of his own budgets.

The wartime Prime Minister, who was 76 in January, still starts the day writing in bed and takes a cold bath before breakfast. He continues to enjoy golf though his handicap persists around 18.

Only a handful of the members of the House of Commons of 1890 are still alive. Five of them are Peers—The Marquess of Salisbury, The Earl of Balfour, Lord Shuttleworth, Viscount Ullswater and The Earl of Midleton.

Mr. Lloyd George's half century in parliament is far from being a record. W. E. Gladstone was in the House for 61 years.

The wartime Prime Minister's whole career has been as member for Carnarvon, Wales, where he was elected April 10, 1890.

British House Cheers Reference To Roosevelt

Premier Says There is No Obligation to Go to Assistance of Belgium, Holland, Denmark

INTEREST IN SECURITY

No Reference Made in Speech to Probability of Anti-Aggression Pact with Turkey

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 18—(CP Cable)—President Roosevelt's peace plea to Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Hitler was welcomed by the British government with great satisfaction, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today.

The Prime Minister made only a passing reference to the President's dramatic intervention in the tangled affairs of Europe, but it was greeted by prolonged cheers from every corner of the House.

In a brief statement on foreign affairs Mr. Chamberlain declared: "I should like to take this opportunity of informing the House of the great satisfaction with which His Majesty's government have welcomed the recent initiative by the President of the United States."

Progress with U.S.S.R.

The Prime Minister also said that "His Majesty's government have continued their close consultation with other interested governments, including the government of the U.S.S.R."

"I am not yet in a position to add anything to the statement made on behalf of the government in the course of the debate of April 13."

A British pledge of help to Turkey had been expected, but was believed held up pending the outcome of the Anglo-Soviet negotiations.

A flood of questions greeted ministers at the reopening of the House after the Easter recess.

Independence of 3 Others

The Prime Minister, replying to Duncan Sandys, Conservative, said Great Britain had no specific obligations to go to the assistance of Holland, Switzerland or Denmark.

"It is unnecessary for me to insist on the interest which His Majesty's government have in the preservation of their independence," he sadded.

In reply to a question from Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, on the possibility of staff consultations with the countries to which guarantees have been given, Mr. Chamberlain said Britain "will maintain all the necessary contacts on military and other matters."

He declined to make a definite promise of staff talks.

Sale of Ships to Germany

While members plainly indicated their contempt, Oliver Stanley, President of the Board of Trade, solemnly read the names of the directors of two British companies which recently sold three merchant ships to Germany

He said the government had indicated to the companies its opposition to the sale but its wishes were disregarded. The government had no power to forbid the transaction.

The Prime Minister dropped a hint that a Ministry of Supply might be established when he told H. Graham White, Liberal, he might make a statement on this question within a few days.

There has been a campaign inside and outside parliament in recent weeks to add a Ministry of Supply to the government so contracts for munitions, planes and military equipment of all sorts could be accelerated.

Staffs Divide Mediterranean In Event of War

By. J F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 18—(CP Cable)—The general staffs of Great Britain and France have agreed to a division of the Mediterranean in wartime, it was reported on high authority tonight.

The British navy will patrol the eastern end of the Mediterranean, leaving French warships to look after the western, or Gibraltar, section.

This division of authority might account for the concentration of French warships at Gibraltar which started soon after Berlin announced that part of the German navy would hold manoeuvres off the Spanish coast.

Meanwhile it is understood Britain and France have suggested to Moscow that Russia enter the anti-aggression front of an "if, as and when" basis.

To surmount Polish and Rumanian scruples over Russian military assistance, it is reported the Soviets have been asked to make a unilateral declaration that they will put all their military resources at the disposal of Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey if, as and when any of them should request assistance in beating back an outside aggressor.

DYNAMITE STICKS THEFT IS PROBED

No Evidence is Revealed to Indicate Sabotage Plot Afloat

Hamilton, April 18—(CP)— Investigators of the Criminal Investigation Department, Provincial Police, and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are searching for a gang that stole 100 sticks of dynamite from a Hagersville quarry magazine.

It was understood that no evidence was at hand to indicate that a sabotage plot was afoot. Similar thefts have occurred periodically in this district. One, a year ago, was committed by boy experimenters who used the explosive to blow stumps. Because of the fact that only one box was taken, investigators inclined to the opinion that the technique resembled that of safecrackers.

Inspector W. H. Lougheed, C.I.D. has been working in the Niagara peninsula in close unison with district police officers, principally George McBride, Provincial Constable at Cayuga, in whose district the theft occurred.

Last Major Theft

Ten years have elapsed since a major theft of dynamite was accomplished at Hagersville and this fact is said to have figured in the organization of guards, so that adequate precautions might be ready to safeguard the extensive power-generating plants on the border.

Rumours that three foreign-born men had been picked up in the Dunnville area for questioning in connection with the dynamite thefts were denied by high police officials who said nothing of this nature had occurred and that the search for the thieves so far had been unsuccessful.

Familiarity with quarrying plans is believed to have contributed to the success with which the dynamite theft was accomplished from the Hagersville Quarries, Limited, magazine two weeks ago.

COW GETS CHILLY DIP

When a cow, member of the herd of R. Bedford, Rednersville farmer inadvertently slipped through a water hole in the ice of the bay near that point the other day, it marked the unofficial opening of the local swimming season.

The animal slipped through the skim ice of a water-hole, plunging into the icy water up to her neck. Neighbors rushed to the scene and with the aid of ropes extricated the cow from its watery predicament.

Ice near the hole was fully two feet in thickness but showing signs of honeycomb, Bedford stated.

FINDS LEG OF WHITE MUSKRAT IN TRAP

Shannonville, Ont., April 18 — (Special)—The only thing rarer than Spring days in this village are white muskrats. Believe it or not, Bert Spencer, local trapper while covering his lines on Saturday night discovered in one of his traps what is believed to be the foot of a white muskrat.

Veteran trappers of the district, when shown the foot asserted their belief that it belonged to a white muskrat, animals sometimes heard of being in this district but never see. Spencer believes he may eventually capture the owner of the foot.

REPORTS PLANTED POTATOES IN SPROUT

It may be another Ripley story, but potatoes are sprouting in the ground on a farm near the Sandbanks in Prince Edward County, according to Orville Richardson, farmer of that district in the city today with a consignment of maple syrup. The spuds were planted on high sandy land, and investigation of the tubers the other day revealed small sprouts starting to shoot.

FEW CHERRY TREES DAMAGED BY MICE

Damage to cherry trees of the district by "mice-ringing" will not be as heavy this year, according to an informative source.

The little brown field-mice that burrow beneath the snow and eat rings of bark from the tree trunks near the ground, have not been as active as heretofore a prominent orchard owner of Prince Edward County stated today.

The trees usually die if not attended to after the mice-damage has been discovered. The "rings" are coated over with beeswax and through this medium of treatment, generally are saved from an early "death."

NO NOTICE RECEIVED BY LOCAL VETERANS FOR GUARD DUTY

No notification that local veterans will be selected for guard duty on public utilities and other important buildings and projects of the province has been received by registration officers here as yet, President George Ellarby, of the local branch of the Canadian Legion stated today.

While registrations of veterans of the city and district under the plan formulated by the National Defence Association have been of low percentage, a number of ex-service men have registered with headquarters of units with which they served overseas, it is reported.

90-YEAR-OLD WOMAN STILL ENJOYS TROUT FISHING

South Sterling, Pa., April 18—(AP)—At 90, Mrs. Brebecca Edwards still can do a neat bit of trout angling, but age is beginning to impair her technique. Appearing at the Wayne County Courthouse for a new licence, she hadn't missed a trout season in years but complained, "I can't wade the streams any more."

Utilities Commission Votes Against Closing Hydro Shop

Commission Will Sponsor Electric Range Campaign Starting in May

$15 WIRING SUBSIDY

Hydro Shop Will Make "No Extended" Effort to Sell During Campaign

Members of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission by a vote of two to one decided against the suggestion of the closing of the City Hydro Shop at a regular meeting of the Board this morning.

The motion that the shop be closed, officially entered by Commissioner Clifford Baragar, was defeated by the votes of Commissioner Mayor Bone, and Chairman of the Commission M. P. Duff, the other two members of the Commission.

Little discussion featured the final vote on this matter which has been under discussion for weeks past.

As an alternative the Commission has pledged itself to assist and co-operate with Belleville merchants in every way possible in the future and will assist and take part in a special electric range campaign to be held in the city commencing May 15th for the benefit of Belleville merchants. This campaign is a provincial one, sponsored annually by the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission.

It was agreed that the local Utilities Commission would offer the inducement of $15.00 to be paid new customers for new range installation in the case where a three-wire service change is needed and that sales be financed for a three year period at an interest of five per cent, on dealers' sales. The campaign will be extended over a period of two months, or until the sum of $2,000 is paid out by the Commission on the free $15.00 subsidy for wiring. It was also agreed that the ten months' cash payment plan be discontinued and that cash sales be limited to thirty days without interest charges.

No "Extended Effort" to Sell

There will be no "extended effort" on the part of the local Commission to push sales of new stoves or ranges during this two-month period of the campaign which is to be inaugurated for the benefit of merchants, it was decided.

The matter of the range campaign is one that has been before the Commission for some time past, and considerable pressure has been brought to bear lately, it was evident. But members of the Commission have been faced with the prospect of a dying gas plant, a problem which admittedly has been a serious one for the local concern.

The question lately has resolved into the question of whether electrical users of Belleville should be "penalized" because of the fact that the gas plant is admittedly not a paying proposition, it was pointed out by Mayor Bone.

"There are two sides to this matter of electricity and gas in Belleville", it was pointed out by the Mayor.

It had not been considered advisable by the Commission to enter into any range campaign previously because of the fact that "a load was being built up against the interests of the gas plant", it was explained by Secretary-Manager O. H. Scott.

"The point is, are we going to put on this range campaign and give the gas plant a knockout blow?" asked Mr. Duff.

It was revealed that the Ontario Hydro Commission for some time past has been working on a report of the city gas plant and this report will be presented to the local Commission at an early date.

Discussion on Range Campaign

The matter of the range campaign was one which had been given serious consideration for some time past, but it had always revolved to the same question of whether it would not hasten the final demise of the gas plant, thus working hardship on some one thousand customers in Belleville, using gas, it was agreed.

"Why could not the merchants put on their own campaign and leave us out?" asked Mr. Duff.

"The point is," he asked, "should we kick this gas out entirely, or let it die a lingering death."

"How would it be to allow say ten dollars on every old gas range turned in?" suggested Manager Scott.

A list of benefits received by new customers in electrical ranges in various other towns and cities of the Province was introduced by Mr. Scott, showing that in Napanee during the campaign two years ago new customers there received the benefit of the new sale being financed for a three-year period, with five per cent. interest. Others gave free financing and free wiring. Trenton customers received a one-year term for payment and a free wiring service; Woodstock received the same benefits as Napanee and the Toronto dealers could offer no special inducement, except the financing of the store.

The merchants in Belleville have never been given any special inducement, it was protested by Commissioner Baragar. "That is by the local Commission," he amended. "The Belleville merchants should, however, be considered, just the same as they are in any other city."

"You're just getting back into the same thing, Mr. Baragar," reminded Chairman Duff. "We just come down to the same question, is it to be the merchants or the City of Belleville?"

Mayor Bone—"The merchants ask us in one breath not to sell stoves or appliances, and then in the next breath they are after us to put on a range campaign."

Mr. Baragar pointed out that merchants of other cities "had not the same competition they were being given in Belleville . . ."

"You are getting into the same thing again, Mr. Baragar," again reminded the chairman.

"Yes, maybe I am, but I feel that the merchants in this city who have long been paying for the upkeep of Belleville, who live here and pay taxes and bring up their families, should be the first ones to be considered. I feel they should get all the co-operation they can."

"Then you would agree to close the gas plant?" asked Mr. Bone.

Thinks Merchants Should Get Support

"I feel," explained Mr. Baragar, "that the merchants here should be given the same privileges they get in other places. I believe they should be given the support of the Commission in its advertising, its sales promotion and so on, and not be given just the competition they have been given."

It was pointed out by Mr. Scott that at the recent Ontario convention in Toronto, the Commission had been favoring the promotion of the range campaign. "But when we later visited Mr. Hogg and his associates, it was conveyed to us that there was no question in their minds when told of the gas plant condition we have here, should wait for a time."

Mr. Baragar referred to the local Hydro cooking school recently held.

"Would you call that 'soft pedalling' on the sale of stoves," he asked.

Schools of that nature were educational, explained Mr. Scott. No new customers had been created through this school, and they were held from time to time, simply to teach the people who have stoves the use of them. "We have not been building new business," he added.

The matter of the gas plant and of the holding of the range campaign was a "very difficult question," and, stated Mayor Bone, "I hate to see these unpleasant things deferred."

It was felt by the Commission that it would be better to wait until the report of the gas plant had been received from Toronto, "but then it would be too late for the provincial campaign," added Mr. Scott.

"If I thought we could put on this campaign without endangering our position too much, I would be the first to subscribe to it," stated Mr. Duff. "Anything to help the merchants' business along.

Mr. Scott at this point called the Toronto office of the Ontario Hydro Commission for further information. He returned with the message given over the telephone: "It is not believed up there that an intensive drive here on the part of the Commission would be in the best interest of the city, but it is possible that the range campaign could be carried on without us pushing it too aggressively."

Vote For Campaign

At this point decision was reached by the members to hold assist and take part in the range campaign under the conditions above described.

"But no matter what we Commissioners do, we'll probably be wrong" stated Chairman Duff.

Members then turned their attention to the second matter, the controversial one of the closing of the Hydro shop.

"Just how many persons would be affected by the closing of the shop. How many would lose their positions," asked Mayor Bone.

"Two or three," replied Mr. Scott.

"It has been said around town that ten or fifteen of them would be out," commented the Mayor.

"Now that we have come to this question, I suppose we all have our ideas on this matter of closing?" asked the Mayor.

"My firm opinion is that we should not close the shop," stated chairman Duff.

"Are you ready to lose your job on this Commission?" humorously asked Mayor Bone.

Mayor Against Closing of Shop

"Giving this serious consideration for some time past, and as Mayor, representing all the citizens of Belleville, I have come to the conclusion that as it seems to be the unanimous opinion also of my colleagues in council, I have also decided against any vote toward closing the shop," stated the Mayor.

"But I do hope and wish that in the future we on the Commission will be able to work with every effort toward helping our merchants. They are the ones who are in business here for a living, and now it is up to them to come to the Commission with their troubles and try and help us."

"I'd like to go right with you there, Mr. Mayor," heartily subscribed Mr. Duff. "I want to do all I can to help them."

"For after all, our job here, like the merchants, is to sell current," agreed Mayor Bone.

Commissioner Baragar Outlines Views

Commissioner Baragar, long an advocate of the shop's closing, outlined his stand:

"My belief is that better service can be rendered the City of Belleville by the Commission closing this shop. By refraining from the sale of all stoves and appliances and thus avoiding any controversy with the merchants. I believe also that this Commission should do all in its power to help the merchants along by promoting sales, and by helping them advertise. The merchants of Belleville have presented their case fully and honestly and thoroughly, and their pleas should be heard.

"We on the Commission can't ignore this $3,700 made by the shop here last year. It is not a good thing for the merchants to know that a public utility like this is taking this much business away from them, and I do not believe it is in the best interests of the citizens of Belleville. I believe the attitude of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission has been that we give this leadership and cooperation to the merchants of Belleville. I don't believe there is any reason why this shop should keep open when the merchants are able to take care of the business so well......".

"I don't believe we of the Commission should have to go out and make sales for them" (the merchants) observed Mayor Bone.

Chairman Duff referred to the money spoken of by Mr. Baragar. "It has been said and rumoured around town that this Hydro shop was going in the hole. How that started, I have no idea, nor do I know why."

It was further pointed out by Mr. Duff that at the convention in Toronto it was not felt that any Commission should give up its business of selling ranges or appliances. This was disputed by Mr. Baragar.

"It shows you right in this letter," declared Mr. Duff. Mr. Baragar asked that in future a full statement be presented by the Commission showing the full salaries of all engaged in the selling end and what costs could this be charged to this end.

At this point the final vote was taken.

Beekeepers and Bees Irked by the Late Development of Spring

There may have been robins seen on the wing, crocus in bloom, new car licences and permits, green blades of grass attempting to force their way through cold ground, and many other signs of Spring, but thus far, that busy fellow who improves each shining hour, has failed to put in an appearance.

Last year the bees were out as early as March in some parts of the district, but the chill damp weather of what is supposedly Spring has kept the busy buzzers close to their hives in cellars and other Winter quarters.

All of which is not conducive to the good tempers of beekeepers of the district. For Mr. Bee must, like an airplane pilot, be credited with so many hours in the air before he is of much use. As a matter of fact, it is said, if the bee does not get an early start in the Spring a disease similar to dysentery sets in, that causes no end of trouble to the diminutive honey-producers themselves and is a source of worry to their owners.

Past District Governor Talks to Rotary

Dr. Phil Huyck Explains Rotary Foundation

Dr. Phil Huyck, Past District Governor of this Rotary District, was the guest speaker at the regular meeting of Belleville Rotary Club Monday at Hotel Quinte, Dr. Huyck explained in detail the working of the Rotary Foundation which aims to raise a sum of $100,000 for the extension of Rotary work throughout the world, the carrying of the message of understanding and good will to other nations, particularly those nations where Rotary is as yet only dimly understood. Dr. Huyck said that the money required had been nearly raised and organization perfected to carry out the work as planned. Mac Robertson introduced the speaker and Bob Graham expressed the appreciation of those present to the speaker. Guests present included H. Edgar G. R. Sinclair, and Dr. Phil Huyck, all of Kingston. Past President J. C. Herity was congratulated upon the occasion of another birthday and Wm. Springer was welcomed back from the South. Regatta Committee reported everything functioning smoothly for the big speed boat regatta to be held off Massassaga Civic Holiday with every prospect of an outstanding success.

SUDDEN STORM BREAKS SUPPLY ELECTRIC POWER

Short Interruption Comes at Time of Light Thunder Storm During Morning

A series of local thunder storms that affected the Hydro systems of the district early today were responsible for the sudden cutting-off of electric power in the city shortly after 11 o'clock. The stoppage, however, was of a temporary nature, resumption of power occurring approximately ten minutes after the break.

Lights went out suddenly in offices and shops. Electric equipment in factors, newspaper plant, and other places utilizing electric machinery stopped instantaneously. Prior to the cessation of power rumblings of thunder on different occasions were heard in the distance. Any lightning that may have flashed through the grey, rain-drenched skies had its brilliance minimized by the light of day.

According to an informative source, Hydro systems of the district were temporarily affected by the sudden advent of one of the first electrical storms of Spring. No damage had been reported up until a late hour.

Hydro Employee Attacked by Tugs

Campbellford, April 18— Bound and gagged when attacked by three men in the back kitchen of his home yesterday, Herbert Smith, 60, Hydro pulp mill employee, is suffering from shock and bruises.

Smith had stepped out to the back shed to get some wood to light the fire when the assault occurred. The men dragged him back to the kitchen and, after taking his purse and watch, attempted to push him under the stove. Becoming frightened, the robbers made a hasty retreat.

Later both purse and watch were found in the back yard. Local and Provincial Police, who have a good description of the men, are investigating.

Mayor to Proclaim D. S. T. In Belleville From Midnight April 29 to Midnight Sept. 24

This Will Conform With Change Made in Other Municipalities

SHORT SESSION

Traffic Signals to be Placed at Dangerous Intersections in City

Mayor Bone will issue a proclamation inaugurating Daylight Saving Time in Belleville from midnight of April 29th till midnight of September 24th in order to fall in line with other municipalities in this district and to conform with the wishes of the Railway Association of Canada as time table changes take effect at midnight April 29th according to a motion accepted by the City Council in regular session on Monday evening. Alderman Kennedy objected to this procedure as he contended that the citizens had voted on a by-law which set forth specific dates in which Daylight Saving Time was to be effective in this city and that the by-law had not run its course. Ald. Eddie Logan stated to the council that the Retail Merchants were in favour of the advanced time of starting Daylight Saving Time as it would conform to changes of other municipalities in this district. There was no other discussion as the motion was adopted.

A Short Session

The session was one of the shortest of the year so far, there being little business transacted. A delegation from two pumper firms for fire equipment appeared before the council advocating that the city purchase their equipment for the Fire Department but after they had been heard the matter was referred back to the committee for further consideration. The Council has received tenders for a combination pumper, ladder and hose wagon which will cost in the neighborhood of $9,000. The Bickle and LaFrance Companies were represented at the meeting, the LaFrance Company tendering on the job with equipment from their factory mounted on a Ford chassis while the Bickle Company tendered on the contract with a product of their own manufacture.

New Traffic Signals

It was recommended "That the Public Utilities Commission be requested to instal new traffic signals at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets, Victoria Avenue and Front Street and also install one-way signals at Pinnacle Street and Bridge Street East corner, also at Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Street as per letter of April 3rd, the approximate cost of $880.00.

The letter from the Public Utilities was read to the council and was accepted without comment. The letter from Mr. Scott on the question follows:—

His Worship the Mayor and Council,
City of Belleville,

Attention Alderman H. Rollins,

Chairman of Light

Dear Sir:

We have received from Mr. Sutton of the Canadian General Electric Company prices on traffic signal equipment in line with the discussion which you and the writer had with him some time ago in the Utilities Office.

The propositions are as follows:

1. Removing present traffic signal at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets and installing four vertical type bracket signals on the corner of each building using the present signal controller. Estimated cost $250.00.

2. Installing at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Front Street three vertical type bracket signals together with controller for regulating same. Estimated cost $390.00.

3. Installing at the corner of Bridge and Pinnacle Streets one one-colour one-way signal with 8" amber lense lettered , CAUTION mounted on the Belleville Club Building or the pole at the Post Office corner together with beacon flasher. Estimated cost $115.00.

4. The same equipment at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Street as at the corner of Bridge Street and Pinnacle Street. Estimated cost $125.00.

The above estimated costs cover only the cost of material and erection. It will be necessary for the City to obtain permission to place the signals on the various properties.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Very truly yours,
Oswald H. Scott, Manager

Petition Received

Also received by the Council was a petition from the Taxi owners of the city requesting that no more taxi licences be granted. As the petition was not discussed in committee it was referred back for further consideration. The letter follows:—

The Mayor and Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville, Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen:

We, the undersigned wish to call the attention of the Council to certain conditions affecting the Taxi Business in the City of Belleville, and to petition the Council to pass the necessary By-laws remedying the same.

At the present time there are eleven separate taxi operators in the City of Belleville, all of whom with the exception of one maintain homes and garages in the City, paying taxes on same. These eleven have been established for some years and have rendered good service to the citizens at very moderate rates. It is felt that for a city the size of Belleville, eleven is adequate, and in fact, it is difficult for some of the eleven to make a living as it is.

Recently the practice has been commenced by several persons resident outside of the City of Belleville and who pay no taxes or contribute to the City in any way, of coming into the City to operate a taxi service in competition with those services already established. It is felt by the undersigned that as they are established in the City and have been for many years, that this practice should be stopped and a bylaw passed by this Council to the effect that the City should not grant a license to an individual or individuals permitting them to operate a taxi service within the City of Belleville unless they are bona fide residents within the City and maintain a garage or other place of accommodation for their cars.

It is also felt by the present taxi operators in Belleville that the City is adequately served and we, therefore, petition the Council to pass a resolution that no more licenses be granted until such time as either one or more of the present taxi operators cease to function or until there is sufficient growth in the population to warrant further licenses being granted.

Signatures: R. W. Clare; E. Moon; G. Dafoe; J. Grotto, J. B. Grotto, E. J. Grotto; J. N. Bentley; W. M. Howie; H. T. Clare, V. G. Clare; S. L. Scripture; T. J. Lynch; R. King.

Mayor Jamieson Bone told the members that some action should be taken respecting the condition of the highway east of Belleville. "It is an utter disgrace" said His Worship and "I don't seem to get much co-operation from Queen's Park." Alderman Rollins suggested that the Minister of Highways, Hon. T. B. McQuesten be invited to come down himself and personally inspect this piece of road. "I think if he sees it and drives over it, that some action will be immediately taken" said Ald. Rollins.

To Study Question

A committee composed of Aldermen Kennedy, Rollins, Thompson and Allin was appointed confer with Thurlow Township council respecting the boundary roads about Belleville, McDonald Avenue and College Street being especially mentioned. It is believed the two councils could amicably come to some agreement respecting the maintenance of these two highways. The by-law to amend the Market by-law was passed which gives permission for producers of canned goods and other products to sell the same on the Belleville market but written proof must be supplied by the vendors that the produce is of their own manufacture. Ald. Allin stated that it was the wish of the council to make the market a producer's market and not a huckster's market.

In answer to an inquiry from Ald. Jeffery, Ald. Lewis stated that the medical examination of all the firemen had not been completed and that a report would be submitted to the council on the completion of same. There being no further business the council adjourned. Ald. Jeffery was in the chair in the committee of the whole and also in the committee on bylaws.

DENTON MASSEY

Did Not Withdraw

Far from withdrawing his statement that thousands had died, Mr. Massey declared thousands more were slowly dying from malnutrition and other conditions.

In support of his charge he quoted the Bureau of Statistics to the effect 10,000 people died in 1936 without medical attendance. Some of these would certainly have lived had they had proper care. Besides 918 persons had been killed from 1932-37 inclusive trespassing on railway property. Most of these were probably indigent transients.

The death rate in that section of Toronto where most relief recipients lived was higher than in other sections of the city. This was no doubt due to the conditions under which the people live and would apply all across Canada. Hon. G. M. Weir, Provincial Secretary and Minister of Health for British Columbia, was quoted by Mr. Massey as saying in a magazine article: "The public dependents alone number 1,500,000 and there are at least as many others who fall in the class of medically indigent."

Malnutrition Prevalent

Mr. Massey said that "in other words, according to Mr. Weir, there are 3,000,000 or more than 25 per cent of our population who cannot afford the cost of any medical attention whatsoever."

It was not only those who died from malnutrition who should be considered, the Toronto member suggested. Malnutrition caused certain diseases such as tuberculosis, pneumonia and ulcers of the stomach from which many people died.

Mr. Rogers said Mr. Massey would have raised himself in the estimation of the House had he withdrawn the statement for he had completely failed to prove it. It was a reflection on all the officials who were administering relief throughout Canada as well as on hundreds of private welfare organizations.

Joseph Harris, (Con. Toronto-Danforth) said he was satisfied there was some evidence to support Mr. Massey's statement and he told of some of his experiences on visiting Toronto hospitals where large numbers of indigents were receiving care.

Debate to Continue

The debate on unemployment which precipitated the Rogers-Massey clash last week continues today. Mr. Rogers is seeking passage of a resolution which will permit him to introduce the annual bill to provide for a continuance of unemployment relief measures.

Numerous suggestions designed to alleviate the unemployment situation which were advanced by Liberal and Conservative members were brushed aside as useless by Social Credit spokesmen who insisted the cause of unemployment was lack of money and the cure was a new system which would put purchasing power in the hands of the people.

"These speeches (by Liberal members) together with the record of the Conservative administration from 1930 to 1935 and of the Liberal administration from 1935 until the present," said John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, "testify against the old line parties and constitute a convincing and condemning bit of evidence as to the intellectual bankruptcy financial decrepitude and incompetence of both parties.

DECLARATION OF NATIONS' RIGHTS

President Roosevelt's appeal asking Germany and Italy for peace assurances of a period covering ten to twenty-five years and guaranttes that they will not attack thirty-one named countries or their possessions will be one of the great historic documents of democracy of the world. London Evening Standard says it is so great that it places Roosevelt in the position of the greatest American since Abraham Lincoln. It calls his letter "Gettysburg 1939."

Whatever Germany and Italy think of it, it has clarified the world. It tells Germany and Italy where responsibility rests should an world wide war break out.

It is the mandate of the world demanding protection and peace from war. It should spell the death-knell of war as an instrument of settling international differences.

It will probably spell for Germany and Italy in the long run democracy no matter what the end of the course these two lands are now pursuing or will pursue in the immediate future. Accepted, it means peace, settlement, harmony. Rejection may mean war and ruin of countless nations.

Radio broadcasts have reached the dictator countries and the peoples have heard of the overtures for a world truce of so many years.

Rejection of such a plan can be construed only in one way. The world will know why. Chancellor Hitler has said he wants peace and an Italian spokesman says Italy is threatening no nation. The letter threw the onus on the dictators.

President Roosevelt has proven one of the strongest forces in democracy and has made his contribution one of the most famous. It is the voice of civilization and justice. The world demands peace. Only two nations in Europe can possibly cause war.

THE FORESTS

Canadians as they look over the vast country they call home and native land gain some notion of the possibilities and responsibilities of those who are in authority and those who are citizens. This land has developed and must continue to develop.

Today attention is fastened on the forest reserves and reforestation. There have been warnings that the nation cannot be allowed to deplete the valuable woodlands to the point of exhaustion. There has been a time in Canada when trees were ruthlessly cut down without a thought of the future. Now there must be thought of the future. Recent years have taught the value of resources being maintained. Forests are like crops, they can be maintained and there can be reforestation but one knows lands in the north country which have been cut over and there remains nothing but rocks and small patches of earth. Weather and rains have done their worst and rocks remain. To obtain a growth on these would be, it is said, impossible.

A healthy forestry policy means use and maintenance of the forest lands.

This year four thousand young men are to be engaged in work in connection with one million dollar forestry plans across Canada, The young men will be trained in the work of preservation and development of the woodlands.

TAKING IT CALMLY

"'Ware the alarmists during week-ends," reads the title of an editorial in the Ottawa Journal, which is good advice for everyone. The Journal says that while no one can say that war is not going to come upon the world, this does not mean that "all of us should go about taking war for granted, magnifying every incident that comes over the cables, seeing war around every corner. Such an attitude, all too prevalent, in this days, is desperately harmful. Not only is it bad for the country's business and industrial life; it actually weakens capacity to be prepared for war."

The newspaper pleads with the people to be less "jumpy" about war scares, more calm about war news. "The newspapers have to print the news, even when it is mere report and rumor. They would be delinquent in their duty if they didn't. But there is such a thing as being sensible about news; such a thing as taking pains to distinguish between an official statement and a mere unauthorized or unconfirmed report."

The paper offers a word of advice as to radio news. "Radio news, except when it is expressly identified with news agencies of repute, is to be taken mostly with the proverbial grain of salt.

"The dictators are anxious to keep the world jittery, control their press and radio broadcasts to that end, and when we fall for it we are doing just what they want us to do," is a parting word of the Journal.

This sensible advice, though it is impossible to get the thought of the conditions in Europe out of mind. It must be realized that there is no war yet and that movements of fleets and troops, do not necessarily mean war, that they may be the means that will prevent war.

Business has to go on as usual unless a conflict should ensue. The nation which keeps calm is serving its cause best. Conditions require that the morale of the people be not broken by false reports and alarms, for there is a great work to do in time of peace as in time of war.

Canadians hear of the Prime Minister of Britain and members of his cabinet going to the country for the weekend and large numbers of Old Country city dwellers spending the weekend in rural retreats. That should assure Canadians. Canadians unfortunately have not developed that ability which British people have of throwing off routine and anxiety as Britishers have. These latter come back fresh for work at the beginning of the week and are able to give better service and employment than those who spend a jittery weekend waiting or listening to hear the worst, which is most likely not to take place.

ADDRESS TO EARTH

David Morton in the New York Sun.

What is this thing that stirs
Forever your heart—
So that, most strangely, in Spring
The lips will part
Uttering bright flowers and pale flowers
That all but sing?

Words that are spoken to eyes
More than to ears,
Being shaped and colored so,
Yet the watcher hears,
Or nearly hears, how the heart cries
Swift words and slow . . .

So briefly written there,
So bravely spoken
The dauntless, bright endeavor,
Crying your love and wasting forever in air,
And the frail token
But your love, forever.

TWEED HAS MADE FRONT PAGE WITH A LOUD NOISE, having performed the impossible — refused a public building at the hands of the Government, free gratis, a gift. Such a thing has never been heard of before, and indicates that there is considerable of that spirit in Tweed which David Harum said was responsible for horse races, a difference of opinion. Some folks wanted the new post office one place, some another, but it appears that few wanted it where the Government wanted to put it. Two different sites were chosen, neither agreeable to the village solons, who now ask the Government to shift the site to the centre of the village or call the whole thing off. From the outside looking in it looks like folks nowadays are agin' taking much open air exercise when it comes to walking. A sign of the times is the report that folks in small towns have even given up the habit of meeting all daytime trains —— 'Member the crowd that used to congregate on the station platform just before traintime in the old home town, when arrivals and departures furnished much food for present and prolonged conversation. "MY BREAD IT TASTES SWEET AND I FEEL LIKE A MAN BECAUSE I WORK", so said Mario Izzo, an Italian immigrant who lived in Aliquappa, Pennsylvania. Izzo, out of work was placed on relief and hist first weekly relief check for $3.60 so pleased him that he seized a broom and went out to sweep the streets six hours a day, six days a week, because, said he: "I think this is a wonderful country. I decide I will be an honest man with this country . . . so I start to sweep . . . my bread it tastes sweet and I feel like a man because I work." Mario Izzo died and his body was buried in the Potters Field. Something better was due Izzo in the minds of the citizens so they took up a collection and purchased a lot and tombstone in the regular cemetery, removing the body from the Potters Field.

MASS MURDER TRIAL of 458 native women in Africa provides an interesting variety to current news. A dusky husky native chief named Sampson undertook to collect a debt from another chief named Shembe. Payment was refused and Sampson slew four of the debtor's tribe, issuing an ultimatum that unless the debt was paid the consequences would be more disastrous. Then the women of Chief Shembe's tribe went into action and seized the bloodthirsty Sampson and what they did to him was not pretty. The 458 females seized Sampson, tied him to a tree and proceeded to carve him up with knives and hatchets. Then they buried what was left of him and covered his grave with a ton or two of debris. The 458 Amazons were arrested and tried in the open square, being found guilty of manslaughter. Eleven leaders were sentenced to six months in jail, the others three months and suspended sentence upon promise of good behaviour.

Military Lesson of Madrid

In the 3,000 years since history has been recording world events, only five besieged cities have held out longer than Madrid. The five were: Troy in 1184 B.C., Tyre in 572 B.C., Constantinople in 677 A.D., Ostend in 1604, and Gibraltar in 1780. Of the five, only three, Troy, Constantinople and Ostend, surrendered.

This historic fact is all the more remarkable in view of the supposed improvements that have been made in arms and munitions.

Even the brains and force of the Italian, German and Moor supporters of General Franco could not capture Madrid by arms. They had to wait until a starved population laid down their weapons and allowed the Insurgents to walk into the city. Although General Franco had airplanes and artillery in numbers far beyond the armaments of the defenders of Madrid, he could not take the Spanish capital until lack of food compelled surrender.

Madrid withstood the siege for 872 days, or two years and five months.

In 572 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar besieged Tyre for 13 years and did not take the city.

In 1184 B. C., Troy was captured by the Greeks after a siege of 10 years.

In 677 A.D., the Saracens captured Constantinople after a siege of five years.

The Flemish were besieged in Ostend for three years before they surrendered the city to the Spaniards in 1604.

In the 1780's Gibraltar was besieged by Spain for three years and seven months and the city did not capitulate.

In the war between France and Prussia in 1870 Paris fell to the Prussians after withstanding a siege for 135 days.

Carthage refused to surrender to Rome for two years.

In the Boer War Kimberley, Ladysmith and Mafeking withstood sieges of from four to seven months.

Russia held Port Arthur for eight months against Japan before surrendering in the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-1905.

Lucknow and Delhi in India were besieged by Sepoys for four months each in the rebellion of 1857.

Boston was besieged for eight months by the British during the American Revolutionary War.

In the American Civil War Vicksburg was besieged for six months, and Richmond for nine months.

If Montcalm had remained within Quebec in 1759 and let Wolfe besiege the city, instead of going out to meet Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham, Quebec might have held on and the whole course of history in North America would have been changed.

With airplanes dropping tons of bombs, and heavy guns firing tons of high explosives into Madrid, or any city, military strategists thought no community could withstand a modern siege. But Madrid was bombed and shelled steadily, yet the city did not surrender. The end came after 872 days because of lack of food and supplies, not because of aerial bombings or artillery.

Another point to be noted is this. If the well trained Italians, Germans and Moors armed with the latest military equipment, could not capture Madrid from the scrub army recruited by the so-called Spanish Loyalists, then how long could the Italians, Germans and Moors hope to stand up against well trained and superbly equipped troops like the British and French! —W. L. Clarke in Windsor Star.

Hare Pie and Bottle Kicking

On Easter Monday (April 10) the English village of Hallaton, in Leicestershire, engages in the peculiar custom of Hare Pie Scrambling" and "Bittle Kicking."

Local legend attributes the former old custom to a thank-offering made by a woman after her escape from a bull. At the critical moments a hare had sprung up and so diverted the bull's attention. Be this as it may, it is a fact that at some remote period an unknown benefactor bequeathed to the rector of the parish a piece of land, on the condition that he and his successors should provide annually "two hare pies"—together with a quantity of ale and two dozen penny loaves — to be scrambled for each Easter Monday at the rising ground called Hare Pie Bank, a prehistoric encampment about a quarter of a mile from the village. Though shorn of some of its ancient trimmings, the custom is still vigorously maintained and Hallaton men come home from all over England to join in the celebration of their village's red-letter day.

x x x

At about half-past one, a deputation attends at the rectory where two enormous pies, cooked in the village bakehouse, are waiting to be cut up. As the pies are cut the village children crowd around and seize bits "for luck" and the remaining fragments are put into sacks, tied with red, white and blue ribbons, and so carried to the Fox Inn where a procession is formed.

Headed by the band, playing Cheer Boys Cheer, See the Conquering Hero Comes, and other martial tunes, two men carry the sacks, and after them three men bear aloft one of the historic bottles. They are not really bottles, but small ribbon-decked wooden casks, two of which are filled with beer while the third—the "dummy"—is empty. With its attendant crowd the procession makes its way to Hare Pie Bank. Here the contents of the sacks are tipped out and the fragments of pie hurled among the crowd, the height of humor being attained when a mess of pastry lands in the face of some innocent onlooker.

x x x

Aftert his preliminary horseplay comes the business of the day. Raising one of the ale-filled bottles three times above his head, a villager heaves it into the thick of the crowd and immediately it is the centre of a wild struggle. Though to the stranger there appear to be no distinguishable "sides", the game is in fact a contest between the men of Hallaton and those of the neighboring village of Medbourne. The goals are two streams, a mile apart and the object of each side is to get the bottle, by fair means or foul, across its own boundary. Sometimes for nearly half an hour there will be a deadlock, but once the crowd is in motion, in one direction of the other, nothing can stop it, and hedges, fences and gates go down like ninepins under the weight of the scrum. The fiercest struggle takes place by the brook, but at length some villager, swifter than the rest, snatches up the bottle and deposits it, after a wild rush, safely within his own boundary.

For the "dummy" bottles the contest is even more formidable, and the Hallatonians boast that it has never been carried beyond the bounds of their own parish. The game being one of the best out of three type, the third bottle is rarely, if ever, put into play.

Towards five in the evening the three bottles are escorted to Hallaton Market Cross, where the ale is consumed by the bruised but very cheerful players.

x x x

Hallaton's bottle-kicking is a much older observance than its players realize. As a relic of an ancient type of football, such as was once played in the streets of London and other cities, it has a definite historic interest but its origin may well belong to prehistoric mimic battles between Winter and Summer. I would even hazard the guess that the hare in the pie represents animal sacrifice that formed an essential part of such contests.—A. K. Hamilton Jenkin in 'Coming Events in Britain.'

BREAD MONEY.

There are many people who consider there should be some change in the monetary system and that goods should be based on definite units of labor. Along that line it may be of interest to quote a table which shows an hour of labor in Canada and the United States will buy about 7.5 pounds of bread; in Britain 5.2 pounds; France 5.0; Belgium 4.9; Italy 2.8; Germany 2.5; Russia 1.9.—Niagara Falls Review.

SET ON SPRINGS

Dynamiting at the nearby Grand River Dam site disturbed his setting hen, and so Justice of the Peace P. S. Bivens, of Disney, Okla., mounted the nest on a shock absorber improvised of old bed springs.

This experiment, however, was a failure. Only one of the thirteen eggs hatched, and perhaps that's just as well. If it had succeeded some fiend in humorist form would have been sure to perpetrate a bum joke about Justice Bivens' "spring chickens."—N. Y. World-Telegram.

HIS HOLINESS

The names of the Popes are an interesting study. There has been no second Peter, and the first of the Johns did not appear till 523. No other Apostle appears in the list, though there are several Stephens. Forty-three names occur once only, the last of them, Landon (913). John was the most favored name, but some of the selections were unfortunate, and the line ended with John XXIII. (1410). There have been fifteen Benedicts and sixteen Gregories.—London Observer.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

New Treatment For Dry Form of Catarrh

One of the most annoying and embarrassing ailments is what is called atrophic rhinitis or the dry form of catarrh. Crusts form inside the nose and back of throat, the odor from which is most disagreeable.

Formerly all that could be done for these cases was to use nose drops and some form of mouth wash or confection to help conceal the terrible odor.

A few years ago it was found that electricity in the form of ionization—heating water in a rubber bag which had been pushed into the nose—helped to put some life into the lining of the nose and helped get rid of the crusts. The use of the Xrays has also been reported as helping to relieve symptoms of this distressing ailment.

What may prove to be of greater help than any other known form of treatment is reported in Laryngoscope, St. Louis, by Dr. I. H. Blaisdell, Boston. The new treatment is by estrin—a hormone of the ovary—which has proved its usefulness in other organs and tissues where stimulation was needed.

Estrin substances were first used in cases of atrophic rhinitis in the outpatient department of the Eye and Ear Infirmary, Boston, on August 1st., 1937. A series of sixty cases is presented, divided into two groups: group 1 consists of patients with an onset of this third or dry form of catarrh before 20 years of age, and group 2 is made up of patients with onset of symptoms after 20 years of age. In the first group there was improvement—less odor and crusts—in 84 per cent. and improvement in all cases in group 2 (over 20 years of age).

While this would not be considered a large number of cases for some ailments, to obtain some improvement in 84 per cent in one group and improvement in all cases in the second group in such a stebborn ailment is very gratifying.

This substance, besides being a hormone—a gland substance which has stimulating powers on special organs or processes—is, Dr. Blaisdell states, if properly used, one of the greatest weapons for combating diseases and correcting improperly working body processes.

As atrophic rhinitis has been considered almost incurable, this new remedy—extract with stimulating powers—is well worthy of being tried by the large number of discouraged patients who suffer with this disease.

HUNGARY REACTS

friendship with Italy and Germany.

Italian newspapers said the Hungarian view was that the peace proposed by Mr. Roosevelt was not peace with justice but merely a plan to continue existing "injustices."

Diplomatic circles thought it likely Hungary might be a partner in the next move of the axis powers.

They pointed out Hungary gave Germany support while the Nazis recently were negotiating their new trade agreement with Rumania —Hungary massing almost 500,000 soldiers on the Rumanian frontier.

Address Approved

With cheers, the Italian senate yesterday approved an address by its President, Giacomo Suardo, to be read to King Victor Emmanuel in response to the monarch's formal acceptance of the crown of newly conquered Albania, in which this declaration occurred:—

"The Rome-Berlin Axis divides the continent with a dominating bloc of military forces against which it is no longer possible to repeat successfully the old manoeuvres of encircling coalitions."

To finance its military power—now represented by 1,200,000 men under arms—the government has decreed an additional allotment of $25,000,000 annually for the army for the next ten years.

Il Popolo D'Italia declared of President Roosevelt's proposals:—

"We deny the President had any right to intervene in European questions because his country is not directly interested and because he personally has not the slightest claim to assuming the role of friendly and impartial mediator."

TRUCKERS PREPARE FOR "MOVING DAY"

National moving day, proverbially set for many years past on May 1st is still some time away, but according to local trucking firms and city real estate men, the first migration of tenants from one home to another is apparently well under way.

"We have been very busy during the past week or so," stated the manager of one large moving firm this morning. "The business has started earlier this year and shows signs of increasing."

Many of the jobs have been long distance ones, the transportation of household effects from Belleville to other Ontario points and from distant centres to Belleville, it was stated. The influx of new families is apparently well ahead of the number moving from Belleville elsewhere, it was stated.

Usually the first movement does not commence until well into the month of April, but this year in spite of the cold weather "business has been good since early this month."

Royal Visit and World's Fair Will Attract Many Tourists Through Belleville District

Chamber of Commerce Officials Believe Coming Season Should be Good

ALTERNATE ROUTES

The vanguard of Ontario's 1939 tourist army has started to roll through Belleville.

Only a few United States licence plates have so far been observed, but it is the considered opinion of officials of the Chamber of Commerce that it will not be long before the summer rush is on, and when the expected rush does start, it may be just as heavy, or heavier than during the best years.

The royal visit will bring thousands of residents from south of the border to Ontario. Even the one big Fair at New York may help this city and the County of Hastings indirectly by providing an alternate route through Ontario from midwest United States points to New York. Many will enter Ontario at Niagara Falls and proceed through Ontario, through Belleville to Rouse's Point or the new International Bridge, the building of which has already resulted in increased diversion of traffic through Belleville area.

However, the tourist season will not officially open until June when schools close and families are free to load their cars with the full family and set out for distant points, and residents will be given plenty of time to welcome the arriving visitors.

Already inquiries have been received in increasing numbers at the local office regarding facilities in the county, and this week an extensive advertising scheme is being inaugurated by the local Chamber in conjunction with the City of Belleville and Hastings County.

Present Season Busy One for Entomological Laboratory

Millions of Parasites to Destroy Spruce Saw-fly and Corn Borers being Propagated

EXCHANGE SHIPMENTS

Twenty million spruce saw fly parasites which will be used this coming summer to combat the increasing menace of the spruce fly in the Gaspe Peninsula and Maritime Provinces, are at present being propagated in the East Dundas Street Dominion Entomological Laboratory.

Several million other parasites of the coddling moth which will be shipped to the other coast of Canada and liberated in the fruit districts of British Columbia, and almost as many corn borer parasites to control this latter pest in the corn fields of Hastings and Prince Edward County and other agricultural sections of the Province and Dominion, are also being raised.

The present period is one of the busiest of the year at the local laboratory which has during the past few years gained world recognition as the finest laboratory in existence devoted to the work of suppression and control of the destructive insects and the propagation of the helpful varieties in this unceasing work.

Weather conditions lately and a backward spring have resulted in a slowing up of the usual spring work which this year, as in the case of the corn borer, will be tackled with increasing energy. A heavier effort will be made during the coming year to control this pest which has made its effect felt so greatly lately on corn crops of this area, and laboratory experts will commence the first of the open field work in the district as soon as dry weather permits. Three types of tried and tested parasitical helpers will be used by the laboratory this year in Belleville and Prince Edward section, it was stated by Mr. A. B. Baird, in charge of the local bureau. Reports of the work of the insects liberated previously have been "very encouraging" it was stated.

During the past winter the laboratory has engaged in an exchange of the helpful insects with other European countries, and with the United States. Thousands of the tiny winged helpers have been received here from points as remote as Czecho-Slovakia, and as many have been shipped out in their carefully insulated carriers. At the present period propagation work is occupying the full attention of the laboratory.

Good Advice for Constipation!

A doctor will tell you that the best thing to do in case of sickness is to find the cause. If you are constipated, don't be satisfied with temporary remedies. Find the cause of the ailment!

It would be easy if your diet, like that of most people, is unbalanced—no doubt it lacks "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean quantity, but the kind of food that does not completely assimilate and leaves a soft "mass" in the bowels that helps the bowel to move.

If that is what is lacking, the solution is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran, crispy and tasteful, for breakfast. It helps form the "bulk" and contains Vitamin B₁, the natural intestinal tonic.

Eat some All-Bran every day, drink lots of water and become "regular"! Made in London, Canada, by Kellogg. At all grocers.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

How's Your Conversation.

Girls who want to have personality (and it's something that every girl ought to make up her mind to have) are wishing that their school days weren't over.

Beginning next autumn, the public schools of New York State are going to teach the art of conversation. If this idea is effectively carried out, it isn't too much to say that many a girl's life problem will thereby be solved.

Every woman longs to be charming. Whatever other ambitions she may have, in the way of being a business woman or a wife and mother, or all three, she wants charm as a foundation. The truth is that it's her birthright and she knows it.

A few girls, it is true, are born with all the charm they will ever need. On these fortunate creatures Nature bestows beauty, grace, health, sweetness and social adaptability. But most of us come into the world with incomplete personalities. We have to work to fill them out. For years, it may be, we have to train and develop ourselves, with whatever help we can get, until we've done the most possible with our raw material.

At present, perhaps, too many girls depend altogether on the beauty parlor to supply all that Nature may have withheld. The beauty parlor can do a good deal, it is true. And it is of great importance for every girl to look well-groomed and immaculate as well as to wear well-chosen clothes, even if she has but few of them.

But "permanents" and vivid nail-polishes don't really make a personality or supply charm. The life-like mannikins in the shop windows have perfectly waved hair and artfully tinted faces.

But they can't talk. Does anybody fall in love with them?

The thoroughly charming girl need not be strictly beautiful, but she must have something to say and know how to say it. Which is just what the New York educators have in mind. This doesn't mean talking too much, or talking about herself exclusively or talking gossip or talking on subjects that are dull and silly. It does mean being friendly and intelligent and lively. Also it means being fairly well-informed, so that every few moments she won't run up against some snag of her own ignorance. If a girl has a sense of humor, so much the better. But if she is quick enough to understand the jokes that her friends make to her, no doubt she will easily get by, without making any herself.

And while we're speaking of charm, and the ability to talk well, we shouldn't overlook the point that one of the greatest elements in charm is a beautiful voice. I hope the schools that are going to teach the art of talking, won't forget that.

A good many girls noticed recently that Mrs. Roosevelt had been taking voice lessons. In her case, of course, this was in connection with her public speaking. But it's not necessary to be a public speaker before one pays attention to one's voice, and a girl can improve her voice a great deal without paying for special lessons.

Just have it in mind that while people may disagree about your looks, they are much less likely to be of two minds as to whether or not you are charming.

A man will be likely to think you are beautiful after he falls in love with you. But he'll surrender to the spell of your personality, which includes your voice and the things you say with it, before he falls in love. Which is the same as saying that it's your personality he falls in love with,—not the way you arrange your hair.

If, in say ten years from now, New York can display a generation of girls able to charm through their conversation, we'll have to take our hats off to the public schools.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Mail-Bag Highlights This Week

A man reader writes: "A friend and I have decided to come to you to referee a dispute that we are having. This is a high-priced dispute, and, of course, I hope to win! The question is: When a person has been introduced to another person and, takes his leave, a short time after, is it correct to say, 'I'm very glad to have met you'? I contend that it is proper and my friend says it isn't. Do I win that money, Mrs. Beeckman?"

You do! This pleasant remark is a gracious thing to say when you are taking leave of a person to whom you have just been introduced.

To another man reader I am anything but an impartial referee. Having read my advice that it is a breach of good manners to "congratulate" a bride, he writes me a letter that begins like a lamb and ends like a lion . . . "I always read your very interesting column, and, until today have thought your replies pertinent and good. Of course, being a 'mere man', I fully realize that I have a lot to learn . . . in fact, the older I grow, the less I know. Even so, your reply in the paper yesterday made me indulge in mental gymnastics. You said, 'Don't congratulate the bride.' Why not? Surely she should be congratulated on winning a prize. There are so many girls trying to get a place in the matrimonial stakes . . there are so many more eligible spinsters than eligible bachelors, that I think a girl is lucky to have made a capture. Have you not heard, Madame, what some of the great men have said:

Napoleon — 'It is wrong of us, pure folly, to put women on a level with men.'

Tolstoy— 'The great art of a woman's life is to master the art of captivating men.'

George Eliot (Mrs. Evans)—'A woman's choice usually means taking the only man she can get'.

"I could give you many similar opinions but all I will do now is to send you my best wishes."

Well, sir, my head is bloody but unbowed. Granted that all you say may be true about the bride's good fortune in getting her man, I still maintain that it is more exquisite taste not to cloud the sun of the wedding day with possibly inappropriate frankness about realities. The kindest thing in the kindest way is still the best definition of good manners.

So please Mr. Misogynist, let's follow the pleasant rule of offering the bride our "best wishes" and the groom our "congratulations".

PRESENTATION

On Wednesday evening, April 5, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geddes Bradshaw, Front of Thurlow, with a miscellaneous shower to honor Mr. and Mrs. Ross Spencer (nee Bessie Bradshaw) who were quietly married on September 17, 1938.

The early part of the evening was spent in cards and social intercourse, after which the bride and groom were presented with a large, overflowing basket of dainty and very useful gifts and the following address was read by Miss Hazel Reid:

Dear Bessie and Ross:

We, your friends and neighbors of the Front Road have gathered here tonight to express our good will and affection towards you on this occasion.

You, Bessie, have been a regular attendant, so kind, cheerful and ever willing helper in our church and community. We hope you will do the same in the community in which you have gone.

Ross, although we do not know you as we do Bessie, we hope you find happiness in your new home. Although we regret you leaving instead of coming to our community we know it will add to the one in which you are living.

We expect that at times you will both meet new opportunities that will demand of you your best.

As a slight token of our esteem and good will toward you both we ask you to accept these gifts, also our best wishes expressed in these lines:

We wish good health to stay with you,
And things to waken laughter
And should some days be dark and grey,
We wish you sunshine after.
We wish enough of wealth for you,
To keep you free from worry,
And time to fold your hands and rest
In time of care and hurry.
And then we wish each coming day
To bless you as it meets you
And think often of these friends who greet you.

Signed on behalf of the community,

Helen Brown
Hazel Reid.

Both the bride and groom thanked all for the lovely gifts and invited them to visit them in their new home. "For they are jolly good fellows" was then sung. A dainty lunch was then served and a social time spent after which all departed to their own homes.

The members of St. Jude's Congregation, Kingsford very much regret the departure of the Rev. A. E. Pepper and Mrs. Pepper. Mr. Pepper has given such splendid service for a number of years.

Mrs. Pepper has been a valuable member of the Guild as well as helping in other branches of the church work.

A sum of money was presented to them on behalf of St. Jude's congregation in appreciation of their leadership. Best wishes go with them for their future success.

BETHESDA W. A.

On Thursday, April 6th, Bethesda W. A. met in the Sunday School rooms and served the regular monthly pot-luck dinner to the teachers and scholars of White Lake school, numbering about thirty. After dinner a comforter was quilted. The President being absent, Mrs. Mullett opened the meeting by singing a hymn. Rev. Mr. Delve offered prayer. Scripture lesson was read by Rosella Herity. Roll call was answered by presenting a sunshine slipper. Mrs. Delve gave a reading which was much enjoyed by all as was an instrumental by Jean Downey. A reading, "The Ladies Aid" was given by Mrs. Wm. Downey and a reading by Mrs. Earl Holland "A home of their own". Several items of business were dealt with after which Mrs. Mullett closed with prayer. The day's proceeds being seven dollars and thirty-five cents.

ZION W. M. S.

The Zion W.M.S. held their monthly meeting on Wednesday, April the 12th at the home of Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson with fourteen members present. The President, Mrs. Ralph Sills, opened the meeting with quiet music, with Mrs. Percy Ray at the piano, and all repeating the Lord's Prayer followed by hymn 185. Scripture lesson was then read by Mrs. Ralph Sills. Roll call was answered by a verse from the Bible containing the word charity. The devotional part was taken by the president. The offering was taken and dedicated by Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson. Mrs. Brough, group leader then took charge. Readings were given by Mrs. A. Sheffield from Missionary Monthly. Mrs. Brough and Mrs. Ralph Sills "The Challenge." The meeting closed with prayer. Mrs. Brough's group served lunch and a social half hour was spent.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

I have been describing the terrible thing diphtheria used to be before we had its antitoxin. It was an awful sensation to watch this terrible disease in action. In the worst stages, children choked to death right before your eyes, and you couldn't do anything for them.

Sometimes doctors would try heroic measures. Some even inserted a tube in the windpipe to let the air through that swollen throat. Intubation sets were developed so that this tube could be fastened to the windpipe with a minimum of trouble. But the rural doctor didn't have such things as these. I remember once going to a home where the child was choking to death before the eyes of the frantic parents. They pleaded with me to do something, so I cut one of the rubber tubes off my stethescope and fastened it to the windpipe with adhesive. The child eventually died, but it was a peaceful death compared to the one it was facing.

This operation on the windpipe seems incredible, yet I have known children who, when they were relieved this way, were able successfully to fight the disease. Too often though even when they got their breath, the heart couldn't stand the strain—it was overwhelmed with poison.

I have heard my father tell of such operations as I described above. He used to say to me that when an epidemic of diphtheria struck a community, 75 per cent of all that took it would die. All the older doctors felt that way about it, for they were helpless to do anything.

It wasn't until 1883—the year that I was born—that the mystery of the disease and the identity of the bacteria that caused it were discovered. Shortly after this, the poison, or toxin, produced by the bacteria was also discovered. This was followed by the development of the antitoxin which killed this poison. Since that time the death rate from this disease has dropped very rapidly. If the antitoxin is given early in the course of the disease, it neutralizes the poison given off by the bacteria, and the child recovers.

When I started practice 30 years ago, this antitoxin was pretty crude stuff. It was expensive, too, for we had to pay about 25 dollars for a shot of a 1000 to 2000 units. On that basis the antitoxin we inject in a patient today would cost four or five hundred dollars.

In those days, doctors would buy this antitoxin and take chances on getting anything back for it. The result was we always lost money in a diphtheria epidemic.

A short time ago Frazier Hunt dug up an incident I had forgotten all about. Just after I left medical school, I was employed to help a doctor in a mining camp. A diphtheria epidemic came along and I toxoided everybody who showed any symptoms. Well, our bill for toxoid was mighty high, so I got fired. I didn't care. I saved some lives.

MANION AND BUCK LETTERS PUBLIC, SENT TO M. P.'S

Hon. Dr Manion Says He Has No Knowledge Communist Party Disassociated Self from Russian Communism

Ottawa, April 18 (CP)—Whether the Communist party of Canada seeks to attain its ends by revolutionary or Democratic means has been the subject of an exchange of lengthy letters between Conservative leader Manion and Tim Buck, Dominion Secretary of the Communist party, it was made known Monday.

The letters—copies of which went to all members of parliament —were prompted by Dr. Manion's support in the House of Commons of a proposal by Wilfrid Lacroix (Lib. Quebec-Montmorency) to bar the Communist party from use of the mails.

Mr. Buck wrote the Conservative leader inviting an examination of Communist speeches and constitution to show the Communist party held that "Socialism will be achieved only by means of the expressed Democratic will of the majority of the Canadian people."

No Kewledge

Dr. Manion replied he had no knowledge that the Communist party of Canada had disassociated itself from the Communism of Russia, which was based on a theory of force, or from the Communism of Marx or Engels.

"Indeed, I have no doubt that it is a branch of Russian Communism, connected with the third Internationale at Moscow, the avowed intention of which is to overthrow the regimes and institutions of foreign countires by world revolution," Dr. Manion wrote, noting that Mr. Buck had "the honesty not to deny your party's association with Russian Communism; you even defend Russia in your letter."

In reply to the Communist leader's criticism of the proposal to limit use of the mails as an infringement of free speech, which was the very basis of democracy, Dr. Manion wrote: "So far as freedom of speech is concerned, if you had remained in Russia on one of your trips and become a Russian citizen and then dared to talk about the Russian government as you talk about government in general in Canada, the (Ogpu) secret police would have attended to you You would have quietly disappeared or been not so quietly shot.

No Freedom in Russian

"Indeed there is no freedom of speech in Russia under the Communist government, no freedom of the press, no freedom of religion, no freedom of assembly.

"It is for that reason that I stated I have no sympathy for a party which when it is in power gives no freedoms of any kind and yet in Canada demands freedom of speech, freedom of the mails and so forth. Yet I note in your letter not one word of condemnation of any of these Russian Communist actions."

Regarding Dr. Manion's assertion in the House that Communists believe in "bringing about Socialism by bullets," and in "forcing Socialism upon the people of Canada and the rest of the world," Mr. Buck declared both statements were not only false but that evidence of their falsity was readily available.

Buck's Answer

He himself would hesitate to define the aims of the Conservative party without authentic references to its statements of policy or speeches delivered by its leader, Buck said. For example, he would not use a statement he quoted by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett to the effect that "democracy in essence is government by those least fitted to govern," as a statement of party policy under Dr. Manion's leadership.

"The fact that Mr. McCullagh (George McCullagh, publisher of The Toronto Globe and Mail) commended Mr. Bennett for speaking so frankly as soon as he was free from the necessity of seeking votes did not prove that Mr. Bennett expressed your opinions or the viewpoint of your party," Buck added.

Constitution Cited

The Communist leader cited from the Communist party's constitution its declaration that it "rejects and repudiates any proposal to forcibly impose Socialism upon Canada against the will of the majority of her people. The Communist party repudiates and condemns all individuals and groups which seek to abrogate or subvert democracy."

That position had been clearly defined in the party's statement before the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, as well, he added.

Where Dr. Manion had suggested the basic doctrine of the Communists was suppression of free speech, Mr. Buck contended that those words "betray either failure to think out the inter-relation of obligations and freedom under democracy or, worse, a readiness to excuse anti-democratic measures by asserting that the victims do not deserve sympathy."

"We should be concerned, Dr. Manion, exactly because it is only by maintaining democracy that suppression of free speech will be prevented. If the freedom of speech of one law-abiding party or group or person is infringed, then democracy itself is infringed and each man's freedom of speech is endangered," Buck held.

The widespread propaganda that one of the Communist party's main activities was attacking the church and religion was false, he said. Many Catholics were included in the party of membership. A Christian who really tried to carry the philosophy of the brotherhood of man into the activities of his daily life had much in common with the Communist party.

He recognized the Communist philosophy was fundamentally different from the Catholic faith.

"On the question of the democratic rights of legal political parties in Canada, however, there should be no differences unless one of us desires to infringe upon or abrogate these democratic rights."

Buck suggested it was "significant" that the only publication which gave publicity to the speech of Mr. Lacroix was the avowedly Nazi "Deutsche Zeitung Fur Canada," published in Winnipeg.

Manion Refuses to Withdraw

Dr. Manion, in his reply, declined to withdraw anything he had said in the House of Commons. In support of his position, he referred to the encyclopaedia Brittannica's statement on Communism. One might judge of actual Communistic doctrines through the policies being applied in Russia, the only country with a Communist government, "where power was attained by the assassination of the whole Royal Family and has been maintained by recurrent purges, so called, which simply mean the killing off of those who oppose the man in power."

"In addition to these, the well-to-do peasants or farmers, Kulaks, so called, numbering about 3,000,000 were not only deprived of all they had but 'liquidated,' to use the polite phrase used in Russia, which means either killed or sent to slave labor camps because of the crime of having been successful farmers."

Dr. Manion did not question that Catholics and Protestants belonged to the Communist party but this was because that party "succeeded in hoodwinking them into thinking it is really a democratic party."

If the Communists were only a Socialist party, desiring to get into power only by ballot, it was strange they were not associated with the other Socialist party in Canada, the C.C.F., the Conservative leader continued.

He said he was not condemning the C.C.F. or Social Credit parties, because they desired to gain power by constitutional means, whereas the history of the Communists in Canada was that of trying to disrupt institutions and stir up trouble.

"Your statement that the Communist party welcomes the words of Cardinal Verdier when he urged the Catholics to 'safeguard before everything else the dignity and freedom of the human being', is rather extraordinary in view of the fact that the Communist party, like the Fascist party, treats the individual as of no importance and the state as all-important."

To the suggestion he had not found fault with Fascism, Dr. Manion pointed out that in his address in the Commons he had stated specificially that he was "not more sympathetic towards Fascism than I am towards Communism," although at the time he was discussing Communism.

"I am just as much against dictatorship if it is called Fascistic as I am against any other form of dictatorship. This is just an example of your Communist tactics—to accuse everyone who differs from you of being a Fascist.

"When the Communist party of Russia, which is your real headquarters, shows some consideration for freedom of speech, I might reconsider my ideas on the whole matter, but not until then."

OTTAWA ACTORS GIVEN AWARDS

Prairie Farmer Gives Best English Performance During Festival

By WILLIAM H. HOGG

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Ont., Apr. 17 (CP) — A happy group of Ottawa actors today had possession of the most coveted award in the Dominion Drama Festival—the Bessborough Trophy for the best presentation at the all-Canada competition.

Members of the Ottawa Drama League, they won it by their splendid teamwork in the gay comedy "French Without Tears", under inspiring direction of Dorothy White who has long presented successful plays in the capital.

Adjudicator Samuel R. Littlewood, Dean of London drama critics, made the award at the final curtain of the festival Saturday night. The Ottawa play, written by Terrence Mervy Rattigan, was the last of fourteen plays given in the week-long contest.

Production of Play in French.

Ottawa players of the Le Caveau Group also scored a triumph in the French section by presenting the outstanding play in French. This was "Martine", an exquisitely-told story of tragic love, and from its cast were chosen Florence Castonguay as the best actress in French and Albert Boucher as the best actor in French.

Western Canada was represented in the awards by the Winnipeg New Theatre, runner-up in the English section with their powerful leftist drama "Rehearsal". A middle-aged prairie farmer—Robert Haskins of Clive, Alta.—was picked by Mr. Littlewood as the man giving the best performance in English and Betty Taylor of Montreal took individual honors for women.

The best presentation of a play written by a Canadian went to the Sixteen-Thirty Club of the Church of the Messiah, Montreal. They gave under Herbert Whittaker's direction, a beautiful interpretation of Janet Alexandria McPhee's "Divinity in Montreal". This is Mrs. McPhee's first play.

Canadian Girl Wins.

These eight comprised Mr. Littlewood's awards, but it was announced Sunday the Festival Committee had awarded Gwendolyn Pharis of Calgary a cash prize of $100 for the best play, judged as a dramatic competition, written by a Canadian and presented at any of the regional competitions.

She wrote "Still Stands the House" which was presented by the Medicine Hat Little Theatre Association in the Alberta Festival at Edmonton.

Speaking of the festival generally, Mr. Littlewood expressed admiration "for the fine, the beautiful and the sincere and earnest things that have been done this week by Canadians from all over this great country."

Col. H. C. Osborne, festival chairman, announced Lady Tweedsmuir is donating a prize for the best acted comedy in next year's festival. Prime Minister Mackenzie King wired his congratulations and best wishes.

The Saturday matinee presentation was that of the Toronto Masquers, "in many ways the most ambitious effort of the week", in "The Silver Cord". The Sydney Howard classic of psychology was directed by E. G. Sterndale Bennett.

Oshawa Takes Memorial Cup Defeating Edmonton 4 to 2 in One of Best Games of Series

McAtee Brothers in the Hero Roles as Taylor Again Blanketed

COME FROM BEHIND

Terrific Pressure Finally Breaks Down Defence in Third Period

(By Sydney Gruson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—The Memorial Cup, Canada's prize to the best junior hockey team, came east today for the 10th time in its storied 21-year-old history. The winning of the cup was proof Oshawa Generals were far from a one-man club.

Generals, beaten in the finals last season by St. Boniface Seals, completed the overthrow of Edmonton Roamers before 11,000, fans last night with a 4-2 triumph that threw the McAtee brothers, Norm and Jud, into hero roles they hardly knew how to assume. It was Oshawa's third victory in four games.

Wilted Under Pace

Handcuffing Billy Taylor for the second successive game by keeping Elmer (The Shadow) Kreller on his tail, Roamers wilted under the pace of the McAtees who surged Generals from defeat by scoring three times in the last period. Jud smashed home the equalizer and Norm the winners.

For two full periods and nearly eight minutes of the third Roamers seemed the better team. George Agar had given them a lead in the first period and Johnny Chad did it again after Oshawa's Jimmy Drummond fired home a 20-footer while two Roamers were in the penalty box early in the second period. Checking fiendishly it appeared likely the westerners would repeat Saturday's 4-1 win.

Defence Breaks Down

But the terrific Oshawa pressure, applied from the start of the last period, finally broke down a defence that performed manfully in front of goalie Cliff Kilburn, as hot-headed as ever and as brilliant as he has been in Edmonton's only victory. When the guardsmen cracked to let Jud in with the tying goal there was no holding the Generals.

Sensing the kill, they attacked ceaselessly and for a good five minutes Roamers' offensive was at a standstill as they fought to hold off the attack. At 16.43 came the break, Norm flashing in to bat home a short rebound of Jud's shot. Less than a minute later, Norm stole the puck in the Roamer defence, skated in close and blasted a drive past Kilburn.

Taylor Tied Up

All this time Taylor, the General ace who scored nine of the 21 goals in the first two victories over Edmonton, had been tied together neatly by Kreller. It was Taylor who passed the puck to Drummond for the second-period tally but that wasn't Kreller's fault. With two mates off, Kreller had to change leaving Taylor alone in a corner for a moment.

Otherwise Billy the Kid was as helpless as he had been in the third game when Edmonton's strategists finally "sicced" Kreller on him. The McAtees picked up where Taylor left off and there was nothing stopping them as they reached the heights.

True Champions

Fighting from behind like true champions, Generals never appeared to have lost hope of overcoming the westerners and as goalie Dinny McManus put it for the team in the dressing room after the game, "I knew were were the better club and that we had more power. When we got the tying goal I was sure it was all over for Roamers."

McManus was right, Jud's tying goal took the heart out of the western champions and they couldn't get a proper offensive under way again. Agar tried hard but the Edmonton sparkplug was tired and the Generals were rushing too hard for him.

Roamers, who started the series looking helpless before the easterners and finished fighting hard and almost evenly, hadn't an alibi.

"We haven't an alibi, excuse or anything," said coach Lefty Grove of Roamers. "They beat us but we'll be back to beat them next year."

President Calder of N. H. L. Has no Thought of Retiring

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—Having completed the Stanley Cup finals without a sour note, the National Hockey League will turn now to problems of the future—and the first one to be tackled concerns the league's unbalanced seven-team set-up.

Boston Bruins' triumph in the cup series was accompanied by none of the bickering and bitter action that marked some other playoffs. The Bruins, best team in the league during the schedule, won the world title according to form. That silenced a good many critics of the playoff system, who were pretty noisy last year when Chicago's lowly Black Hawks struggled to the trophy.

But the peaceful course of the series may have been only a lull before the storm. It is a fact that the departure of Montreal Maroons from the N.H.L. scene after last season has increased travelling expenses for the seven remaining clubs and has generally confused the schedule.

Several Places Named

To round out the league, several places have been suggested as likely entries. Cleveland has been discussed most frequently and Washington and Philadelphia have come in for mention. There has been talk of giving Montreal a second team again, but most observers feel the Canadiens should be allowed to play to the Montreal patronage alone for a while.

Cleveland, if given a first-class team, probably could make a go of big-league hockey. But Cleveland already has a minor-league entry that is making money hand over foot, and owner Al Stuphin has often expressed himself as satisfied with an International-American League club so long as the customers keep coming.

Philadelphia has had one costly N.H.L. experiment. The Int-Am team is doing well enough there and so far no one has even hinted he would like to back a Philadelphia entry to the major circuit.

Probably go to Capital

Washington, which took professional football to its heart in no time, may some day be an N.H.L. city. The Capital has just gained entry to the Eastern United States Amateur League, however, and it is felt a couple of years will be needed to educate the people to hockey before a plunge can be considered.

So there seems to be nothing definite for the league governors to work on when they discuss the situation at their annual meeting next month. Some scrambling will be done in the meantime to try to bring the league back to eight-team strength.

The usual rumors of the retirement of President Calder are heard, but the President has said nothing to those close to him. Manager Art Ross of the champion Bruins, who has announced his retirement as bench director of the Boston club, is in line for Calder's job, when the President does retire.

Brown Bomber Disposes of Roper in Less Than 3 Mins. Of First Round at Los Angeles

25,000 Fans Given Thrill as Louis Topples Roper with Famed Left

CHAMPION STUNG

Roper Tried to Make a Fight of it but Was No Match

Los Angeles, April 18 (AP)—Joe Louis began packing up his belongings today to head east for his next odd job of defending the world's heavyweight championship.

Louis disposed of his California assignment last night in two minutes and 20 seconds by the clock, leaving a game but battered Jack Roper knocked out in his own corner.

Twenty-five thousand fans, eager for a thrill, got it in short, dynamite doses. Roper, fulfilling a promise to trade punches with the deadly punching Louis, landed three vicious hooks to the head with his famed left. They weren't enough.

Louis, jolted by the first and stung by the other two, moved in for the kill. He got it, with a right smash to the head, followed by a left.

There were other blows before. Roper pawed desperately for another chance to drop his punch on the Louis jaw. Louis straightened the old warrior up with a left uppercut. It started him out. The two finishers completed the job, a clean knockout.

Battered to Canvas

Battered to the canvas, Roper was trying to climb up the ropes before the end of the 10-count. He didn't make it and pitched over on his face after it had been completed.

Louis readily praised Roper's punching, and said he believed he would have less trouble with Tony Galento in New York this summer. Roper, he added, threw a left "that I sure felt," and that was more than Max Schmeling or John Henry Lewis did.

"Don't let anybody fool you," said Roper, afterwards. "That Louis hits like a load of dynamite."

Roper, a battle scarred veteran whose crack at the title came at the age of 36, was beaten around the head, but laughed it off. He's been beaten around the head many times before. Louis weighed 201 1-4, Roper 204 3-4.

CINCINNATI REDS LOSE 8TH OPENER IN ROW TO BUCS

Pittsburgh Comes from Behind to Score 7-5 Win

MYERS INJURED

Official Opening at Washington is Rained Out

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, April 18 (AP)—Please, Mr. Weatherman, let's get this 100th anniversary baseball season started today.

More than 200,000 cash customers, and millions who can't get away with that old "my-Grandma-is-sick" excuse, will thank you for it to end. And 16 big league managers will be much obliged.

We all know you're threatening everything from showers to snow for this afternoon's opening day parties in eight big league cities, but since you held off long enough to let Cincinnati lift the lid yesterday, why not give us a break all around now?

Incidentally, we suppose you noticed that even the pale sun peeking through the clouds yesterday couldn't change a thing for the Reds. They lost their eight opener in a row with 30,644 fans on hand. They started off pretty well, what with Buck McCormick banging the year's first homer, but after Pittsburgh Pirates got through clubbing Bucky Walters and Peaches Davis for four runs in the eighth—well, the Bucs took it, 7-5. Shortstop Billy Myers of the Reds went to a hospital after a throw by Bill Brubaker knocked him cold, but he wasn't seriously hurt.

President Roosevelt was all set to do his annual stuff with the first pitch at Washington and get the world champion New York Yankees and the Senators under way in the other half of the scheduled opening day program. Wet grounds forced a postponement.

As a result, the Yanks were at home in Yankee Stadium against Boston Red Sox today, the Senators were in Philadelphia against the Athletics.

Oshawa Fans Celebrate Victory

Oshawa, Ont., April 18 (CP)—An estimated crowd of 15,000 sang, danced and built bonfires in the streets of this hockey-mad city early today after their pets, Oshawa Generals, won the Canadian Junior Hockey Championship and the Memorial Cup in Toronto last night. The win brought Oshawa its first Dominion hockey title.

One policeman—they called out the reserves to preserve order—said the city had not gone so "completely nuts" since the Armistice 21 years ago.

PETES ADMITTED TO TORONTO LOOP OF SEVEN TEAMS

Peterborough to Guarantee Travelling Expenses of All Teams

NAME COMMITTEE

Four Top Teams Will Play Round Robin for Title

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—Firm believers that strength lies in unity, Toronto and District Senior Baseball last night completed an alliance with Peterborough, lone survivors of the Central Ontario League, whereby the Petes will join a seven team circuit to be known as the Intercity Senior Baseball League.

Adoption of an 84 game schedule and electing of a committee to dictate the policy of the new organization were but some of the highlights of a happy meeting held here. From this gathering order was more or less restored to a chaotic amateur baseball situation which had everything connected with the dimaond sport silently contemplating the death knell of senior ball.

Danforth Aces, Webbers, Columbus Grads, Findlays and Parkdale Derby's of Toronto are thus arrayed as rivals with Port Credit, sole remaining team in the now non-existent Lakeshore League and Peterborough. The season opener will be held on Saturday, May 13, it was tentatively decided.

Committee Named

A committee consisting of four league presidents, Harvey Brown of West Toronto, Bill Hunt of the Western City, Charles Doughty of Viaduct and R. Kitchen of Peterborough will arbitrate any disputes which may arise. Chairman will be Mike Cochrane of Toronto, President of the Toronto Baseball Association. Each league maintains its own identity with respect to its executive officers, it was decided.

Playoff arrangements found the delegates in agreement that the first four teams play off in a round robin series. Peterborough, by entry to this new league automatically foregoes any bye into the Ontario playdowns they might receive as members of the Central Ontario League. Playoffs within the Intercity League will be under the supervision of the Toronto Baseball Association.

The schedule of the new loop will be drafted to allow for as many Saturday and holiday games in Peterborough as possible. The Eastern Ontario team will guarantee the expenses of Toronto and Port Credit teams to Peterborough. It is planned to play Tuesday and Thursday twilight games on Toronto sandlots.

KING SHINES IN 3-1 WIN SCORED BY PORT ARTHUR

Bear Cats Defeat Royals for Second Time in Senior Finals

PENALTY TURNS TIDE

Winners Score Two Goals When Royals Served Penalty

(By Douglas Amaron Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Montreal, April 18 (CP)—Montreal hockey fans are just about convinced that Port Arthur Bear Cats have what it takes to make a championship team.

When Bear Cats defeated Montreal Royals 6-5 in the opener of the Allan Cup final last week speed and stickhandling skill were the outstanding attributes in the victory. When they trounced the eastern Canada amateur hockey champions 3-1 last night they showed they were as good defensively as they are up front.

Bear Cats struck infrequently but with deadliness to score their second straight victory in the best-of-five series. Forced to come from behind after little Pete Morin gave the Montrealers the lead early in the game, the westerners turned a Royal penalty late in the opening session to good advantage and two quick goals by Stan King wafted them to victory.

Too Few Chances

Once in front, Bear Cats took few chances, content to force Royals to wear themselves out against close back-checking and a tight defence. Bob Manahan brought them their final goal in the second period.

Third game of the series will be played Thursday. Trail Smoke Eaters won the cup last season.

On last night's showing, Bear Cats are heavy favorites to make it three straight although Royals count on return of Buddy O'Connor, dynamic little centreman, to bring back the fire that carried them to the eastern title.

For 8 minutes last night Royals looked as though they might even the series. Morin, who tallied three times in the first game, slipped through the defence in the second minute of play and shot them into the lead on a smart goal.

Penalty Turns Tide

That advantage stood until less than two minutes from the end of the period and it took a penalty to defenceman Bert Janke to erase it and turn the tide towards Bear Cats.

Gaining momentum as the period progressed, Port Arthur swept in on the Montreal defence and Janke had to trip Edgar LaPrade to prevent a score.

With a man advantage Bear Cats swooped in on little Patsy Seguin and within 30 seconds King twice drove the puck behind the Royal goalie. Bert LaPrade set up the play for the first goal and McArthur for the second.

Goalie Well Protected

Up to that point the Montrealers had carried most of the play and to the 1,500 fans looked good enough to win. It was a different matter however when the teams came out for the second session.

Time and again Royals sent four and five men up the ice in an attempt to even the score and on each occasion met up with a solid five man defence that gave goalie Jakie Nash perfect protection. The little goalie with the red cap stopped the few shots that did filter through.

Late in the period one of the frequent Bear Cat breakaways clicked when Hugh O'Leary sped up centre and passed ahead to Manahan who scooped the puck past Seguin.

Outstanding Players Join Fergus Thistles

Fergus, Ont., April 18 (CP)—Two of Ontario's outstanding lacrosse players will line-up with Fergus Thistles thi sseason, Jack Walkey, President of the club announced last night. They are Bill Brunskill, of Orillia Terriers and Toronto Marlboros, and Yorkey Jordan, Orillia and Brantford wingman.

Singing of the two players is another step in the building by the Thistles of a strong threat for the Mann Cup. Jordan, an exceptionally shifty player and one of the best wingmen in the game, played part of last season with the Fergus team. Brunskill, 23-year-old centreman possesses one of the hardest shots in Canada today. He has been leading scorer in Ontario lacrosse association schedules for the past three years.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

The Picton and Napanee clubs of the Bay of Quinte League must have enjoyed a great laugh upon reading yesterday's news dispatch from Ottawa revealing the Kingston 'Locos' had applied for affiliation in the St. Lawrence League of the E.O.B.A., especially after the Kingston delegation had refused a senior "B" rating in the O.B.A. last week. Ollie Olsen and Tommy Boyd, spokesmen for the 'Locos', held they were not strong enough to accept a higher rating than the other Quinte clubs, which are recognized as intermediate clubs, but now the 'Locos' admit their strength in fact they sought a berth in the senior section of the E.O.B.A. in the St. Lawrence loop. From what information we can obtain, the Bay of Quinte League clubs do not desire to freeze the Kingston 'Locos' out of O.B.A. competition, but such small centres as Picton and Napanee feel the 'Locos' are too strong for their respective competition and merely asked Kingston to accept a higher classification and they would be included in the Quinte loop schedule.

If the 'Locos' feel they are sufficiently strong to compete against Perth, Smith's Falls or Ottawa, all of which are recognized strong senior clubs, they openly admitted they were strong enough to play senior baseball in the O.B.A. The old feud between the E.O.B.A. and the O.B.A. has been breached and each recognize the jurisdiction and authority of the other. The executive of these two powerful baseball associations are at present endeavouring to formulate plans whereby the winners of each association, in the senior series, will meet in an all-Ontario baseball championship next fall. Now that the Kingston moguls have admitted their strength no doubt some future solution will be forthcoming, which will be acceptable to all parties concerned, however. In the meantime, however, what about some little action in Belleville regarding baseball?

Out in Peterboro the ball players are taking an active executive interest in their baseball this year, "Big Russ" Kitchen having been recently elected president of the Petes. Kitchen, it will be remembered, has been one of the Liftlock City's outstanding moundsmen of recent years. Other players in Peterboro were elected to executive offices and are taking an interest in the workings of the club. If the ball players in Belleville desire to play the diamond game in the Bay of Quinte League in 1939 they will have to put their shoulders to the baseball wheel and do likewise, namely accept executive positions and assist in the organization of the local club. There are men in Belleville who are willing to assist in the fielding of a baseball team in this city, but they do not feel they should be burdened with all of the club's responsibilities and efforts when the players themselves show indifference. The challenge has been thrown out to the players now it's their move next; or else.

Inclement weather conditions resulted in the postponement of yesterday's White Sox-Cub game scheduled as a benefit for Monty Stratton, Pale Hose moundsman who lost his right leg as the result of a hunting accident last fall. The game will be played on May 1st and already over $10,000.00 worth of tickets have been sold.

Class will tell—after trailing for over two periods, the Oshawa Generals snapped out of what appeared to be a hockey trance and rapped home three counters in a third period rally to win the Memorial Cup. Congratulations are the order of the day to the Oshawa juniors, worthy Dominion junior champions. Escorted by the management, the Belleville "Hi-Speeds" took in the game last night and after viewing the Oshawa rally, Leo Goyer piped up with this comment—"Boys that's just where you'll see us in 1941"; while "Stub" Ethier added —"They're hot tonight, but in two years we'll be sizzling." Incidentally the three boys from the O.S.D. refused to verbally comment on the game. The "Hi-Speeds" thoroughly enjoyed the game and each member agreed he had learned something from the play. "That's the kind of hockey we expect from you boys within the next two years," Coach Toots Holway warned the lads. Previously in the season the kids had been afforded a gander at an N.H.L. game.

Western Canada seems almost assured of retaining the Allan Cup the Port Arthur Bear Cats again beating the Montreal Royals last night 3-1, thus giving the "Cats" a two game advantage over the Royals in as many games played. However, one cannot but feel it was the Goodyears and perhaps not the Bear Cats who pushed the Royals out of the Allan Cup honors. That Goodie-Royal series was too strenuous for any club to come out and remain at potential championship strength. However, Port Arthur has eliminated some good teams and will be worthy titlists.

Did You Know—When Cincinnati lost yesterday to the Pirates, it marked the seventh consecutive opening game the Reds have dropped, the Pirates won 7-5 by virtue of a four run splurge in the eighth, 30,644 witnessed the game that was the only pre-opener to be staged.....Weather permitting all 16 teams swing into action today.....A few of the faithful fight fans stayed up to hear last night's Louis-Roper fight broadcast, but as was expected the fiasco did not last long, Louis hit Roper and Roper hit the canvas at the two minute mark.....Walter Young, Verdun policeman, is favored to win the Boston marathon tomorrow .... Remember Lefty Goldsmith of the Southampton 'Fishermen'?.. Lefty popped up in Sarnia the other day and will hurl for the tunnel town nine....Bill Cowley of the Bruins was the leading scorer in the Stanley Cup series.

"And dangerous," interjected Attorney General Gordon Conant.

At adjournment, Mr. Conant said the word "dangerous" had been rather loosely used. What he meant was that the building was not fireproof.

"It was called perilous in one report," said Mr. McAllister.

"But it's no different from a great number of other buildings in Ontario, used for similar and various purposes," said Mr. Conant.

"When I said it was obsolete I meant it wasn't a fireproof building," said Mr. McAllister.

Ian Strachan (Lib., Toronto-St. Georges) and Alex Elliot (Lib., Peterborough) will be government counsel for the inquiry demanded by Conservative leader George Drew.

Dr. McGhie Testifies.

First witness was Dr. B. T. McGhie, Deputy Health Minister. He told Col. Drew that Dr. W. D. Smith was appointed superintendent of the Ontario Hospital at St. Thomas on March 15 last.

From Dec. 8, 1937, he was "assistant physician" in the department at $3,600 a year. His present salary is $5,400.

At the time Dr. Smith was assigned to Whitby Hospital in December 1937, it was clearly understood he might ultimately become superintendent at St. Thomas. It was Dr. Smith's first experience in hospital administration.

Dr. McGhie accepted responsibility for the purchases of technical and therapeutic equipment for the St. Thomas Hospital. The deputy was aware of "political evils", in administration of mental hospitals in some states. In some cases superintendents change with each administration.

Mr. Strachan said the committee shouldn't embark on a study of the treatment of mental diseases, as Col. Drew was apparently seeking to do.

Appointments.

Chairman Cooper said the wisdom of appointments was not a matter for the committee. Its job was to go into accounts but he would not order Drew to drop questioning concerning qualifications for mental hospital directors.

Admissions to the St. Thomas Hospital were going on at the rate of sixteen a day, said Dr. McGhie. The power house and eight hospital unit buildings has been taken over by the Health Department from the Department of Public Works.

It was desirable that appointments to the St. Thomas medical staff should be of men skilled in the treatment of curative cases, agreed Dr. McGhie, administration there needed a high degree of skill.

The bursar at St. Thomas, P. McIntyre, had been appointed to Woodstock Hospital with the expectation he would get the St. Thomas post, said Dr. McGhie. He was at Woodstock less than a year.

Research With U.S.

Much reliance was placed by Ontario on research with United States and research here was largely financed by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Answering Mr. Strachan, witness said there were three medical men in the health department devoting their time to mental diseases. They were expected to keep abreast of developments.

There was a difference of opinion as to whether mental hospital superintendents should be psychiatrists or administrators, Dr. McGhie agreed.

BRITAIN PLANS

branches of commerce worked with food defence officials in elaborating the plans.

The scheme provides for creation of 1,400 local food provisioning committees, the personnel of which has been selected. All documents required for their work, including 19,000,000 food request blanks and 60,000,000 ration cards, have been prepared by government printing presses.

Stringent Control

The plan provides stringent government control over the purchase of necessary foodstuffs from foreign countries and domestic producers. Authority to purchase and transport foodstuffs will be concentrated in government hands to eliminate competition and speculation among purchasers and to avoid risks, losses, damage and delay in shipment.

Existing import firms would handle wartime purchases from abroad in the capacity of government agents. Import committees would be established in each port zone in order to speed up control, unloading, storage and distribution of food.

The scheme, which has been under preparation for three years and which is modelled on the experience of the closing years of the great war was said to be advanced to the stage where the pushing of a button or the dispatch of a telegram could set it in motion all over the country.

The flow of supplies, regulated by the government, is expected to eliminate any necessity of forming queues at food supply centres.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE HIGGINS FAMILY"

The current trend in pictures would indicate that a new suburb has grown up in fabulous Hollywood—a suburb populated by those cinema "families" who are winning increased favor with audiences. There is the Jones family, of course, and Judge Hardy and his brood.

And now— the Gleasons.

The novelty about this latest screen household is that they are a family off screen as well as on. Jimmy and Lucille have been happily married 34 years, and their only son, Russell, has added to the family acting laurels. Republic Pictures have brought all three together for the first time in "The Higgins Family" which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Jimmy's admirers will rave over his top-flight comedy performance as Joe Higgins, the hen-pecked advertising man, whose flighty wife, Lillian, gets him in dutch constantly with his boss, the clients and the world at large. Lillian — played by Lucile Gleason, of course —is ideally cast as the wife, and husbands on the verge of divorcing their spouses will take them back willingly after watching the nitwit behavior of Joe Higgins' ever-loving spouse.

Russell Gleason, cast as the son, Sid, turns in an excellent performance augmented by outstanding work on the part of Lynn Roberts, Republic ingenue, who has a promising screen future ahead of her.

An able supporting cast includes Billy Bakewell, Harry Davenport, Paul Harvey, Wallis Clark, Sally Payne and Doreen McKay.

"The Higgins Family" is a madcap comedy, made to satisfy every member of every family from 6 to sixty and the McCarthy Theatre takes pride in presenting it to Belleville and vicinity theatre-goers, so come and enjoy a laugh-a-minute picture, right out of the old family album.

"Racing Lady"

On the same program with "The Higgins Family" a companion feature that everyone will thoroughly enjoy is presented, it is Damon Runyon's thrilling story of the paddock "Racing Lady" — the story of a girl who knew horseflesh and who thought she knew men, it is filled with excitement and thrills—flashing silks—pounding hoofs and romance that reaches a new high in entertainment. Lovely Ann Dvorak is costarred with handsome Smith Ballew and their performances are each outstanding. Others of note include Harry Carey, Burton Churchill, Willie Best, Frank M. Thomas and Ray Mayer.

"The Higgins Family" and "Racing Lady" bring to the McCarthy Theatre another swell show, to follow "Topper Takes A Trip" and "Stagecoach."

AT THE BELLE

"Huckleberry Finn"

Huckleberry Finn, boy roamer of the Mississippi, goes through his amazing adventures, read by millions in Mark Twain's sequel to "Tom Sawyer", in the person of Mickey Rooney, in his first solo starring vehicle, now showing at the Belle Theatre.

An elaborate production was provided for "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn", much of it filmed on the Sacramento River, which serves for the Mississippi in the picture. Richard Thorpe, who directed "The Crowd Roars", guided the production with a deft touch. Mickey is Huck Finn to the life. His character might have stepped direct from the pages of the book, which the picture follows with fidelity.

His attempts to aid a runaway slave to freedom; his adventures with the "King" and "Duke" a pair of comical swindlers; the negro's sacrifice of his own freedom to save the boy's life; and the mad dash by steamer down river to save the slave from a mob of lynchers, are among the dramatic highlights and the absurd "Romeo and Juliet" performance with Mickey as Juliet and Walter Connolly as Romeo, is the comedy high.

Connolly and William Frawley are the two swindlers of the story. Jim, the slave, is compellingly played by Rex Ingram, noted negro actor who played "De Lawd" in Green Pastures." The heiresses whom Mickey saves from the swindlers are enacted by Lynn Carver and Jo Ann Sayers. Minor Watson plays Captain Brandy, the slave running steamer captain and Elizabeth Risdon, Victor Kilian and Clara Blandick lend excellent supporting characterizations to the heart-warming story.

"Wanted No Master", a clever novelette in color, The Popular Belle Newsreel, and "Cairo" a refreshing color traveltalk will be presented on the same program.

"IDIOT'S DELIGHT"

Norma Shearer and Clark Gable, supported by a group of notable players, co-star in the screen version of Robert Sherwood's Pulitzer, prize-winning stage play, "Idiot's Delight," which comes next to the Belle Theatre.
